To Live With Love

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

CHAPTER 25

Bill said, "Yes, I know."

Every person has his own way of driving a car. She knew how fast, but how well Bill drove. He had a habit of testing the emergency brake several times before he was satisfied it was released.

"I had a job in New York," he said. "Fair job. But Tom sent for me. Believe me, I was glad enough to get out of New York. The worst existence I can think of is working there and living in a hotel and not knowing a soul. It was awful."

"I know your mother was glad to see you."

He gave a low chuckle of affirmation.

They rode in silence, and the tenseness which Freda and Ian had tried desperately to avoid lay excitingly between them.

Finally Bill said, "I don't suppose you've seen the evening paper."

"No, I haven't. Young Ian took it away for the comics." She turned her head a little and looked at him. But she couldn't bear it. It hurt She wanted to move closer to him and put her arm through his as she had done in the past and say, "Open the windshield, Bill. I like the wind to tear through my hair. It makes me feel young and crazy."

He said, "The divorce went through. There was a small notice about it in the paper tonight. It's—it's all over."

After a moment she said "If you're glad, then I'm glad for you."

"If I'm glad!"

The Brentwood Arms rose tall and forbidding before them. A dim light burned in the spacious lobby. As Bill slowly brought the car to the curb, a doorman sprang to attention.

Bill got out and opened the car door for her (a courtesy he had neglected in later years) and together they walked inside to the elevator.

"There's no operator on at this time of night," she said. "But I can see myself up. Thank you for bringing me home."

"Oh, that's all right. It was nothing."

The elevator came down and she entered it...closing him out.

When the elevator stopped, she stepped off and walked quietly down the long hall to her apartment door. Opening her white purse for her key, she drew out an envelope. She had intended to mail this earlier in the day! It must be mailed! It must be mailed at once! The message must reach Clive without delay.

Written with great difficulty last night, re-read this morning, addressed, sealed and stamped, the letter to Clive had been in her purse all day and all day its contents had been running through her mind.

She returned quickly to the elevator and went down and through the lobby to the street.

The doorman said, seeing the letter, "I'll mail it for you, Mrs. Sturtevant."

"Thank you, but I'll do it. The box isn't far."

The street was dark and deserted. As she walked to the mail box on the corner, she went over in her mind once more what she had written to Clive last night:

Clive, dear,

I received your last letter in which you asked for a postponement of our marriage. In the Autumn and not before, you said, could you get away.

Clive, we have heard so much recently about "Our way of life." The American way, they mean, of course. But I've been thinking lately a good bit about your way of life and mine, our individual ways. What we had in Florida was good and lovely and wonderful. I shall never regret it and I shall always remember it as the most exciting thing that ever happened to me and thank you with all my heart for it.

It was an oasis for me ,as you must surely know. And I loved you...I loved you in a way new and exciting for me and as I had never loved anyone before because I have learned that young love and nature love are two very different things, each unforgettable in its time.

Dear, I am not afraid of staring the hardships of your intinerant life. My own life was very simple indeed until a few years ago. I am not afraid of change or new people or new surroundings. I am not afraid of having less, materially, than I hve now. But wht I am afraid of is that we had only a beautiful romance. We were wnoderful playmates, Clive, but I do not believe you ever intended for me to be other than that to you.

I do not believe that you really want to marry anybody—yet. Marriage demands so much of the uersonal freedom you cherish. In Florida you did want to marry me, but that was Florid, you are thinking now, and we were new in the discovery of each other and we could not let each other go with a tender good-bye.

We did not want to relinquish what we had found, and foolishly we believed that the glow would last in other more real places. But we were only wishing, foolishly, too, that life was different and human beings less imperfect than they really are.

Can I censure you because I read in your letter a straining at the bond we made? They have been sweet letters, but I have read in them undercurrents of restlessness and a desire not to belong to anyone but yourself. Will you censure me and hate me because I say now in all honesty that I don't want to marry you and that I think it would be a pitiful mistake for us to carry on what was for you and me only a lovely interlude

We cannot prolong a beautiful sunset. The colors fade and the darkness comes. But does the darkness make the sunset less beautiful in memory? We cannot prolong the story of us, Clive, however we may wish that life and we were different...

You will say, "She is still in love with Bill." Have I ever denied it? I am. I am. His is the only way of life I have known since I was eighteen. And he is the only husband I shall ever have.

You who have so much understanding of women, try to understand this one and forgive her ...for writing the letter you could not write for fear of hurting me...

Carol opened the slot and the letter slid in. The slot closed with a squeak. She bit into her lip, thinking, "I wrote it when I didn't know that Bill was free. I wrote it when I didn't know where he was or if Evelyn's levaing him had hurt him so that he had run away. But now he's back and the way he said, 'Am I glad!' told me he wasn't hurt at all...Evelyn for Bill, and Clive for me. But for Clive and me it's better because we have nothing to regret and we can keep our memories sweet...I had to know Clive before I could understand what happened to Bill. Perhaps I couldn't forgive Bill if I hadn't known Clive."

Living solves the enigmas of life. Living writes the answers to the questions.

Pushing back her hair which a sudden wind had blown across her face, she walked a few steps and then stood very still...

Bill's car was parked across the street and Bill was standing beside it, looking t her. He had not gone. He had watched her come out of the building and mail a letter and stand a few minutes at the mail box...He had not gone...After he left her he had driven around the block and parked his car opposite the apartment house in the hope of seeing the lights go on in her apartment...Just to see the lights go on...

She smiled. It was as though she held out her arms to him...so quickly did he come to her.

WILL PLACE BUSTS OF BEATTY AND JELLICOE IN ABBEY

London, April 24 (Reuters)—Bronze busts of two more British naval heroes will join the statue of Nelson in his lordly survey of famous Trafalgar Square. Work of placing the likenesses of Lord Beatty and Lord Jellicoe, heroes of the Battle of Jutland in the First World War, is hoped to be completed by Trafalgar Day, Oct. 31.

CAUGHT WHALE INSTEAD OF PERCH

Yokima, Wash., April 24 —(AP) — A. H. Settlemeyer says he caught a whale while fishing for perch.

Settlemeyer, fishing in the Pacific Ocean, said he threw a casting net at the whale to scare it away, but the net settled over the whale and the mammal swam into a rock and was stunned. With assistance, he finally beached a 7-foot 750-pounder.

MINISTER ORDAINED

Owen Sound, April 24 —(CP)—Earl F. Smith of Owen Sound, who is to replace Rev. Perry Rockwood as minister of the Presbyterian Church at Truro, N.S., was ordained here last night.

Announcement of the appointment came at a presbytery meeting at nearby Southampton earlier this month. Mr. Rockwood resigned from the Truro church after an accusation he followed a "divisive" course in his preaching.

LOOT IS FEW DOLLARS CHANGE

St. Catharines, Ont., April 24—(CP)—A few dollars in change was the loot of burglars who last night forced their way into the ticket office of the Canadian National Railways. The office of the McIntee Coal Company next door was also entered.

VEGETABLE - ANIMAL

The sponge was once believed to be a combination of both plant and animal.

Pepper and Wallace Jeopardize Their Fortunes by Display of Faith In Moscow's Communist Govt.

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, April 25 — (CP)— Two once-powerful political figures on the American scene are placing their fortunes in jeopardy by an amazing display of faith in Moscow's Communist government as compared with the governing system in their own country.

They are Henry A. Wallace, former vice-president and Senator Claude Pepper (Dem.-Fla.).

Wallace, now on a tour of Europe, is attracting an angry outburst of rage on Capitol Hill and throughout the country generally by his speeches attacking the Truman policy of intervention in Greece.

Senator Pepper, ever since his call on Premier Stalin two years ago, has found little to criticize in the Soviet Union but much to criticize in American policy toward Russia.

What Wallace has been saying abroad is no more serious than what he has said at home. He was ousted from the post of Commerce secretary last summer because of his criticism of the administration's foreign policy. After that nobody seemed to care much what he said.

Truman Wisely Silent

But when in Britain he so bitterly attacked the Truman administration, and to the advantage of Russia, there were loud and angry demands in top level Congressional circles for all kinds of dire action.

President Truman, whose stock continues to soar, wisely said nothing. He refused to throw the martyr's mantle over Wallace's narrow shoulders.

Pepper's Following Drops

Senator Pepper, who until two years ago always spoke with a voice of authority, has lost much of his following. A few days ago he spoke in the Senate for a whole afternoon on the Truman plan for Greece and Turkey, which he approved in a measure but condemned for its method.

The publicity his speech received had to do with the fact that he was less pro-Russian than usual. But for much of the long address Senator Pepper spoke to an almost empty chamber.

Moscow's "Kiss of Death"

Time was when a Pepper speech would fill the chamber. And there was a time when Henry Wallace seemed a sure thing for presidential nomination in due course.

It would seem that the friendship for Russia that takes the form of blindness to every possible fault of the Moscow government and criticism of every American act that is not in line with Moscow's desires, when it hits a prominent figure, is a sort of "kiss of death."

TAX PAYERS

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE

The last day for payment of the First Instalment of 1947 Taxes, without penalty being imposed, will be Saturday, May 3rd., 1947.

Payment between now and that date will be greatly appreciated and no doubt would avoid unnecessary delay by not waiting until the last day.

Thanks for past co-operation on your part in this respect.

Four-day Storm Is Subsiding

London, April 25 (AP)—Salvage men waited for calmer seas today before boarding the veteran battleship Warspite, wrecked on a rock off the Cornish coast Wednesday during a storm.

There was some doubt whether the retired Man O' War ever could be refloated or even completely salvaged while resting on the ledge. The 31,000-ton ship, survivor of two wars, ran aground while being towed to a salvage yard for wrecking.

The four-day storm subsided considerably during the night after killing at least 62 seamen in other shipwrecks. The Warspite's salvage crew of eight was saved.

Britain began raising a fund today for the families of lifeboat men who perished Wednesday night in a vain attempt to rescue 40 men on the British tanker Samtampa, which ran aground Wednesday off Prthcawl, Wales. Early contributions totalled $6,000.

Kindly Judge Asks Bailiff Not to Look

Los Angeles, April 25 —(AP) —Dianna Louise Bushaw, four, and her three-year-old brother, Rickie Clinton Bushaw, sat in court while their grandmother, Mrs. Catherine Bushaw, successfully petitioned for their custody.

The grandmother said the parents left them with her three years ago.

Judge Newcomb Condee heard a suspicious noise from a box held by the children.

"I'm afraid there is a dog here against court rules," he said, "but I instruct the bailiff not to look that way."

Trapper, in Spite of Broken Leg, Manages to Live Winter in Bush

Sault Ste. Marie, April 25 — (CP)— There's material for Hollywood scenario writers—just the stuff they like to work on—in a story that's come out of Algoma's bushland, long the hotbed of yarns attesting to the hardiness of its trappers and woodsmen.

Cast in the starring role would be Alex Krezek, 50-year-old veteran trapper, who finally has returned to his home here after five months of winter in the rugged Gargantua bushland of Northern Ontario with a broken leg—which mended successfully under his own treatment, 125 miles northwest of here.

That's only part of the story. What Hollywood would relish is Krezek's demonstration of patience, physical stamina and the ingenuity of mind which pulled him through—how, in spite of a broken leg, he managed to get about to replenish diminishing supplies of fuel and provisions, even to killing a moose.

It was on Dec. 19 that a boat motor fell on his left leg, breaking it above the ankle. Somehow he managed to crawl to his isolated cabin, there to set the bone himself and bind it in splints.

Luckily he had some morphine tablets which eased the pain but there followed many days — he doesn't remember how many — during which he moved only to "rustle up" enough food to keep alive.

"I had two weeks' supply of wood, plenty of potatoes and vegetables, but only enough meat for two weeks," said Krezek, who despite his grey hair looks much younger than his years. "When the wood was used up I had to get out and cut more."

This was a job which really taxed his resources and endurance. He had made himself a pair of crutches but his worry was to get about on them in deep snow where he knew they'd sink. Still he wasn't stumped for long. Looking out the window one day he saw two five-gallon cans, and in his alert mind he soon saw them attached to the ends of his crutches to be used after the fashion of snowshoes.

FOOTBALL STORM IS BLOWING UP IN THE CAPITAL

Clubs Are Fighting With Park Management Over Rental of Grounds

Ottawa, April 25 — (CP) — A football storm was blowing up in gridiron-conscious Ottawa today as the city's two clubs intimated they might drop from the Big Four and Ontario Rugby Union scenes or go elsewhere in the face of a Central Canada Exhibition Association demand for 10 per cent of the gates next fall for the use of Lansdowne Park.

It was hinted that Ottawa Rough Riders might play their home games in Montreal.

The C.C.E.A. demand for ten per cent or a minimum of $300 a game, brought from Dave Sprague, director of Ottawa Trojans of the O.R.F.U. circuit, the statement that Ottawa might wind up without a football team this season.

J. P. McCaffrey , manager of Rough Riders of the Big Four League, said he thought 10 per cent was too much. Even if Lansdowne Park was Ottawa's only field with suitable seating capacity. Rough Riders had offered a flat $500 a game.

59-MILL TAX RATE

Final Success Seen by Bevin And Marshall

Leaders Optimistic Though They Leave Without Treaties

Washington, April 26—(AP)—State Secretary Marshall returned from Moscow at 10:40 a.m. EST today and was greeted by President Truman and several thousand spectators at National Airport.

Berlin, April 26 (AP) — State Secretary Marshall left Britain Friday for Washington to report to the American people on the Moscow conference after discussing with Gen. Lucius D. Cley possible effects of the four-power meeting on the German occupation.

He reiterated to reporters here his disappointment over failure of the ministers to "get more agreement on fundamental issues," and write an Austrian treaty, but added:

"I do not think the difference of opinion between Russia and the western allies was increased at Moscow. It was clarified. We came to a clear understanding of what were the disagreements."

Talk With Clay

Marshall stopped for two hours in Berlin, and in that time had a long talk with Cilay, United States military governor for Germany.

The homeward flight from Moscow will span the North Atlantic with the next stop at Iceland for refuelling. Plans to fly the Paris-Asores route were changed when weather was reported favorable over the northern route.

Marshall expected to reach Washington by noon tomorrow and his radio report to the American people will be made soon after that.

"I had hoped very much that we could get agreement on the Austrian treaty," he said here. "I would not attempt to guess now when that now can be achieved." He added that the conference had received "a fair draft" for an Austrian pact.

A German treaty was not possible at Moscow, he said, "because of the vast number of considerations. But I had hoped to get more agreement on fundamental issues which would permit more work to be done between now and the next conference."

London in November

The ministers will meet briefly in September in New York, and hold a full-dress conference in London in November, Marshall said.

Marshall said that a possible meeting of President Truman, Prime Minister Attlee and Prime Minister Stalin had not been discussed during his stay in Moscow.

He commented that the "situation with the French has improved," but would hazard no guess as to how long it would take to settle the German issues. "The question is how long Europe can endure while we are struggling with these problems," he added.

Western diplomats in Moscow were reported as expressing the opinion privately that one result of the failure to reach agreements might be the waging of propaganda warfare between the east and west in an attempt to improve their positions in Germany.

The American delegation was troubled particularly over the three-to-one split on issues which affect directly the lives of millions in Central Europe. The Americans feared that events would not stand still while the great powers strive anew to resolve their differences.

Canadian Press Wire Out For Nearly 5 Hours

Result of a telegraph line tie-up caused by the derailment of a Canadian Pacific Railway freight train near Leaside, Toronto, Canadian Press wire service to all Central Ontario cities was out for more than four hours this morning.

When the engine was derailed a telegraph pole carrying the Canadian Press cable was broken and wire communication was immediately cut off.

As result of the break the Ontario Intelligencer failed to receive any Canadian Press copy until nine-thirty when the wire ordinarily opens at five o'clock for the day's run. Cities effected in the wire break included Belleville, Oshawa, Peterborough, Kingston, Brockville and Cornwall.

Toronto, April 26 —(CP)— Derailment of several empty freight cars of a freight train four miles out of Leaside, northeastern Toronto suburb, at 5:38 a.m. today broke all Canadian Pacific communications circuits from Toronto with Eastern Canada.

The accident, cause of which is being investigated, also halted all Canadian Press wires to Eastern Ontario papers and to Ottawa and Montreal bureau for several hours.

Nine of Crew Reported Dead After Explosion

Valparaiso, Chile, April 26 — (AP)—Nine or more of the crew were reported today to have died in an explosion and fire aboard the 730-ton Chilean coastal steamship Monemar, bound from San Antonio to Coquimbo with 425 tons of gasoline and 160 tons of fuel oil.

Valparaiso port authorities said last night that the Chilean steamship union, which answered a distress call, radioed that she had found the vessel burning in the Pacific.

Large Chunk of Iron Crashes on Home In Winnipeg, Authorities Mystified

By JACK AVESON

Winnipeg, April 26 —(CP)— Orson Welles had nothing to do with this.

And that fact is making Winnipeg citizens rather suspicious. Logic notwithstanding, they're wondering if it's entirely beyond the realm of possibility that last night's mysterious missile which crashed through the roof of a downtown Winnipeg dwelling might not be the forerunner of a concentrated Martian attack.

Not that they'll admit these fears, but . . . they acknowledge that the circumstances are suspicious.

It all began when Miss Gladys Porter was sitting at the piano in the living room of her home instructing her 13-year-old student, Barbara Atkinson.

Suddenly they heard a whining noise. Miss Porter listened. A falling bomb would make that sound. She clutched Barbara to protect her from harm.

"Then," she said later, "the lights went out. We heard a crash. And we just sat and watched the dust and debris come floating down the hall."

A little later she went to investigate, accompanied by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Porter.

The missile, a 15½-inch flat chunk of iron that looked like the section of a large flywheel, lay in the hallway. It had sliced neatly through the roof, plunged through the ceiling, leaving a large hole in boards and plaster, and crashed onto the floor. In its wake were severed electric wire and debris.

A few houses away, another chunk of metal, this one two feet in width, was embedded in the lawn fronting Mrs. L. Pearson's home. It had lopped off a tree branch during its descent.

Two unidentified boys found it and carted it away before police arrived.

Those are the facts.

Normally they could be explained.

But Winnipeggers are beginning to wonder if the situation can be described as normal.

The first theory was that the iron had been dropped accidentally by a plane. But officials at suburban Stevenson Field, the hub of all flying in the Winnipeg area, reported today that no planes carry iron parts. Even if they did, no plane dropped any such part last night.

The second theory was that a section of a flywheel might have broken from a wood-sawing machine. Such an incident did occur a few years ago here. But police have been unable to discover any broken flywheel.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, April 26 (CP)—Synopsis: Temperatures over southern Ontario fell to near freezing this morning while skies remained generally clear. Today there will be variable cloudiness but temperatures are expected to climb into the fifties. The weather will continue fair on Sunday reach the low sixties. Due to a small disturbance near James Bay, Northern Ontario experienced overcast skies and snowflurries this morning. Cloudiness and cool weather will persist over the northern regions of the province this afternoon and Sunday and rainshowers or snowflurries will continue in many localities.

FOURTEEN DEAD, FIFTY INJURED IN HINDU RIOTS

Following Incidents In Calcutta Govt. Orders Imposition of 59-hour Curfew

New Delhi, April 26 (Reuters)—The worst Hindu-Moslem rioting in a month broke out in Calcutta with 14 persons killed and 50 injured. Arrests totalled 124.

Following the riots, the Bengal Government announced imposition of a 59-hour curfew on two sections of the city.

Today's incidents in Calcutta included six bomb attacks and six cases of arson. A former secretary of the Indian Medical Association, Dr. P. K. Sengupta, was murdered in his surgery.

In Northern Bengal, Dr. Ram Manohar Lohia, prominent Indian Congress Party Socialist Leader, was detained by police at Sukia Pokri, near Darjeeling, after he refused to obey a police order prohibiting him from addressing a public meeting.

Lohio arrived at Darjeeling recently in connection with the civil disobedience movement launched nearly two weeks ago in Nepal "to achieve civil liberties and the release of political prisoners in Nepal."

In Dehli, the government imposed a 24-hour curfew in the wake of 14 stabbing cases yesterday.

Under new orders issued Friday, persons found loitering on the streets during curfew hours and attempting escape after detection may be shot. Any one engaged in arson, looting or assault by weapons will be fired on by police after due warning.

One student was killed and another severely injured in Lahore, Punjab capital, when police, after several warnings, opened fire on student demonstrations.

Sell All Cheddar At Cheese Boards

Toronto, Apr. 26 (CP).—G. F. Perkin, chairman of the Farm Products Marketing Board announced from Queen's Park yesterday that all Ontario Cheddar cheese will be sold through local cheese boards in 1947. He said copies of the order will be issued soon and forwarded to the 20-odd cheese boards and all licenced cheese buyers throughout the province. The order will mean that no buyer including the Cheese Producers' Marketing Agency — shall purchase cheese except on a local cheese board and that no cheese factory shall sell cheese except on a local cheese board.

German War Criminal Trials Set for Mistreatment Of Canadian Servicemen

Ottawa, April 26. (CP)—Trials involving some forty German war criminals in connection with mistreatment of Canadian servicemen shortly after D-Day in 1944 still are pending in Europe, Flt.-Lt. M. M. Carmichael, former officer in charge of the Canadian war crimes investigation unit on the continent, said in an interview yesterday.

Flt.-Lt. Carmichael, who was the first Canadian to arrive in Berlin in May, 1945, returned to the Dominion recently to become assistant Provost Marshal of the Central Air Command, R.C.A.F.

Most of the trials still pending, he said, arose out of further evidence collected by the unit since the conviction of Gen. Kurt Meyer, now serving life imprisonment at a Canadian life imprisonment at a Canadian penitentiary. Meyer was found guilty at a trial in Aurich, Germany, of ordering the shooting of Canadian prisoners taken between the Normandy beachhead and the Falaise Gap.

Flt.Lt. Carmichael said nearly 100 Canadians had been shot and because investigations had led to the discovery of other German units involved, new trials would have to be held. He anticipated the accused would be tried by British military tribunals because they had the facilities.

The Canadian investigators had trailed cases "all over Europe." While many of their "leads" came from complaints filed by repatriated servicemen, he said their best source had been the Germans themselves.

"I still can't figure them out," he said. "They seemed to want to talk. A chap would spill everything even though he knew it might mean his life."

The original Canadian investigators unit had been run jointly by the Army and Air Force. The work now is being carried on by the R.C.A.F.

Although their work had been hampered by linguistic difficulties, much had been accomplished by reason of many cases dovetailing into one another. An officer on the trail of one criminal frequnetly uncovered evidence of other crimes.

Flt.-Lt. Carmichael, a corporal in the R.C.M.P. before the war, was selected as escorting officer to accompany the German General Staff to Berlin for formal signing of the unconditional surrender May 8, 1945. The party included Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, commander - in - chief, Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz, Admiral Freidberg, Col. Gen. Kurt von Runstedt and their aides.

With a British Dakota crew and his batman, the R.C.A.F. officer met the Germans at Flensbur gin Northern Germany near the Danish border. The plane flew southeast to Berlin where there was a rendezvous with aircraft carrying Russian Marshall Gregory Zhukov, Air Chief Marshal Arthur Tedder, deputy Allied Commander, and U.S.A.A.F. Gen. Carl Spaatz. They landed at the devastated German capital's downtown Templehoff Airdrome.

He described the German officers as "very polite and dignified", adding that Keitel and von Runstedt had impressed him particularly with their courtesy. He had seen von Runstedt, now a prisoner-of-war in the United Kingdom ,last month giving evidence at a trial in France.

"He was a small, withered dried-up old man, but he still had his dignity."

Flt.-Lt. Carmichael recalled one incident which had taken place at the airport after the signing. He said Keitel stepped over to Marshal Zhukov and put out his arm as if in shake hands. The Soviet commander slapped the Prussian's hand and turned on his heel.

VIET NAMESE FORCES AMBUSH CONVOY, 44 KILLED

Two Ministers of Cochin-China Government Numbered Among Victims

Paris, Apr. 26 (AP).—French dispatches from Indo-China said today that 44 persons, including two ministers of the Cochin-China government, were killed yesterday when Viet Namese forces ambushed a convoy 40 miles south of Saigon.

The advices said the action, near Mytho on the Mekong river, was the most important attack by the Viet Namese since hostilities began in Indo-China last December.

The two officials—Truong Vinh Kpanh, education minister, and Diap Quang Dong, under-secretary of state—were killed when a road mine blew up their automobile. Mortar shells then smashed into the convoy which was escorting them.

Viet Namese forces, which have rebelled against the French colonial government, consider Cochin-Chinese officials puppets of the French.

Other dispatches announced the arrival at Saigon of Paul Costt-Floret, French war minister. The secret Viet Namese radio said that an official envoy of Ho Chi Minh's Viet Nam government had arrived at Saigon to attempt to open peace talks with the French High Commissioner, Emile Bollaert.

Special Session Of U.N. Council Will Be Held

New York, April 26 — (AP)— Official delegations and interested groups mapped last-minute strategy today for handling the explosive Holy Land problem as representatives of 55 countries converged on New York for the special Palestine session of the United Nations Assembly which opens Monday.

The five major powers took the lead by agreeing on a slate of officers for the session which gets under way Monday. Under the five-power agreement one of the vice presidencies would go to either India or the Philippines with India reported to have the edge.

BRITISH POLICE OFFICER SHOT BY TWO GUNMEN

Men Riding in Taxicab Fire at Officer and Then Escape on Foot

Jerusalem, April 26 —(CP)—A British police officer, A. E. Conquest, died tonight after being shot twice in the stomach by two Jewish gunmen in Haifa today, it was officially announced.

The gunmen, who were in a passing taxi, shot Conquest when he was driving his car down Carmel Avenue, Haifa.

First reports said Conquest was shot by two men riding in a taxicab. The cab, these reports said, travelled only a few hundred yards after the shooting and then crashed into a traffic island.

Two men dressed in khaki shorts leaped from the cab and escaped, informants said.

Conquest was shot twice in the abdomen.

Buyers' Strike Put on By Teen-aged Lads

Chemainus, B.C. April 26. — (CP)—A teen-aged buyers strike against the eight-cent chocolate bar gained momentum throughout Vancouver Island today as hundreds of youngsters joined in a determined bed to force the return of the "nickel" bar.

The boycott, initiated here Thursday as youngsters expressed their disapproval of the recent two-cent increase with picket lines around candy stores, was in full swing at Ladysmith and Nanaimo, B.C., today with support promised from Victoria and other centres.

At Victoria the Youth Action Committee announced that it would support the boycott and called a special meeting Sunday night to consider further action. The Y.M.C.A. program secretary and the greater Victoria Recreation Council also announced that meetings would be held to discuss the question.

Placards pinned to the blouses and jackets of pickets neatly summed-up the feeling of Chemainus youngsters read:

"Don't be a sucker. Don't buy eight-cent bars."

FEDERAL HOUSING PROGRAM UNDER FIRE IN HOUSE

Howe Predicts 18,000 Homes Will be Built Under Various Plans This Year

Ottawa, April 26 (CP) — The Federal Government's housing program, under fire from opposition benches as the Commons adjourned for the weekend is expected to provoke further debate Monday when members meet for what may mark the end of the contentious main control bill debate.

Approximately 10 of the 57 Orders-in-Council appended to the main control bill still have to be passed. It is expected that they will be disposed of in sufficient time to allow Finance Minister Abbott to bring down his budget speech Tuesday.

The housing debate came on orders in the control bill which would extend for one year the government's power to channel building materials to veterans housing or accommodation built by Wartime Housing or under an integrated housing program.

Reconstruction Minister Howe, replying to opposition criticism of Wartime Housing Ltd., said he had been told by the Canadian Legion within recent months that the only satisfactory housing for veterans was being constructed by Wartime Housing.

Mr. Howe predicted that 10,000 homes will be built this year under the integrated housing plan. Another 7,000 to 8,000 houses will be built under the Wartime Housing plan.

Budget Will Make No Changes in Postage Rates

Ottawa, April 26. (CP)—The budget to be presented to the Commons, Tuesday night, will make no change in Canada's postage rates, it was predicted in informed circles today.

There has been prolonged speculation that postage rates are due for a reduction but it was said that Finance Minister Abbott has decided that the time is not yet ripe.

Sources close to the administration pointed out that elimination of the one-cent tax applied to postage rates during he war period would mean a reduction of $10,000,000 in the yearly revenue of the Post Office Department while at the same time meaning little in the way of relief for Canada's taxpayers.

SOLVE HOUSING PROBLEM

Allentown, Pa., Apr. 26 (AP).—Painter Warren Snyder and his wife and small daughter, Joan, have solved their housing problem. The Snyders settled down in a 38-passenger, 1929 bus, parked along the Lehigh river.

5-Point Program of Preparation For Civilian Canada Recommended

By DOUGLAS HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 26 (CP)—Col. W W. Goforth, retiring Deputy Director of Defence Research, today recommended a five-point program of preparation for civilian Canada which, he said, would enable her to "withstand the far greater dangers of future war with fewer relative casualties and less proportionate damage to property than the United Kingdom suffered in the Second World War."

In broad outline, his program envisages:

1. That the three forces "will so combine and organize their strength within the limited resources assigned them that they may provide efficient early worning, interception and close support services to guard our great cities and vital centres from the first wanes of enemy attack."

2. That each community of 50,000 population and over, "encouraged and guided by provincial authorities," study the results of atomic destruction as now known and "translate these into amendments to their building bylaws and regulations, into the planning of greater dispersion, even into their system of granting building permits relative to the zone of danger."

3. That professional societies "study and devise codes and simplified instructions for use by their members in local serveys and in expert counsel to local authorities."

4. The individual industries and public utilities start reviewing ways and means for achieving gradual dispersion.

5. Not an immediate problem but "one needing serious preliminary attention within the next five years" was the question of "a revived and greatly-strengthened aid raid precaution (A.R.P.) organ[illegible]

No Word Received From Trapped Men Since Thursday

Rescue Workers Have Little Hope of Success in Drive

By P. C. DUBOIS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Malartic, Que., April 26—(CP)—A new effort was launched today to smother a smoldering three-days-old fire in the No. 4 shaft of East Malartic gold mines here even as hope for rescue of 11 men trapped by the fire hung only on the slenderest of threads.

People engaged in rescue work were reluctant to abandon hope entirely. But rescue workers, grimy and tired as they left the fumes-swept No. 4 shaft only muttered and turned away when asked what chance remained for the men below.

The new effort started a few hours after a company statement said all hope of bringing the blaze under control so that rescue could be made "at the present time" was given up at approximately 3:45 a.m.

From inside the shaft it was learned the new attack on the fire involved the building of a wooden ceiling over the shaft which would take several hours, probably five or six.

In addition to perhaps smothering the fire the ceiling would remove the danger of falling rock which has been a hazard for rescue workers trying to reach the 11 men held underground by the flames, men from whom nothing has been heard since the fire started before dawn Thursday.

The heavy timber ceiling will be built on the collar or the shaft at the 10th level about 1,570 feet down the new shaft.

The fire, which already has taken the life of one gold miner, was said to have burned one large timbered hopper, used for taking rock out of the shaft and was working on the mine timbers.

The fire was thought to have started in a lunchroom from a dropped cigaret stub. The hope was still expressed that the trapped men had been able to go deep enough into the mine below the fire to escape the smoke and the fumes.

Rescue efforts, carried out by crews from Malartic and nearby mines, were continuous, one crew relieving the other after short stretches.

The statement abandoning hope of getting the fire under control for the present time came from mine manager D. M. MacLean.

HAD WRONG SPEECH

Washington, April 26 (AP)—Representative Walter Granger (Dem. Utah), strode to the microphone, pulling a manuscript from his pocket—and a look of horror spread speedily over his face.

There was a moment of embarrassed silence before his colleagues in the house learned what the trouble was.

"Wrong speech," said Granger sheepishly.

Marquess of Bute Multi-Millionaire Dies at Age 65

London, April 26. (AP)—John Chichton-Stuart, fourth Marquess of Bute, who held a dozen titles, had as many castles, some 120,000 acres and reputed $240,000,000 fortune, is dead at 65.

Death for the kilt-wearing multi-millionaire, who was not only one of the richest men in the world but the only British peer to enlist as a private in the First World War, came last night after a long illness.

He died at Moutstuart House, his secluded ancestral home in Rothesay, Scotland, famous for its fabulous Oriental, Arab and Roman rooms and elaborate baths of 60 types of marble.

His successor to the title of Marquess and to his riches—after heavy "death duties" have been extracted—is his eldest son, John, 39, Earl of Dumfries, governor of the Scottish Island of Bute.

C. of L. Increase Ahead of Index

Ottawa, April 26 —(CP)— The Dominion Bureau of Statistics confirmed with figures today what any housewife could have told it a long time ago: That the cost of keeping the larder filled, the body clothed and the house furnished is considerably more than the official cost-of-living index.

Between the August, 1939, and the end of 1946 the official increase was 26.1 per cent. By last month it had risen an additional 2.8 per cent.,

But while these figures represented the official average advance, they did not give much indication of some of the things housewives have been howling about. Egg prices are 70 per cent higher than they averaged in the period 1935-39. In the same class are cheese, round steak, rolled rib roast, stewing beef, veal, bacon, lard, rice, beans, corn syrup and lemons.

The bureau computes its index by averaging the weighted representative price figure for each of six main essential-item groups: Fuel, rent, foods, clothing, home furnishings and services and miscellaneous.

The goods group advanced 47.4 per cent, clothing 31.1 and home furnishings and services 28.2. Fuel moved ahead 10.3 per cent, rent (computed before the recent increase in domestic rentals) 9.2, and miscellaneous, 12.6.

Among the individual items, the bureau reported, some "quite important" living requirements remained comparatively stable. In the "miscellaneous" index 20 out of 37 items either fell or increased less than 10 per cent.

BELLEVILLE MASONIC MEMBERS GIVEN HIGH HONORS AT CONVENTION

Two Belleville members of the Royal Arch Masons were accorded high honors at the recent convention of the R.A.M. held in London Ontario.

Past First Principal Everett Wood, of Moira Chaptea, A. F. and A. M. No. 7 here, was given the title of Right Excellent Companion and elevated to the position of District Superintendent of the district. He is at present Worshipful Master of Eureka Lodge No. 283, A. F. and A. M.

Bruce Smith First Principal of Quinte Friendship Chapter R. A. M. was given the title of Excellent Companion and elevated to the position of Grand Scribe.

Saturday Market

Egg prices held firm at 40 cents the dozen on the local produce market Saturday morning. The offering of fowl was small with top price for capons being 48 cents and for the general run of fowl 40 to 42 cents the pound. Broilers were available up to $1.75 a pair.

On the outside market maple syrup was still available at from $4 to $4.50 per gallon. Maple sugar sold at 60 cents the pound or small cakes at two for 15 cents and a dime each.

Potatoes were freely offered at 45 cents the peck, with bag lots bringing $1.50. Delicious and Wagner apples sold at 60 cents the small basket with cooking varieties bringing up to $2.50 per hamper. Winter vegetables were 50 cents the peck.

Smelts were offered by two fish vendors at 20 cents the dozen, or about 12 cents the pound. Mudcats sold at 25 cents the pound.

Young pigs were freely offered with prices as low as $8 each and ranging up to $10 for better quality shoats.

11 Heifer Calves May Set Record

If Orval May, Sidney Township Junior Farmer, has ideas of quickly building up a large herd of milkers, the cows of his present herd are doing all they can to assist.

At present having a herd of 11 grade cows on his 3rd concession farm, Mr. May is somewhat dumbfounded this spring to find that he has 11 additional potential milkers. When calving this spring, every one of Mr. May's 11 cows gave birth to heifer calves. The first of his cows freshened on Dec. 1 and the last on Apr. 23 past.

The percentage of heifer calves born to a herd of cows frequently is above 50 per cent, but it is rarely, if ever, that 100 per cent heifers are born as was the case with Mr. May's herd.

OBITUARY

LATE JOHN BURTON CALVERT (Thomasburg)

The funeral of John Burton Calvert was held from his late residence at Thomasburg on Friday afternoon and was largely attended. The service there and at Moira Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. J. A. McMillan, minister in charge of the Foxboro Presbyterian Circuit.

The bearers were: Walter Thompson, Joseph Keller, Burton Foster, Wallace McTaggart, Cecil Geen and Charles Beatty.

There were many beautiful floral tributes and former associates of the late Mr. Calvert at the Fuller Sand and Gravel Company plant, acted as flower bearers.

LATE EDWIN REID

On Friday afternoon the funeral of Edwin Reid, late residence, 25 Grier Street, was held from the Grant Funeral Home, 68 North Front Street. The service there and at Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. F. R. Harback, minister of the Tabernacle United Church.

During the service two favorite hymns of the late Mr. Reid, "Jesus Saviour Pilot Me", and "Safe in the Arms of Jesus", were sung.

The bearers were Embery Irvine, George Clarke, Everett Bowers, William Watson, Ronald Bonsor and John Van Allen.

John Gibson, 83, Well-Known Cheese Man, Dies

Kingston, April 26. — John Gibson, 83, of 396 Johnson St., who had been associated with the cheese industry for over half a century, died in the Kingston General Hospital Friday morning after a brief illness. He was admitted to hospital Tuesday, April 15.

Deceased was born in Roblin Mills, Prince Edward County, on Feb. 10, 1864. At the age of 21 years he went to Centreville to learn the manufacture of cheese. Later, he went to Lower Canada, where he continued the business for eight years. In 1890 he went to Montreal to work for the cheese firm of A. W. Grant, which subsequently sent him to Liverpool, England, to engage in the manufacture of cream cheese just coming into the market.

Returning to Montreal, he took up residence and followed the occupation of cheese buyer for an export house, attending various cheese boards in the Eastern township, Vankleek Hill, South Finch, Winchester and Ormstown. In 1903 the firm which he represented sent him to Kingston. He bought cheese on their behalf at the local and nearby cheese boards. Mr. Gibson continued in this capacity for nearly half a century.

Deceased was greatly interested in all kinds of sports, especially curling. He first curled with Ormstown Curling Club, and while a resident of Montreal with the Caledonia Club. He was a member of the Kingston Curling Club, being an associate member in recent years. Mr. Gibson was an associate member of the Kingston Lawn Bowling Club, and attended Sydenham St. United Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Gibson were planning to celebrate their 50th. wedding anniversary on June 9.

He is survived by his widow, the former Mary Sadler; one daughter, Mrs. Duncan Robertson, BA (Dorothy) Bogota, Columbia; five sons, Clifford Gibson, BSc., Timmins; Clarence Gibson, BSc., Bogota Columbia; Dr. Stanley Gibson Schumacher; Tate Gibson, McKenzie Island, and Dr. Melville, London, Ont. One sister, Mrs. E. Giles of Mountain View also survives.

Council Requests Utilities Commission Take Measures to Dispose of or to Close Belleville Gas Works by End of This Year

Report and Findings Of Consulting Engineers On Belleville Gas Plant

The report of Messrs. Gore and Storrie, Consulting Engineers of Toronto on their survey of the Belleville Gas Works System, made in 1946 was read by Mayor Follwell at the Friday afternoon special meeting of the city council. The findings and recommendations follow:

Findings as presented by the engineers were read by Mayor Follwell:

The original gas works system was built in 1854 by a privately-owned company when the population was around 4,000 persons. The plant was acquired by the municipality in 1904 for $50,000. The Shore Gas Company purchased the system and operated it until 1936 when it reverted to the city. Since 1937 it has been operated by the Public Utilities Commission.

The mechanical equipment in gas plant can be described only as being in fair condition due largely to lack of funds to maintain it in a state of good repair. The buildings are in a dilapidated condition requiring repairs not only repairs of a major type but in some instances complete new structures are essential if the plant is to be continued as a going concern.

In the words of the engineers, "In our judgment the condition of the whole plant is such that the city has indeed been fortunate that no major shut down has occurred."

Net Outstanding Debt

The net outstanding debt as at the close of 1945 amounted to $135,223.19, calling for an annual payment of $13,660.80 being made until 1960.

There was a drop in the number of gas consumers from 1,011 in 1933 to 704 in 1945 while the Hydro Electric consumers increased from 3,992 to 4,776. During the eight year period from 1938 to 1945 there was a loss of 30.48 per cent in the amount of gas sold compared with the volume produced at the plant.

On this point the engineers pointed out that "this is a clear indication of the condition the distribution system and particularly the individual consumer services are in. Records indicated that in 1925 the unaccounted for gas was as high as 50 per operating conditions the loss should not exceed 10 per cent. In the eight years considered out of every 1,000 cubic feet of gas produced at the plant only 700 cubic feet reached the consumer for which revenue was received.

Cost of Operation Above Received

In these years 1938 to 1945 the accumulated costs of operation was $19,158.38 more than the revenue received. Add this to the debt charge of $109,947.29 and there was a total loss of $129,105.67 over this period. In 1945 the operating loss amounted to $7,128.66 and with debt charges of $13,660.80 the loss for that year amounted to $20,789.46 and the situation was even worse than indicated because nothing had been set aside for depreciation in the system and only the most minor and essential repairs had been carried out.

Over the eight year period 1938-1945 the revenue from consumers (including revenue from residuals) and based on the volume delivered to the consumers averaged $1.66 per 1,000 cubic feet. The cost of producing gas as delivered to the consumers averaged $1.79 and with debt charges of $0.75 the total cost was $2.54 per 1,000 cubic feet or a net loss of 88 cents per 1,000 feet. Gas used by industrial consumers dropped from a maximum of 521,950 cubic feet in 1941 to 193,100 cubic feet in 1945.

Why Higher Production Costs

The increased cost of production of gas is "due to higher cost of coal and practically constant labor and debt cost being distributed over a reduced gas output. The total loss in 1938 was 61 cents and in 1945 $1.18 per 1,000 cubic feet.

An analysis was made of 15 consumers of Belleville who used both gas and electricity and abandoned the use of gas and this shows that when using gas and electricity their average bill was $46.30 yearly as against $24.89 or a saving of $21.31 per annum when using electricity alone or a saving of 46 per cent.

Modernization Not Justified

On the plant itself the engineers reported: "Any attempt to modernize the gas plant would prove a costly business. A modern gas plant would not be justified in view of the tendency everywhere to change from gas to electricity. The re-construction of the plant would necessitate the renewal of a large part of the distribution system and service connections which would prove another costly business.

Recommend Rations

The engineers submitted the following recommendations; 1. That steps be taken to laETA tinue the gas works system because of the costly nature of reconstruction and modernization of the plant, building and distribution system, because the steady increase in the use of gas and the increasing cost of production, indicating clearly the ever increasing use of electric power which has steadily been reduced in cost.

Because for most purposes gas cannot compete with electricity.

Because over a long term of years revenue received has invariably failed to meet the expenditures, the cost of operation during the recent years has been greater than the revenue.

2. That a date be set for closing down the plant and reasonable notice given all consumers of the intention to do so.

Suggested Compensation

3. That consideration be given by the Belleville Public Utilities Commission to the supplying of electric ranges and other such equipment at a reduced rate in order partially to compensate for the expense they will be put to in making the changeover from gas to electricity. Such equipment could be paid on the instalment plan.

4. That in order to meet the annual debt charges amounting to $13,660.80 to be paid until 1960 the Belleville Public Utilities be requested to consider paying a portion of this amount out of the electric department funds. The basis for this is that provision has been given by the city or supplying the citizens with gas to a certain extent the gas plant is more or less being forced out of business by the ever increasing and less costly use of electric power. The Utilities Commission must secure the consent of the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission to any such arrangement.

HELD FOR WOUNDING

Toronto, April 26 — (CP) — Brandishing a blood - stained butcher knife with which police said he had slashed his father-in-law's wrist, Joseph McKendry, 27, was arrested last night by York township police.

Sgt. Cecil Risebrook said James Glennie, 68, was taken to hospital with the arteries of his wrist slashed by a blow from a foot-long knife when he had attempted to protect his daughter in the living room of his home.

McKendry was charged with wounding. Police said domestic discord was responsible for the quarrel.

Consumers' Situation Is Under Discussion Possible Propane Gas Supply Suggested

That in view of the fact that the increased losses on the Belleville gas plant are becoming a greater burden every year on the taxpayer and acting on the recommendation of Gore and Storrie, Consulting Engineers as herewith presented, this council hereby request the Public Utilities Commission to take such measures as they deem necessary to bring about the disposal or closing of the said gas plant at a date not later than December 31st., 1947.

This resolution was adopted at a special meeting of the Belleville City Council on Friday afternoon which was attended by the members of the Belleville Public Utilities Commission and the manager O. H. Scott.

Mayor Frank Follwell read a letter and report of Messrs. Gore and Storrie of Toronto, who presented to the city in June last a report of their findings as to the condition of the Belleville Gas System recommending the closing of the plant.

Council considered the situation of the gas consumers and Mayor Follwell spoke of the possibility that a private corporation might be able to supply propane gas to gas consumers in the event of the closing or disposal of the gas works. For this season he suggested delaying the date of closing to see if something in this line might not turn up.

Public Utilities Commission Manager O. H. Scott indicated the rising loss yearly on the system pointing out that the operating loss which was $7,128.29 in 1945 was still greater in 1946. The condition for the first quarter of 1947 was about $500 worse than for the same period last year by reason of coal price advance.

Alderman Armstrong asked if electrical equipment could be installed with advantage for the gas consumers to encourage the electric utility in opposition to a private propane gas company for be favored the building up of the utility whereby any benefit would come back to the consumers.

It was pointed out by Alderman Hyde that propane gas is in use in many parts of the United States especially where electrical rates are much higher than they are in Ontario.

Alderman Chamberlain suggested taking the matter up with the Hydro utility especially on the question of getting equipment to replace gas burners and stoves.

First is the financial consideration said the Mayor. "We cannot allow the gas plant to continue losing money at the expense of the taxpayers. It may be that a gas will be made available if the consumers would use it.

Ald. Claude D. Tice remarked, "We keep losing money on the plant. Surely no man on Front Street would continue having an operating loss of over $7,000 a year!"

"Get Out From Under"

As far as the city is concerned, said Alderman H. J. Clarke, it should consider getting out from under the gas plant at once.

Manager Scott of the Belleville P.U.C. of the reduction of the number of gas consumers in recent years.

Mayor Follwell, on the possibility of the availability of propane gas for gas consumers, commented, "our primary duty is to see that our gas consumers are not left high and dry." The Mayor urged that any step taken should give the gas consumers sufficient time. "Don't cut the time down to a month to be fair to the gas users," he remarked.

Discussion turned to the procedure in the event of deciding to close or dispose of the gas system. Chairman F. R. Wotten of the Commission said, "we have power to close the plant but if it were to be sold the question would have to go to the people."

Take Care of Gas Customers

Mayor Follwell suggested giving six months' notice of intention to close, and setting the date for Dec. 31st. In reference to the possibility of a private company supplying propane gas the mayor declared "I am not interested in bringing in a competitor to the utility, but in taking care of our gas customers."

Ald. Clarke asked the Commission members if the city council asked them to close the gas plant, would they do it?

Commissioner Wotten said: "If you go at it in the proper way."

Utility Manager Scott stated that in 1941 the Commission thought the gas system would close itself up.

Aldermen Chamberlain, Harvey, Lazenby, Hyde and others took part in debate.

It was pointed out by the mayor that consumers might have to wait for electrical equipment. "I think we ought to give at least six months' notice. In the meantime we may find a private company ready to supply propane gas."

The council thereupon carried the resolution to take steps to have the Commission dispose of or close the gas plant at a date not later than the last day of the present year.

Final Tribute Paid to Late C.H. Vanderwater

Business and social life in Sidney township paused briefly Friday afternoon as residents from all parts of the township and from the Foxboro community gathered at Marsh Hill United Church to pay final tribute to the late Charles H. Vanderwater, 6th Concession Sidney.

County officials and representatives of the business life in Belleville attended the funeral as a sorrowing community joined with the immediate family in paying respects to one of the outstanding pioneer residents of the district.

The small church at Marsh Hill was filled almost to capacity long before the funeral cortege arrived from the Vanderwater farm home just across the road where earlier a private funeral service had been held.

Speaking in brief eulogy of Mr. Vanderwater who had lived his entire life in the Marsh Hill community, Rev. A. L. Shorten, United Church minister for the Foxboro-Marsh Hill and Holloway circuit stated that "in the home, in the church and in the entire community Mr. Vanderwater by his quiet gentle manner had won the respect of all who knew him".

Entire Life in Community

"He lived his entire life in the community where his forefathers lived and where his quiet manner won for him the respect of all.

Continuing Mr. Shorten spoke of the interest which Mr. Vanderwater had had in the building of Marsh Hill Church. The church had been constructed on land which was part of the Vanderwater homestead. Throughout his life he had been active in the church and of late years had been an honorary elder.

Comparing life to a pilgrimage Mr. Shorten declared that Mr. Vanderwater had truly been a pilgrim with his purpose of life being truly fulfilled. Hymns chosen for the funeral service were "Unto the Hills" and "Abide With Me".

Six members of Marsh Hill United Church congregation acted as bearers and carried the body of the Sidney pioneer to its last resting place in Belleville Cemetery where the committal service was taken by Mr. Shorten. The bearers were Ben Bleecker, Fred Campbell, David Hollinger, Leslie Finkle, Harry Coulter and Berson Mitts.

Sammy Goodman Receives Letter From Germany

During the latter years of the war, a Canadian army officer then stationed in Westphalia, Germany, sent one of his uniforms to a German tailor to be cleaned. On the neck of the tunic was the usual tab bearing the name and address of the maker, or selling agent.

In this case the label bore the name of Sammy Goodman, of Belleville. The German tailor, noted the name and address and the other day Mr. Goodman received a letter written in broken English from the humble German tailor, who is still plying his trade in days that he writes "are bad and sad for the German people."

In his broken English, the tailor whose name is Robert Flierenbaum, writes, "I have found your name in a uniform jacket of a Canadian offizier, a customer of me. The jacket was made in your workshop and it was to the man too small. I must larger it."

He had a large business in Cologne before the war, he wrote but now the "dwelling and shop is burn out. My son not come home from the fight, he die in Russia. Our stores are empty, I have no thread, no needlesilk, no stuff for jacket waistcoat or trousers. I am not able to buy one inch wollen cloth for new dress for myself. If you have these stuff of things pleese send me a parcel. I think our money no good now but if German money is again worthy in the world business, I shall send your calculation quickly."

March 26th, 1947.

Dear Sir,
Two years ago has been finished the war and the time is past of the instigation. We are happy then we were allowed to speak a word openss now. But the time is bad and sad for the German people. I have found your name in a uniformjaket from a Canadien-officer, a customer of me. The jaket was made in your workshop, and it was the man to small, I must made larger it.

You see, I am a tailorbusinessman and your collegue. I have had a business in Cologne befor the war and my firm was considered good. Twenty four men and girls were working in my shop, and now came the war! The shop and the dwelling burnt out, two buildings become to destroy and my son came not at home from the fight he is die in Russia. You see, the existence the painful acquisition, the dwelling place all ist lost. Also my dress is lost.

I have now a little workshop here in a village in Westfalia, but we have no thread, no needlesilk, no stuff for jaket, waistcoat or trousers. Our stores are empty, I am not able to buy one inch woolen cloth for a new dress for myself. Dear Sir, have you falling off line or stuff or other things send me a little parcel of them, please. I thing not I can your come to meet and make good with money now, but if the German-money is again worthy in the worldbusiness then I shall send your calculation quickly and I shall do my best to satisfy you. Hoping to receive your reply by return of post, I am, dear Sir,

Yours very truly
Robert Flierenbaum, tailormaster

Kiwanis Club to Head City Campaign For British Flood Relief

Donors Asked to Send Clean Clothes in Good State of Repair; Certain Types Are Greatly Needed

The Kiwanis Club in close cooperation with other city service clubs, war veterans' associations and other organizations, will spearhead the clothing collection drive in the forthcoming campaign for British Flood Relief, it was decided at a special meeting of the Belleville committee and representatives of various organizations held last night.

The meeting decided to adopt the same system of collection as that used by the Kiwanis Club in similar drives some time ago. And it is felt that the service club was better equipped to conduct the drive than any other organization.

A date will be set, and announced later, for the collection of the clothing. Volunteer trucks and helpers will move swiftly at the appointed hour and complete the pick-up it is expected, within a few hours. This method of collection was deemed better and requiring less labor than a suggested procedure of using churches as central depots, and later transferring it to the armouries for sorting and packing.

Central Depot

Clothing from out of town will be sent to the city's central depot through Mrs. Robert Simpson, Donald Street. Donors are requested to leave parcels at Mrs. Simpson's residence.

Cash contributions for the purchase of food parcels will be accepted at the business office of the Ontario Intelligencer and it was decided at the meeting that arrangements will be made with city banks for acceptance of monies. Merchants, managers of industries in the city will be asked to co-operate in the collection of any donations given by their various staffs.

War veterans organizations of the city have been allotted the task of supplying cartons for packaging purposes and also the general parcelling of all clothing, shoes, linens, curtains etc.

Mrs. Neate Heads Women's Group.

Mrs. E. Neate, of the St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E., was named head of all women's organizations assisting in the campaign. She and her organizations will receive the full co-operation of men volunteers.

Mayor Frank Follwell, general chairman of the Belleville Campaign for British Flood Relief, told the meeting that the dates for the drive were May 1 to May 15. He pointed out that each article of clothing should be of good quality, clean, and in a good state of repair, buttons sewed on, etc. An extra spool of thread and a package of needles could be conveniently tucked in pockets of the clothing, he said. They are urgently needed and will be greatly appreciated by the people of Britain.

Children's clothes are most urgently needed. Hair ribbons are greatly prized by children and if possible should be sent with other articles.

Should Attach Names.

Donors should attach their names and addresses to the garment or garments they contribute. Do not use an ordinary pin. Use a safety pin or stapler. Special messages of cheer and hope should be included whenever possible. Any serviceable piece of material or garment that can be spared will be welcomed.

Cleanliness of clothes is very important. All washable things should be washed before giving. Ironing is not necessary as garments will be pressure baled in any event. Clean and dirty clothes should be packed separately. Shoes should be mended as far as possible. Buttons and buckles should be sewn on and shoes tied together in pairs.

Types of clothing most appreciated are overcoats, men's and boys' garments, shoes, children's and men's rubber boots, galoshes, etc. Unsuitable types of clothing are evening dresses, women's fancy shoes, "dressy" silk frocks, etc. Men's evening clothes are suitable as the material can be converted into something more useful.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Redner Observe 50th Anniversary

On the Friday evening previous seventy of the Centre neighborhood and surrounding community the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burton L. Redner to do honor to them on the event of their approaching golden wedding anniversary. After some time spent in social visiting, Rev. Mr. Todd called order and community singing was enjoyed by all led by Mrs. Ronald Giles with Mrs. Roy Brickman at the organ.

Rev. Mr. Todd gave a short appropriate address. Mrs. Donald Spencer a very apt reading. Selections on the guitar by Wilbert Green, Leo Fox, Carl Brickman; a duet by Mrs. Ronald Giles and Mr. Todd after which Mr. and Mrs. Redner were called to seats of honor and an address was read and the presentation made of a beautiful mantel clock. Mr. and Mrs. Redner replied very feelingly, Mr. Redner giving many very interesting happenings of his younger days and told of the changes that have taken place during the past fifty years in the neighborhood, also the difference in customs, dress and means of transportation.

All joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows".

Bounteous refreshments were served by the ladies and all departed wishing Mr. and Mrs. Redner many more years together.

On April 21st., 1897, Burton L. Redner of Gore Road, Ameliasburg township, and Lena, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Pearsall, of Mt. Pleasant, in Hallowell township, were united in marriage and on Monday evening, April 21, their son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Redner, entertained thirty invited guests in their honor. The tables were beautifully decorated with daffodils for centres. A lovely wedding cake adorned the table of the bride and groom. The bridesmaid of fifty years ago was present in the person of Mrs. A. E. Calnan, of Picton.

The evening was passed in social visiting and music, one feature being a lovely solo by Roger Redner, a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Redner.

The couple received many beautiful gifts to honor the occasion. They have spent all their married life in the community, Mr. Redner being born on the homestead and both are highly esteemed. They have one son, Ralph residing on the homestead and lost two sons as children. They have four grandchildren. It is hoped this worthy couple may celebrate many more wedding days together.

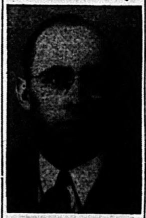
Construction Of Fine Edifice Was Begun In March, 1946; Will Accommodate 200

Sunday, will mark an epoch in the history of the Wesleyan Methodist Church of Belleville, when the doors of the congregation's new church, at 78 Everett Street, will be opened for service for the first time.

Services will continue throughout the day with morning worship at eleven and an evening evangelistic service at seven. At two-thirty in the afternoon the Church will be dedicated at a special service with Rev. John A. S. Woodhouse of Batavia, N.Y., as the guest speaker

Work Opened Here in 1941

The work of the Wesleyan Methodists opened in Belleville in September, 1941 under the able ministry of Rev. D. R. Chatreau. Six months later the work was formally declared a congregation of the Wesleyan Methodist Church of America the ceremony being conducted by Rev. S. W. Blanchard, president of the Canada Conference. The present pastor, Rev. J. S. A. Spearman, succeeded Mr. Chatreau in May, 1943.



Rev. J. S. A. Spearman, pastor of Wesleyan Methodist Church in city.

Shortly after the Wesleyan work commenced in the city the need for a new church was keenly felt and the Canada Conference decided to build. The Everett Street site was purchased by the Conference with the "first sod" being turned by the Conference president in March, 1946, in the presence of members and adherents.

Fine Appearance

Today after much difficulty in securing the necessary materials the Church stands completed in readiness for the official opening on Sunday. Modern in every detail the church presents a simple but neat outward appearance. The auditorium is beautifully finished and furnished with pews for the accommodation of 200 persons while the basement has seven classrooms, kitchen and wash rooms included. The building is heated with an oil furnace.

Entering enthusiastically into the work of seeing their new church completed, the church members have assisted considerably with the furnishings. The carpet, platform chairs, a table, desk light and pulpit have all been supplied by local members. The church piano was provided by the Wesleyan Young People's Society.

Ex-Warden Lawes

Ex-Warden Lawes who was for twenty-one years in charge of Sing Sing Prison and whose death has just been reported had in his tenure of office in the "big house" an abundant opportunity to study criminals.

The task he assumed at the age of 37 was one of the heaviest and most responsible burdens a man could hold. He introduced football and other sports into the life of the convicts, had prison teams matched against one another and against outsiders, he installed radio and motion pictures and had larger and more sanitary cell quarters constructed. During his regime a new prison was built and the grounds were improved.

One of his statements lingers in the mind in regard to the treatment of prisoners "I have always attempted to steer a straight course, avoiding coddling on the one hand and brutality on the other."

The treatment of persons who have offended against the laws is one of the problems which comes to the fore again and again. It has been improved very greatly from the earliest ages.

The redemptive aspect in punishment and the adequacy of punishment for crime as a deterrent for the future ever occupy the attention of students of the problem.

Warden Lawes in his vast experience learned a great deal of this problem and was able to make his contribution to the study and solution of penology arising out of the section of humanity who comes within the class that finds its way within prison walls.

Peace Treaties

The peace treaties with Italy, Rumania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland signed at Paris in February will enter into force upon deposition of their ratifications by the United Kingdom, United States, Russian and French Governments in respect of the Italian treaty, and by the United Kingdom, U.S.A. and Russian Governments for the three Balkan treaties and by Britain and Russia for the Finnish treaty.

The question arises whether it would be expedient for the four powers to deposit ratifications before the treaties have been ratified by the ex-enemy countries involved. This matter was dealt with by the Lord Chancellor in the House of Lords on the second reading of the bill on the peace treaties on April 22nd when Lord Jowett said, "It is laid down in the treaties that they shall be ratified by the individual ex-enemy powers concerned. Although such ratification by the ex-enemies is not an essential pre-requisite to the coming into force of the treaties, nevertheless it is clearly desirable that the treaties should have been ratified by the ex-enemy governments before they are actually brought into effect by the deposit of ratifications by ourselves, the Americans, the Russians and the French and indeed it can be argued that the ex-enemy governments having signed treaties containing the provision that they shall be ratified by them, are under a definite obligation to take the necessary steps with regard to the ratification as soon as practicable."

"Nevertheless, so far none of the ex-enemy governments has ratified the treaties, nor has taken any action in that direction, as for example, consulting their legislatures, although I understand the Finnish Government intend to do so in the very near future.

Lord Jowett commented that this seemed very shortsighted of the ex-enemy governments, since this failure on their part to show clearly that they mean to honor their signatures to the peace treaties and to do whatever they can on their side to hasten the re-establishmnt of normal relations must have a bad effect on the Allied Governments and may well cause the latter to hesitate about depositing their own ratifications of the treaties. He said that this delay on the part of the ex-enemy governments to ratify the treaties may well be appreciably to postpone the coming into force of the treaties.

Although he did not specify this point, the postponement of the entry into force of the treaties might well entail the postponement of the withdrawal of the Allied forces of occupation which takes place within ninety days after the entry into force of the treaties.

Such a delay would be regarded as most unfortunate since His Majesty's Government are anxious that they should come into operation as soon as possible because it is clearly desirable that the technical state of war which still exists should be terminated, the occupation forces withdrawn and the former enemy countries able once again to take their proper place in world society. The British Government have already made known their views and urged upon the ex-enemy countries ratification at the early possible date practicable.

This is the time of year when—

You notice how much heavier a lawn mower is than a snow shovel . . .

You throw off your worries about the standing of the local hockey team, but wonder whatever can be done to put the baseball nine in a respectable position . . .

You pull the wadding out of the cracks around the storm windows, but remember you'll need some to stuff around the screens . . .

You realize with relief Johnnie can now let off steam out of doors, but that this will happen in company with Willie Jones, Joe Cziewski, and Titherington de Smythe, 3rd, right under your open study window . . .

You won't have to listen to Susie's phonograph "jam" sessions in the living room twice a week, but will soon hear them going on all over the neighborhood on warm summer evenings . . .

You can let the cat stay out all night, but won't have radar to help you aim the alarm clock.

But something down inside you has already stirred, wakening to all these gentle harbingers. Mendelssohn tried to say it in music—

Confusion of Tongues

The language gulf between the generations will grow wider and wider as time moves on and the older generation finds its stock of standard quotations fall on deafer and deafer ears. The familiar things from the Bible, from Shakespeare, from Kipling, from Longfellow, grow paler and paler with the years, not to speak of our occasional lingering remnants from the classic tongues. One wonders how safe it is now to speak to a teen-age audience about shibboleth and sibboleth, the coat of many colors, the walls of Jericho, the Good Samaritan, the Gadarene swine, the road to Damascus. How much longer will it be safe to allude to all the pomp of yesterday which is now like Nineveh and Tyre; or the youth who bore midst snow and ice a banner with the strange device; or Sic semper tyrannis or Labor omnia vincit? asks the New York Times.

Teach Youth Useful Things

The wise approach to the problem of juvenile delinquency is based on the assumption that boys who get into trouble are boys who have nothing else to do. It is a wise parent who encourages his sons to put their hands to useful things. He will go to some trouble to provide whatever they need to pursue the instinct of self-expression in the making of things. Countless men, so encouraged in youth, find that skills then acquired become sources of gratification through life. Needless to say, young builders are not conspicuous for the delinquents in their ranks, Detroit News remarks.

Vile Talk

The city council has been asked to order more police patrolling of local streets in an endeavor to stamp out vile talk. No citizen needs to be told about the prevalence of such talk used by men, not drunkards alone, but by those in their sober senses; by boys, not exclusively bad lads, but those from good homes, and even by women and girls. It may be just a habit with the older people, but for the younger ones it is just another way of showing their smartness, says St. Thomas Times-Journal.

TAX OF TIME

A fellow's "as old as he feels," they say.
"As old as he acts," say I.
There's a tax of time which we all must pay
As the years go winging by.

This tax of time is an annual toll,
To be met on the day it's due,
And that is a fixed assessment roll
There is no one to review.

Some whimper and moan when the bill appears,
Some grumble it's much too high,
But we pay in full for the passing years,
Whether we smile or sigh.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

April 26th., 1927.

Mayor Eardley Wilmot returned today from Toronto.

Mr. Edward Quinlan of Montreal is the guest of Dr. J. J. Robertson.

Mr. Karl VanAllen has returned to Toronto to complete his course at the College of Education.

Invitations to the closing dance of the Palencia Club will be out in a few days. A brilliant affair is anticipated.

Mr. Howard Clarke was in Toronto yesterday to attend the Golden Wedding of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Clarke. Four sons, four daughters and their families were present together with friends to the number in all of fifty. Mr. Clarke's mother is 71 years of age and his father is 75 years of age. They have lived in Toronto for many years.

30 YEARS AGO

April 26th., 1917.

Belleville bakers have advanced the price of bread from 14 cents to 16 cents for a three pound loaf. It is said that the price is likely to go higher.

At a meeting of the Belleville Board of Health yesterday afternoon, Mr. Thomas Wills was appointed sanitary inspector at a salary of $65 per month.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the Women's Canadian Club in the city hall last evening to hear Mrs. H. P. Plumptre of Toronto speak on the subject, "Women as Patriots." Mrs. Plumptre is a leading war worker and is Hon. Secretary of the Canadian Red Cross Society. Her address was most interesting and informative. A vote of thanks to the speaker was moved by Mrs. F. E. O'Flynn and seconded by Mrs. S. W. Vermilyea.

40 YEARS AGO

April 26th., 1907.

Mr. Colville of Toronto addressed the young men's meeting at the Y.M.C.A. yesterday. During his stay in the city he is the guest of Mr. H. C. Hunt.

Messrs. McKay and Anderson rendered pleasing vocal solos at the Y.M.C.A. meeting yesterday afternoon.

At a reception under the auspices of the teachers and pupils of the Belleville High School, which was held last evening, many parents and a number of the school trustees were present and enjoyed the excellent program of music and recitations. At the conclusion of the program the Rev. A. L. Geen presented Maurice LaVoie with the Governor-General's gold medal which he won two years ago. The medal is donated yearly to the youngest pupil making the highest marks at the entrance examinations. Refreshments were served by the girls of the school.

Mr. Fred Burrows and Mr. Thomas Holgate of Toronto, old Belleville boys, are spending a few days in town.

50 YEARS AGO

April 26th., 1897.

Dr. Gibson, Dr. Day and Judge Fraleck are spending today in Kingston attending a meeting at Queen's University.

Mr. W. P. Hudson went to Ernestown today.

Mr. H. Freeman Ketcheson left today for Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario.

Mr. Wellington Boulter was elected Mayor of Picton yesterday to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mayor Carter.

Mr. Thomas Walker of Rawdon township, former Warden of the county, was in town today.

Ald. Baldwin Falkiner, barrister, is spending today in Picton.

Dr. Dulmage, dentist, went to Deseronto today.

Mr. D. V. Sinclair is spending a few days in Toronto.

An M.P. May be Big Shot in Own Community But in Parliament He's Just One of 245 Little Cogs

By JOHN LEBLANC
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 26 —(CP)— The Little Man around this centre of government is the member of parliament.

Unquestionably, around Arthabaska or Yankee Harbor, the private member — that is the M.P. who doesn't sit in the Cabinet — is a big man. Up here, he's just one of 245 cogs in the legislative machine.

Probably he came here starry-eyed with a flock of new ideas for the improvement of his constituency and the country in general. But he soon found that the private member doesn't do much legislating.

When he talks — if he is "in order" and can catch the Speaker's eye against the competition—his words go down in the official record, into some of the newspapers and then, for the most part, into thin air. When he introduces legislation, it languishes, usually dies.

Graveyard of Aspirations.

The graveyard of these aspirations and causes that died a-borning is to be seen daily in seven pages of the "routine proceedings and orders of the day" of the House of Commons. These are listed resolutions brought in by private members and for the great bulk of them have as much chance of passage as their sponsors have of flying to the moon.

So far, in almost two months of sessions, just one has sneaked through the legislative mill. And that was by an opposition member. By some magic of his own, John R. MacNicol, Progressive Conservative member for Toronto Davenport, wangled through a bill for a National Wild Life Week, though it got somewhat chewed up in the process.

Last year, one private measure got through the Commons — the "Canada Day" bill. It was mauled by the Senate, came back to the Commons for final approval and eventually died a lingering death.

Many Ambitious Projects.

This year, there are plenty of ambitious projects on hand. Here are some of them, picked out at Random from the legislative boneyard:

One member wanted to include in King George's title the designation, "King of Canada."

T. L. Church (PC-Toronto-Broadview) wants federal action to "lessen, curb, regulate and abate" loss of life through drownings, fires, highway accidents and other causes.

Others want bridges over the St. Lawrence, nationalization of mines, shorter speeches in the House, loud-speakers for the Commons, more fur farms, a hospital ship for Eskimos.

And so on, most of them doomed before they are launched on life. For the smart sponsors are the one who catch the ear of a Cabinet member and bring their pet projects into the light of day anonymously via the government channels.

They remain unsung, but their works go marching on. The others just remain unsung.

Three Proposals For Palestine Committee Studied

Lake Success, April 26 — (AP) —Three alternate suggestions for composition of the proposed Palestine fact - finding committee were understood to be under consideration today by the five major powers of the United Nations.

An authoritative source said the suggestions were put forward in an effort to get Big Five agreement on a specific plan before the special session of the U. N. Assembly takes up the Holy Land problem next Monday.

The Big Five are concerned with these alternatives:

1. A small committee, probably limited to 12 small "neutral" countries.

2. A small committee of about a dozen members composed of the Big Five, an Arab state, possibly some Jewish representatives, and five smaller neutral states.

3. A committee composed of all members of the security council, the economic and social council and trusteeship council. This would total 26 members and would assure Big Five representation and three Arab states.

Odd Characters Gave Variety To Town Life

(From the Brockville Recorder and Times)

One of the things that older people —and people not so old—sometimes mourn as towns grow larger and more urbanized is the apparent disappearance of many of the "characters" whose peculiarities of behavior or appearance made them community figures commanding either respect, reproach or amusement.

Today, when so many people seem to be cast in much the same mould and to pursue the same mode of living, even to adopting the same type of thinking and the same sort of clothing, there seem to be far fewer of these out-of-the ordinary individuals just as the uncrowned kings who used to reign supreme in our country villages have largely vanished from the scene.

Every place used to have its celebrities. Many of the politicians, for instance, were rather extraordinary individuals. Today for instance we have no "Ed" Donovan, looking every inch the politician and always ready to speak at any lawn social or bun feed, to represent us. Nor is it likely that we will have another "Doc" McAlpine suddenly summoned from his ministrations to an ailing horse or cow to sit in the seats of the mighy in Queen's Park.

In our municipal politics as well we are not apt to find another "Chicky" Davis dragging a snake down King Street and addressing it periodically by the name of an adversary with whom he was in perpetual and violent disagreement. Nor will the counties council again see a member like Bruce Holmes who could always be dependent upon to make his appearance on state occasions with a lengthy address of his own peculiar composition dutifully adorned with massive red seals. Many a visiting dignitary must have winced when he foresaw the ordeal that lay ahead of him in having to listen to the fullsome praise of the reeve of Athens.

Gone, too, are people like long-haired Arza Sherman the herbalist, "Doc" Dyer, the wrestler and court crier, the Brockville man of unrecalled name who used to pause periodically as he strode along King Street and give one of his feet a stout kick with the other one, the tobacconist who kept a miniature menagerie in the rear of his premises, the other character who affected for Summer wear a black morning coat with white trousers and shoes from which his toes sometimes protruded.

Gone as well are the men of uncertain means of subsistence and brokendown gentility who used to hang about the approaches to the hotels in the days of the open bar hoping against hope that some acquaintance would invite them inside.

Today our population suffers from too much sameness, alike. Community life has lost much of its color and spice. We don't have first-class political rows such as we used to enjoy. People have become too respectable to call one another publicly by choice epithets. They are apparently afraid of expressing themselves in either word or deed contrary to accepted belief or usage. We have even got away from the little groups which met night after night in the back shops or shoemaker's establishment to debate the issues of the day and frequently to reveal a surprising knowledge of public and religious affairs.

Maybe it is just as well but the thought persists that in older days whether they were good or bad, life in our smaller communities was a good deal more interesting than it is at the present time.

COMPENSATION FOR LOST SLEEP

Maybe it is pretty difficult or even impossible to make up for lost sleep if one is prevented from sleeping enough for a prolonged period of time, because that breaks down physical health by interfering with the processes of repair of wear and tear and, if the victim is not of mature age, the process of growth. When such breakdown goes beyond possibility of repair the victim is indeed an invalid, a wreck.

But if a normal individual loses half or all of a night's sleep now and then, an extra hour or two of sleep the following night will generally make up for the sleep lost.

There is no ill significance whatever and no harm done by lying for two or three hours sleepless, if you are of mature age. Instead of getting worried about "insomnia" (which is not a disease but just a two dollar word for remaining awake at times when you think you should be asleep) and trying all sorts of remedies or stratagems which purport to promote sleep, the sensible way to take it is like this: Just say "Hello—not sleepy, eh?" and either get up and read a while longer or if you're all tucked in and the house is cold, just close your eyes and start off on any of the pleasant excursions you made when you were a kid, dwelling for a moment on every detail you can recall, etc., and the chances are you'll never get back from that fishing or hickory nutting or hiking excursion.

For the benefit of insomniacs who did not read the preceding article I repeat, no one has ever lost his mind for want of sleep. Crazy people someitmes are unduly wakeful because they are crazy, but wakeful people do not go crazy because of insomnia. So this, at least, is a poor excuse for indulging in any sort or hypnotic or sedative drug or medicine to make you sleep or to help you sleep. Sleep induced by a drug is far less restorative than natural sleep.

Past middle age, if you ever are middle aged—I don't believe in it myself—as I see it we are all young until we reach the peak and then instanteously we are old—but one past the peak needs less and less sleep. If you remember, Thomas Edison was well past his peak when he plumped for four hours of sleep as sufficient for a normal person — and remember, too, Edison's habit of napping when he felt like it in his laboratory or office.

Hold off the dope, folks, until we point up this inquiry into the sleep habit in another article.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

The Good Morons

Since I read your Little Lesson ("The Constipation Habit") through the second time and applied the teachings in it with such satisfaction I realize why some of your readers are incensed at your use of the term Moron. To these, like myself, it is a magnanimous compliment which only a moron could deem derisive.

(G. F. J.)

Answer — Of the thirty-five to forty million morons in the country probably 90% are fine citizens, good parents, loyal friends, altogether admirable, loveable people. Moron or not, it is sheer stupidity to have the constipation habit and depend on any kind of artificial aid to "keep regular," as the nostrum mongers teach you low grade—you gullible—credulous customers to call it. It might not do you any harm, at that, to read Little Lesson No. 25 not just once but the second time. For a copy send twenty-five cents and a stamped envelope bearing your address. Ask for it in writing, not with a clipping.

Tonsils and Adenoids

You have had so many excellent articles about tonsils, but I failed to clip . . . if you have any literature on the subject.

(Mrs. C. D. A.)

Answer — Nearest my tripe approaches to "literature" is the opinion some medical colleagues have expressed — that it makes good literature or at least as good as Sears Roebuck for some purposes. Send a stamped envelope bearing your address and ask for pamphlet "Tonsils and Adenoids."

And/Or

In one article you used the term "and/or" eight times. Judge Learned Hand in New York passed a lawyer's petition back with the suggestion that the attorney eliminate that irritating term.

(H. W., Jr.)

Answer—The judge was probably right. In the article to which you refer I used the Websterian sense — eructations of gas and /or air. Webster says butter and/or eggs means either butter or eggs or butter and eggs. Let Judge Hand play around with that!

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What is "The Loop" in Chicago?

The Chicago River and its North and South branches divide Chicago into three sections known as the North, West and South sides.

"The Loop" is the popular name for a district on the South Side encircled by a "loop" of the elevated railroad lines running into the city from the suburbs.

It was formerly the chief business, financial, theatrical and hotel centre of the city, and, although the business centre and trade district has spread beyond these bounds, it is still the heart of the congested section.

The actual "loop" made by the elevated railways is an elongated area bounded on the north by Lake Street, on the south by Van Burean Street, on the east by Wabash Avenue, and on the west by Fifth Avenue far over on the West Side.

When an elevated railway was built north and south along Wells Street a district about one square mile in area on the South Side was completely surrounded by the elevated railways and the name "Loop" was at one time largely restricted to this district.

But as the city grew there was a tendency to extend "Loop" to a larger section and not to restrict the term to the area actually inclosed by the loop of the elevated railways.

At present "The Loop" generally means a district comprising an area of about one and a half square miles and lying between Lake Michigan on the east and the Chicago River and its South Branch on the north and west respectively and extending south to Twelfth Street.

This "forest of skyscrapers" is one of the busiest spots on the face of the earth.

Municipal Authorities Should Make Effort to Retain Control of Welfare Services Says Hon. W.A. Goodfellow

Ald. Chas. Hyde Named President of Organiztion Replacing H. B. Fetterly

For many years actively interested in community and welfare work in the city Alderman Charles L. Hyde was named president of the Children's Aid Society at the annual meeting and election of officers of that organization held Friday evening in Bridge Street United Church Sunday School rooms.

Alderman Hyde succeeds Mr. Hiram B. Fetterly as president of the C.A.S., Mr. Fetterly having acted in that capacity for the past ten years. His retirement was forced because of ill health. Mr. C. B. Morgan acted as chairman for the evening program.

Guest speaker for the meeting was Honorable W. A. Goodfellow, Minister of Public Welfare for Ontario. The speaker was introduced by J. Fred Wilson, M.L.A., for Hastings West who stated that Mr. Goodfellow had been in touch with the work of the C.A.S. since an early age when he became a member of municipal council. He had retained this interest when elected parliamntary representative for the county of Northumberland. Mr. Wilson paid tribute to the fine group of women who give time and energy voluntarily to further the work of the Children's Aid Society.

"It is indeed a pleasure to meet a group of Hastings county people, whose representatives in the provincial legislature are held in high esteem," stated Mr. Goodfellow. He was happy, also, to be present because "the Belleville branch of th Children's Aid Society is doing as fine work as is being done anywhere in Ontario."

Canadians Most Fortunate

"Canadians are the most fortunate people in the world today. Our standards of living are unexcelled; so it is we who should consider what we can do for less fortunate folk. Nevertheless, there are factors at work which tend to make us believe that there are many things wrong with Canada." To this he pointed out that there can be nothing very wrong with a system, which permits voters to vote out of power legislators who have not served their country well.

The danger of centralization of government to the extent that control of welfare services passes out of the hands of municipal authorities and into the hands of provincial or federal government was artessed. Increasing pressure by the municipalities for financial relief is causing a backward trend more efficiently deal with local toward government administration, which would be a grave mistake, as local authorities could problems.

Government At Crossroads

"The Ontario government is at the crossroads in so far as the administration of welfare services is concerned," continued the speaker. The government must now either administer these entirely, or pass their control to the municipalities. The private autonomy of the C.A.S. should be guarded closely, and as much money as possible raised by public subscription. Unless this is done steps will be taken which will give the government greater control.

"Do we ever sacrifice anything for others? Do we appreciate our privilege of living in a democracy, where, in spite of restrictions and controls, we have more real freedom than many other peoples?

"Too much fault is found with governments. People expect too much of the governments; individuals could do more. Local cooperative effort helps to promote any good cause. It is important that the people furnish their own services, since it is their money that is being spent, and it should be spent in the manner giving greatest value. Municipal government can give better value than can either Federal or Provincial, for these are both farther from the scene of action, making the executive cost higher."

Department Formed In 1930

Citing the growth of his own department, which had its birth in 1930, Mr. Goodfellow stated that the Department of Welfare would spend this year approximately 27 millions of dollars, to about 100,000 people. To the demand for increased old age pensions from the present $28.00 monthly, the speaker urged that consideration be given to the source of revenue. "We must confess," he said, "that the present rate is inadequate in some instances, but many elderly couples in rural sections are doing well on their monthly allowance, with 66,000 pensioners in Ontario receiving this assistance."

Although he was of the opinion that "indirect taxation is the proper source of revenue for the support of social services, of which the Children's Aid is the finest example," the speaker declared that he would not like to see these services pass completely into government control. "It is better that the C.A.S. Executive raise the larger part of the needed funds, so that members obtain a true concept of the work, and an interest in neglected children. There is no better way to make a good investment than in the future citizens of Canada".

Referring to unemployment relief, Mr. Goodfellow said, —"It is really a pension for people unable to apply for other assistance, and is administered on a 50-50 Federal-Provincial basis, but municipal responsibility would give better control and arouse more interest in individual cases.

"In conclusion let me say to the members of the C.A.S. in Hastings County that there is no greater work to be done than to make good citizens. The Society is doing a magnificent job, and it has a great job to do."

Thanks Expressed

Mr. Roscoe Robson, M.P.P., expressed the appreciation of the assembly for the words of encouragement given by the honorable member and said he believed "all workers have been benefited and inspired".

The chairman thanked Mr. Robson and welcomed representatives of other outstanding organizations, including the Y.M.C.A. and the V.O.N.

In the absence of Mr. C. Buskard, Mr. Harry Ackerman read the treasurer's report presenting $56,601 as the amount of money received during the year. Mrs. Jas. Cordes read a comprehensive report of money received and expended by the Clothing Committee, amounting approximately to $6,030 averaging more than $39 per child.

Musical Program

Miss Helen Cooke, singing two solos with Miss Leona Riggs as accompanist, contributed much to the evening's enjoyment. Mr. Morgan expressed appreciation.

Alderman H. Clarke presented the report of the nominating committee naming Mr. Charles Hyde as the new president. In assuming office Mr. Hyde thanked the society members for the honor bestowed upon him and expressed a wish for unanimous cooperation from the executive.

Belleville Bridge Club Concludes Enjoyable Year

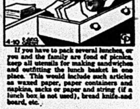
The Belleville Bridge Club closed another successful season at the Belleville Club on Friday night, when the prizes for the year were awarded, officers elected for the coming season and a buffet supper was served. Bridge occupied the major portion of the evening.

The entire slate of officers of last season were returned to office with Ted Hughes as president, George O'Brien vice president, W. B. Vandervoort secretary treasurer and Harry Trepanier, Jack White, Keith Carroll and John Kelleher directors. A committee of Frank Domenico, Edgar Rutherford and Bill Miller was appointed to arrange for a Ladies' Night in the near future. "Skit" Vandervoort, the efficient secretary of the organization was remembered by the club and presented with a Parker pen in recognition of his valuable service. A discussion period was held prior to the election of officers and it was moved that the rules and regulations that applied last year would again be in force.

The first prize for the year was won by Ted Hughes and Frank Martin, second by John Hibbard and Bill Tate, third by Walter Belair and Keith Carroll and fourth by Frank Domenico and George O'Brien. The division winners were Les Shiels and H. Kellar, John Kelleher and Hubert Turley, John Lawrence and Harry Trepanier, Dr. Jack Empson and George Williams and Frank Martin and Ted Hughes. The low penalty prize for the year was won by Frank Domenico and George O'Brien. The winners of the bridge tourney for the evening were William VanTassell and Frank Martin. A most delightful buffet supper was served by the steward of the club.

The thanks of the Bridge Club was extended to the officers of the Belleville Club for the kindly use of the clubrooms for the function.

Wife Preservers



If you have to pack several lunches, or you and the family are fond of picnics, keep all utensils for making sandwiches and outfitting the lunch basket in one place. This would include such articles as waxed paper, paper containers and napkins, sacks or paper and string (if a lunch box is not used), bread knife and board, etc.

Pleas for More Trained Workers For C.A.S.

A plea for additional trained social workers to assist in the work of the Children's Aid Societies was made by H. B. Fetterly in his annual report to the members of the local organization.

Retiring as president of the Hastings Children's Aid Society because of ill health, Mr. Fetterly was not present at the Friday night's annual meeting but his report to the organization was mimeographed and handed to members.

In his report Mr. Fetterly stated that for some years the supply of trained social workers had been absorbed by the government and he asked if it were possible for the supply of workers to be increased.

The president also suggested that the report of the provincial supervisor of the C.A.S. be made available to the local society as only in this way could much helpful information be given to the local board.

"Our board is anxious to improve but find impossible conditions to contend with," he said. "We can see no way of improvement until the housing situation is remedied. We would also like to add trained workers but find there are none to be had."

The retiring president in his report expressed pleasure that Hon. W. A. Goodfellow had been secured to act as guest speaker at the meeting.

Mr. Fetterly declared it had been a great honor to serve as president of the C.A.S. for the past ten years and noted that many changes had taken place in that time. The change was then being made whereby children were being placed in homes where they could grow up as normal human beings. This was said to be a vast step forward. With added responsibilities it had been necessary to increase the field staff and also the office staff.

Mr. Fetterly referred to a partial survey made some years ago when numerous places visited were found unfit for human habitation. A report had been made to the authorities but nothing was done, the reason being "That we have no place to put them." The same excuse was heard today.

The work of the field staff was commended as was the work of Miss Etchells of the clerical staff.

Supt. T.D. Ruston Presents Report At Annual Meeting

Superintendent Mr. T. D. Ruston in presenting his report paid tribute to Mr. H. B. Fetterly, who has, for the past ten years, given devoted splendid service as president, sparing neither himself nor his time in advancing the work of the society, regretting that, owing to ill health, "he must now pass the torch to another who will, we believe, hold it high and give every assistance in this great work of family welfare."

"As you no doubt will gather from the reports," said Mr. Ruston, "the Children's Aid Society is alert to its responsibilities and the present demands of social welfare. (We might point out that thirty years ago our expenditure for the year was $5,198.84, today it is $55,080.46.)

"The most important and valuable child and family welfare work is not creative but preventive to check descendency by the thorough study of its causes and by effectively remedying or eradicating them.

Child Needs Parents.

"The parent and child should not be separated because of temporary disability, nothing should be done to cause a definite and continuous separation if there is any hope of rehabilitating the parent and again restoring the normal relationship, as the natural order provides for parental care based upon love and affection for the support and training of the child.

In discussing the sub-normal child Mr. Ruston said, "he is our greatest worry. What can we do for him? He should not be an inmate of our receiving or foster home. He needs special care, protection, training and over-sight and you can hardly find a foster home that will take special care of him.

Owing to the Ontario Hospitals for feeble minded being full to capacity we have no place suitable for him. We should use all means possible to urge the Provincial Government to provide in certain centres schools for the sub-normal child. If those in authority could be persuaded to provide the necessary funds the future of these unfortunates could be guided right.

Adoption Act.

"One of the most pleasant experiences we have in our work is making out legal adoption papers, generally speaking for very young children. I may point out that a child must reside with the adoptive parents for a period of two years before full adoption will be granted by the court.

Unmarried Parents Act.

"The mother and child comprise a major social problem. We endeavor by all reasonable means to have the mother care and support her own child with the aid from the putative father. This year we collected $2,626.21 which of course, does not include payments mailed direct to the Department.

Appreciation expressed to the members of the clothing committee who Mr. Ruston stated had carried a heavy burden cheerfully. A sum of $6,030 had been spent for clothing for 294 children.

Mr. Ruston had further words of appreciation for H. W. Ackerman, chairman, and to executive and finance committee members who had devoted much time in checking and passing accounts, also to Col. B. C. Donnan and to S. Gordon Robertson for their assistance and counsel in legal matters. The various women's organizations and church groups had also assisted financially and had co-operated in the work.

Members of the Kinsmen and Kiwanis service clubs were thanked for their Christmas gifts and for arranging for summer picnics. The receiving home mothers and foster parents had shown fine understanding and co-operation, while the press had afforded liberal publicity to the work of the association.

"In conclusion, I wish to express my very sincere thanks to Mr. Fetterly and to every member of the Board of Management for the kind, considerate and helpful assistance and loyal support."

Fashion Flashes

EASY TO COME BY are the beloved silk prints of yesteryear, and at sensible prices, too! In the budget class, but looking like a million, is a silk print done in big blocks of blue, white, red and black, and fashioned with soft bodice, full sleeves and side draped skirt.

Very nearly all measurements are acceptable for jacket length, ranging from brief boleros to long, fitted tunics. Thirty-three inches is the length of a fitted torso jacket, collarless above an 8-button closing. The slim skirt is of navy blue wool crepe, and the wide, elbow-length capelet on the jacket is lined in red taffeta.

Dinner Dress

By PRUNELLA WOOD

Smart beige and black combine to make this attractive luncheon and dinner dress worn by Jane Wyman. Interest is centred above the waistline in the unusual neckline and new dropped shoulder effect, making this a wonderful dress for restaurant dining.

The lure of lace goes on and on, with new models and ideas each season. Fine black, Chantilly-type lace is used for a handsome evening dress made with very low off-shoulder neckline both fore and aft. Gown has fitted sleeves of bracelet length.

That clever designing woman, Schiaparelli, comes through with all sorts of delightful and novel ideas. One of these is a long box handbag of calf with a long flap that lifts to disclose a series of partitions on the order of the drawers of a wardrobe trunk.

It is only right for this season of romantic and beautiful fashions that flower hats should be back again. There are beanies and toques made entirely of violets or gardenias or tiny pink roses often with tiny green velvet ribbon bows for color contrast.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

BY WINIFRED E. WILSON

IDENTIFICATION BY BEHAVIOR

"See all the Swallows in a row on the telephone wire," Alice said, pointing down the road.

"How do you know they are Swallows?" Vera inquired. "They are too far away to tell."

"Oh, I can't see them very well," Alice admitted, "but every now and then one leaves, flies around swallowlike, and returns to the wire. Birds can frequently be identified by their behavior. Swallows love wires; flocks of them often sit like that. When a small grey bird clings upside down to the trunk of a tree you can be pretty sure it's a Nuthatch; when a Sparrow perches on a fence beside a country road it might be a Vesper or a Song Sparrow, although the latter would probably be on a post."

"Yes, I understand," said Vera. "And birds pick localities suitable to their special habits. We find Meadowlarks in fields, Hermit Thrushes in deep woods, Sandpipers on beaches, Gannets on cliffs, and Flickers in forests where there are big, old trees."

"They need big, old trees because in those trunks they make their homes. A Rose-breasted Grosbeak often chooses its home near a running stream; a Red-winged Blackbird prefers to build in a marshy spot. A house Wren generally comes close to residences: you know that by the name. We love it for that very reason and its friendly ways. But a Catbird, though far from shy otherwise, objects to having its nest discovered, and promptly deserts the family."

"How interesting it is to find that birds can be differentiated by their actions! Redstarts have a habit of opening and shutting their beautiful tails, Canada Jays are noted for their curiosity. Goldfinches talk as they fly."

"Yes, and even when a bird is seen in the twilight something about the characteristic pose helps us to tell its species. Haven't you noticed the angle at which different kinds perch? Of course everyone knows Owls sit absolutely vertically. But though most small song birds are about diagonal when at rest, some sit up pretty straight—like Cedar Waxwings and Least Flycatchers. Cuckoos seem to lie across a branch almost horizontally."

"And you might add that Chimney Swifts hardly perch at all."

"No, I suppose what they do can scarcely be called perching. But they do rest—in the chimney. They hang on to a perpendicular, inside, brick wall with their hooked claws."

Wars and Slumps Seem Real Cause of British Woes

Britain, sapped by two wars and a great depression, is fighting for her national existence in an unprecedented economic crisis. This is one of a series of stories giving Canadians detailed picture of the crisis, its causes, effects and the battle being fought to overcome it.

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 26 (CP)—The effects of two world wars, not one, and a world depression are causing the United Kingdom's economic problems today.

The 1939-45 conflict alone would have been bad enough.

Civilian factories were taken over for war use. Others were closed to concentrate production in the most efficient units. Civilian labor force was dispersed; and young men and women went into the forces of war industry instead of getting training in peacetime jobs.

German bombs wrecked hundreds of thousands of homes, factories, warehouses, docks and other structures, leaving a huge volume of construction and repairs.

Industries were unable to put in new machinery and equipment except for war production and old machinery fell apart for want of maintenance.

The value of the country's export trade was cut in half—falling from £470,000,000 in 1938 to £232,000,000—and the volume of exports fell even farther since the war brought higher prices. Before the February fuel crisis closed half of England's factories, volume was only 10 per cent above the pre-war level compared with a long-term target of a 75-per-cent increase.

There is still a big over-all deficit in the nation's overseas accounts, and it is most serious in Canada and the United States from which the United Kingdom must get half its imports. The Second World War made Britain a debtor nation instead of a creditor.

Depression Cycle

But it is necessary to go back to 1914 to get the full picture.

The First World War cost Britain almost £8,000,000,000. It was followed by a short-lived boom, a depression, another boom and another depression.

Basic industries, already out-of-date in comparison with their foreign competitors, carried out little reorganization. Mass unemployment reduced the need for greater mechanization. Prosperity was returning in the late '30s under the spur of war preparedness, but even then exports were less than imports, the difference being met by "invisible" exports such as investments abroad and shipping services.

And, when the Second World War came, Britain had not yet fully adjusted itself to the new economic situation created in 1914-18.

Today the country's economy is "more battered and distorted" than it has ever been, says Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the Board of Trade. There is not enough manpower to produce as much as the United Kingdom needs, unless there is increased factory mechanization and modernization—all of which takes time.

"The central fact of 1947," said last month's economic White Paper, "is that we have not enough resources to do all that we want to do.

"To get all we want, production would have to be increased by at least 25 per cent. This is clearly impossible in 1947."

Several Old-Time Gag and Song Artists Get Big Hand at Night Clubs

By PAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, April 26 —(CP)— Vaudeville may be dead but its ghost still puts up a lively show. Entertainers who used to bring guffaws from audiences in big theatres have transferred operations to the more intimate locale of the night club, where their antics evoke similar guffaws from a more sophisticated clientele.

Several of the old-time gag and song artists are appearing in Manhattan night spots now. Jack Pearl is carrying out his first night club engagement, and his personal appearance in 12 years, at Vanity Fair. Benny Fields is and Sophie Tucker is at the Latin Quarter.

Another pair of entertainers, Max Baer and Maxie Rosenbloom who once made a living in the boxing ring, moved this week from Vanity Fair to Rio Cabana in their own slapstick comedy routines.

Prices Down

The theatre is heeding President Truman's plea to do business for lower prices. When Gian Carlo Menotti's double billl of musical plays "The Medium" and "The Telephone" open next week the top price will be $4.20. "A Young Man's Fancy," also opening next week, will have a $3.60 top....the current maximum for most Broadway musicals is $6 but Dwight Deere Wiman says he will establish a $4.80 for his forthcoming revue, "The Fourth Little Show." ....Summer prices went into effect this week for "Carousel," with a high of $4.80.

Also Rans

Probably the toughest problem the New York Drama Critics Circle faced in balloting for their annual awards this week was to choose the best musical. As announced earlier, they chose "Brigadoon," the Scottish fantasy. Confronted with a galaxy of successful and first-rate productions in the same field, they made these subsidiary selections: "Finian's Rainbow," second; "Annie Get Your Gun," third; "Call Me Mister," fourth, and "Street Scene," fifth. Runner-up productions for the best play of the season, which was "All My Son included Lillian Hellman's "An other Part of the Forest," thi and "Joan of Lorraine," T Maxwell Anderson play fourt Eugene O'Neill's "The Icem Cometh" was judged second be ....in the foreign division, "N Exit," Jean-Paul Satre's gri drama about hell, was an ea winner over "The Whole Wor Over," by Konstantine Simono

Educational Notes

As a measure to promote educational publicity and to assist in the stimulation of community interest in education and to give the public correct information regarding education both in Belleville and throughout the district, the Belleville Teachers' Council each week will contribute a column to appear in the Ontario Intelligencer under the heading "Educational Notes".

The Belleville Teachers' Council is an organization representing teachers of the four public schools and the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School.

THE WALL OF EDUCATION

The process of educating a child may be compared to a stone-mason or a brick-layer building a wall. The bricks which the teacher uses are the days of attendance at school, and the mortar is the teacher's ability to bind the new lesson taught to the knowledge which the child already has.

Just as the brick-layer, who has the right number of bricks, makes a strong, well-made wall; so the pupil with perfect attendance, builds himself a sturdy wall of education. Now let us consider the pupil who misses the occasional day at school. In order to get all the extra work this pupil must catch up the lost time by himself. This means extra work which is done with what little help the teacher can give in the face of handling a large class of regular attendants.

Next we have the pupil who misses many days of school. This boy or girl finds it impossible to make up the lost time, and as a result of this, arrives at the end of the year with many large gaps in his or her education. This pupil is in a very dangerous position. If a brick-layer built a wall with bricks missing at irregular intervals, it would be quite evident to all concerned that, even if these bricks were inserted afterwards, the wall would not stand up or be safe to build upon.

To the experienced teacher this is just as evident in the child with irregular attendance. This child has many weak parts in his or her wall of education. So, fellow-parents, let us give our children a chance and when you feel inclined to send little Jimmie down town on an errand, think for a moment. Won't that errand wait until after four? Can't you work it into your own program? Give the youngster a chance and send him to school.

ARTS AND CRAFTS

It is now quite generally known that an industrial arts and crafts shop, centred at Queen Victoria School, has been set up for the four Public Schools in Belleville.

The transformation of a basement room to a bright and cheery shop has brought favorable comment from many sources. A hardwood floor has been laid, the walls painted in light shades of green and the ceiling in flat white. All equipment is painted light grey, blending with the color scheme of the shop. Fluorescent lighting, which adds to the brightness of the colors, has been installed.

The shop is equipped with power and hand tools to accommodate twenty-four pupils, twelve at woodwork, six at sheet metal and six taking blue print reading. Each pupil will spend half of his total shop time at woodwork and a quarter of his total time at each of the other two activities.

Perhaps the aims in an Industrial arts and crafts shop, such as this, may be considered under three heads. The first is to develop the mechanical intelligence and skills of the child and to broaden his knowledge and appreciation of home and industrial situations. The second aim is to develop the child physically through handwork and instil in him healthy habits and attitudes toward work, so that he will become a more intelligent producer or consumer of industrial products. Thirdly, we try to inculcate in the child an appreciation of good design and craftsmanship which embraces the development of self-satisfaction in doing things well.

The benefits received from this type of education will undoubtedly be of great use to the boy throughout the rest of his life.

THE GIRLS' HANDICRAFT CLASS

For the first time in the history of the Belleville Public Schools we have an all Girls' Handicraft Class. Each member of this class is thirteen years of age or older.

The girls are instructed in various crafts such as clay modelling, mask making and paper mache work.

One day a week the class attends the Home Economics Centre where the girls receive valuable training in sewing and cooking.

Typewriters have been acquired and each girl spends a part of every day learning to operate the machine.

Regular academic work is carried on, too, along lines which will be useful to the girls in the future.

We teachers of such classes realize that every child is an individual and therefore all children should not be taught alike. Some excel in arithmetic, others in reading; still others in handiwork. We try to note these differences and teach accordingly. We endeavour to encourage the child in the fields in which she excels most. High marks in these fields will compensate for low marks in others. We try to make the child happy.

SPEECH CORRECTION CLASSES

Special speech correction classes have been held this year in each of the Public Schools. Pupils with speech defects varying widely in type and severity—stutterers, cleft palate cases, those with delayed speech, and those who lisp, have been attending these classes.

In these periods first of all the child is taught to relax. The relaxation period is followed by tongue and breathing exercises. Correct formation of vowels and consonants is taught and these are further fixed in the child's mind by games, poems, stories and conversation.

Two things especially are stressed in these classes—children must speak very slowly and must learn not to worry about mistakes.

Throughout the year children have seemed interested in their speech classes and in many cases report that they practise exercises at home. Much improvement has been noted as a result,

The changing of the guard is a colorful sight anywhere in the world. For years tourists have been poking cameras through the bars around Buckingham Palace photographing the King's men as they strut their stuff. But the ordinary Thomas, Richard and Henry don't go shutter-bugging around Mr. Stalin's Kremlin with impunity. That is why this picture is unusual. It shows the changing of the guard at the fabulous Kremlin with the usual sightseers in left background. The towered building was a church during the Czarist regime.

Grim Austerity Britain's Hope for Sound Prosperity

Britain, sapped by two wars and a great depression, is fighting for her national existence in an unprecedented economic crisis. This is the first of a series of stories giving Canadians detailed picture of the crisis, its causes, effects and the battle being fought to overcome it.

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 26 (CP)—Shortages are the United Kingdom's only surplus.

The one word describes this country and its way of life almost two years after the end of the war in Europe: shortage of coal and electricity... shortage of manpower... shortage of raw materials... shortage of modern factories... shortage of food... shortage of homes... shortage of transport ... shortage of dollars.

When the Anglo-American offensive was launched in North Africa in late 1942, Winston Churchill said it was "not the beginning of the end but the end of the beginning."

That is the United Kingdom's position today in its fight back to peacetime normal.

Reconversion of industry from military to civilian output is virtually complete. More than 7,500,000 men and women have been demobilized from the services and straight war work, and put to peacetime work with little unemployment. But these are the easier stages.

"We have now come face to face with the real difficulties of the situation," says Sir Stafford Cripps, President of the Board of Trade, "difficulties which are not transitory in their nature, but which will require all our most determined efforts to overcome."

They are difficulties that threaten Britain's prosperity for all the future, and her prestige in world affairs.

Great Obstacles Ahead

"We may never restore the foundations of our national life," warned Prime Minister Clement Attlee's economic White Paper last month.

Not until this year did the risk come home to the people generally. Millions were left idle, vital exports were slowed and home shortages intensified by coal and power cut-offs that stopped half of England's productivity.

That can happen again in 1948. If it does, Attlee's government will be in danger and post-war austerity will became real hardship, no matter what administration is in office.

Coal is the fundamental problem.

Without it, higher production is impossible and the manpower shortage will be replaced by widespread unemployment.

Without higher production and full employment, there is no chance of reaching the long-term "prosperity" target for exports—175 per cent of 1938 volume.

Without expanded exports, there must in the long run be less imports.

And fewer imports mean not only less food and consumer goods for everyone in the United Kingdom, but also smaller British purchases in Canada. The Dominion as well as the United Kingdom will suffer.

If there is enough coal—even the 200,000,000-ton goal set by the Labor government for 1947 is only enough for the most vital purposes—other problems are crowding to replace it as the fundamental difficulty.

Electricity Problem

Electricity shortages, now curtailing production, cannot be met without new generating plants that will take several years to build.

Labor is not only scarce but poorly distributed. The coal mines, agriculture and the cotton mills, to name three undertakings essential to the nation's well-being, are sadly undermanned while less important industries can offer higher pay and easier work—and get the help they need.

If power and labor problems are met, there are critical shortages of raw materials, machinery and factory construction and modernization that must be overcome.

The British railways, run down by seven years without full maintenance of right-of-way and rolling stock, may soon have to impose speed limits in the interest of safety. The merchant marine is under strength and there is no top-flight British planes.

What Britain needs, Sir Stafford says, is "a steady drive like that which followed the Dunkerque period of the war, when the people, never sparing themselves, remorselessly drove forward production on every front, but particularly upon those which were then critical."

For the United Kingdom, that means more individual effort, and probably more sacrifice.

NEW REFORMATORY FOR WOMEN PLANNED

St. Catharines, April 25—(CP) —Municipal Affairs Minister Dunbar told the Rotary Club here yesterday that a new reformatory for women is planned to replace the antiquated Mercer Reformatory.

Mr. Dunbar, who is also Ontario Minister of Reforms Institutions said that instead of delinquent boys of all ages being kept under one roof as in the past, the current system calls for them to be placed in separate reformatories and schools. The boys are encouraged to learn while serving their time.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

An Excellent Lesson in Tact

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Yesterday I overheard, on a bus, a bit of conversation between what I judged was a mother and her late-teen-age daughter. They were talking about going to a party and the girl said, "They're inviting a lot of people . . . mostly Marion's friends, but some old people too." To which her mother replied, "You should say 'older people', my dear." Was she referring to some rule of etiquette in this correction? As a matter of fact, I found myself deeply interested in what she said, but I have not been quite able to figure it out.

Frances

Yes, the mother was referring to what may be called a "Rule of Tact." The idea of this suggestion is that it is tactful, in referring to your elders, to say older people . . . never old people. Everyone knows that he or she is older than someone, but no one wants to be referred to as old.

Courteously Taking Leave After An Introduction

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for a woman to say when she is taking leave of a man she has just met, "I'm very glad to have met you", or is this proper only for a man to say to a woman?

Doris

This pleasant comment about a meeting may properly be made by either a woman to a man or a man to a woman. It's just a courteous remark for anyone to make.

Dramatic Entrance for Bride at House Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. We are planning to have a house wedding soon, in the afternoon. The attendants will be only a matron of honor and a best man. The house will be decorated by a florist, but I would very much appreciate your judgment about where to locate the ceremony-place. We have a staircase at one end of our living-room, a fireplace at the end opposite, and an archway (leading to the dining-room) at one side of the room. I think the fireplace is where the improvised altar should be; others in the family think the archway is the best place. What is your advice? Also, is it all right for the bride to come down the staircase and enter the living-room for the ceremony? And the matron of honor too?

2. If you say that it is correct for the matron of honor to precede the bride down the staircase, how far ahead of the bride should she be?

3. Would it be correct for us to have records of the wedding music played on our phonograph?

W. N.

1. I should think it would be the most effective and artistic plan to have the bride come down the staircase and proceed across the room to the improvised altar in front of the fireplace. But the real decision should be based on where you think would be the best vantage point for the majority of the guests.

Yes, the matron of honor should come ceremoniously down the stairs first, and there should be a dramatic wait of a minute or so before the bride comes down the stairs. At the foot of the stairs the bride's father is waiting, and as she reaches the last step he joins her, she puts her left hand on his right arm and together they walk to the ceremony-place.

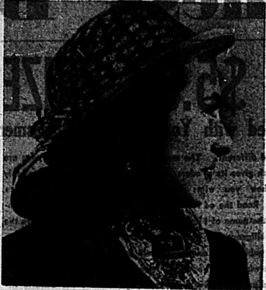
Smart Scarf Dance



By ALICE ALDEN

The scarf has certainly wound its way into the fashion scene, and has become much more than a colorful accessory. Shown here is a delightful, easy and economical way to bring a touch of Spring to the simplest wardrobe. Glentex designed these handsome squares of pure silk in paisley print, one of which is used to trim a bowler, the other for a gilet. To trim the hat, simply turn down one corner of the scarf to cover the crown and then tie the ends so that the point hangs down in back. For the gilet tie the scarf, cowboy fashion, and anchor it with a clip or pin.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

You Can't Be in Love With Two Persons at Once

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I find that I am in love with two very fine men. I am 25, and old enough to know what love is.

I have been going with both fellows for almost two years. At different times, both have proposed to me, and I knew that, some day, I would have to choose between the two. One is in the Conservatory of Music and 25 years old; the other is training as a mechanic and is 27.

What should I do? Do you think it is best to tell both that I will not marry them? I can't hurt either of them.

"Miss Mixup"

Dear "Miss Mixup:"

Your age, in years, has nothing whatever to do with being "old enough to know what love is.' The first is a mere matter of arithmetic; the second is the achievement of maturity.

If you really knew what love was, you would not think yourself in love with two different people. The person in love cannot see anybody in the world except the one person on whom his or her affections are set. The very fact that you think yourself in love with more than one person proves that you are in love with neither.

What you are is simply attracted by and interested in these two men. But I certainly advise you to wait until you are so sure about one that the other does not enter into the picture, before you start thinking about choosing a husband.

This Mother Should Have More Faith in Herself

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a boy of 16 and do not generally take girls seriously. However, when I do go to a party with my parents and happen to meet a perfectly nice girl, my mother will look at us and ask me what we are doing. My father says, "Let him alone, he's old enough to know what he is doing," but my mother pays no attention to this.

Once when my cousin, his friend and two girls and myself were going for a ride, my mother found out and decided to come with us. This made me feel like a dog that had to be constantly watched. She seems to want to pick my girl friends. It isn't me she doesn't trust, but all girls, except those she knows personally.

Can you possibly help me show my mother that I am old enough to know right from wrong and that, if I had any intention of doing anything wrong, I would not be doing it while she was around?

"Despondent"

Dear "Despondent:"

I agree with you that your mother should have more faith in young people, and that it is very foolish to take the attitude that they need constant chaperoning. She also ought to have more faith in herself and the way she has brought you up, because, if she has given you the right standards and ideals, she would know that she could safely trust you not to do anything that would be contrary to the code in which you have been trained.

Your father seems to be on your side and so don't you think he could help you in this problem? Have you ever tried to talk with him, when the two of you were alone together, and ask his advice as to what you might do to change your mother's attitude. I should think that a frank talk, "man to man," might have very good results. If you haven't already tried this, I would certainly make an opportunity to do so right away. Between the two of you, you should be able to work out a program that would win your mother over, if you go about it tactfully and don't quarrel with or antagonize her.

A Fine Pair of Double-Crossers

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a married woman with three children and have been married three weeks to my second husband.

After my first husband's death, I started going with a married man whom I loved more than anyone. We quarreled and I married this other man. My husband says he loves me more than life and I know he will be good to me and my children, but I don't know whether I love him or not. When I'm with him, I do, but I am still seeing the married man.

Which would be best for me to do—try to live with my husband and try to learn to love him,—or divorce him and go with the one I know I love and who loves me? He has a family and is 15 years older than me. I have got to choose one or the other soon.

"A Worried Soul"

Dear "Morried Soul:"

So you married your present husband, who loves you and who you believe will be good to you and your children, to spite a man who has been double-crossing his family to play around with you! Now you are sorry that you acted in such a hurry and you are double-crossing your husband to keep up your illicit affair with this other man. What kind of woman are you, anyhow?

If you have the slightest vestige of sense, whether moral, common, or any other variety, you will thank your lucky stars that you have acquired a man who will take the responsibility for you and your children, and you will make up your mind to stop seeing a man who obviously has no intention of taking any such responsibility. He sounds to me like a thoroughly dishonorable character, and the way you are acting you are running him a close second.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Little Daughter and the Looking Glass

To a greater extent than most mothers realize, the happiness of a little girl depends upon her appearance. She is ever conscious of her looks, ever fearful that she will be dressed differently from her comrades. The codes and tenets of childhood are clear - cut and harsh. This is true not only of little girls, but also of boys. The head of a children's wear shop assures us that the boys are even worse than the girls, refusing to consider any wardrobe item unless the "other guys" are wearing it.

A mother should consider her child's ideas and suggestions when selecting clothes for the youngster who knows more than mother about what is going on in her infantile social circle. It just isn't fair to make a kid wear a frock or coat or hat in which she feels miserable if one can be found that pleases her. It is a small indulgence. You hear mothers spouting all the time about how they want to make their children happy. Then let them give thought to what the child is to wear.

If the mother has good taste, chances are there will be no difficulties, arguments, or tears. A child recognizes and respects good taste.

So it is with the arrangement of the hair. If Betty doesn't like pigtails, why should she have to endure them? If she wants a fluffy bob, why not? It can't make much difference to mother, since Betty will always look pretty in her eyes, but it may mean a whale of a lot to the child. Childhood isn't all honey and roses. It has its tragedies, too. Children are much more sensitive than adults. Why shouldn't they be? How can they figure out that certain matters are merely trifles, should be forgotten? Often enough grown-ups can't do that. They aren't so smart or so wise either.

A mother should create in a child's mind the desire to be dainty, to be beautifully clean, to take care of her clothes. She must direct her along the right beauty paths, so that she will develop into a beautiful, well-groomed woman.

She must, above everything else, take excellent care of her teeth, brushing them night and morning. She must subject her head to the shampoo medium every fortnight, no matter how she hates the ordeal. She should be taught to brush her hair, to keep combs and brushes clean.

Teaching her pleasing manners can't start too early. An ill-mannered child will probably become an ill-mannered, disliked adult. The formation of character begins in infancy.

Fashion Flashes

VERY SMART toppers are coming to town or staying in the country. Cream white flannel, with a tattersall check in brown and yellow, makes a handsome topper — double-breasted with high closing and huge pockets.

NOT ALWAYS are novelties smart, but here is one very smart novelty in fur. It is a jacket of broadtail. The front, with its big patch pockets, is white; the rippled back and long, tight sleeves are black broadtail.

NEW SUITS come to town in ever-increasing variety. Pale mauve is used for the waist - length, tiny-peplum jacket of a pretty suit that has a circular skirt of navy blue woolen. Appliques of navy blue braid scrolls simulate collar and cuffs on the jacket.

MANY WOMEN like the beret when it is cut full and large. It is easy to manipulate, and is very smart, whether in straw, felt or fabric. Fine black straw of a pliable weave is used for a beautiful beret that has a cluster of black and white cigarette-type feather fancies at one side.

A SENSIBLE IDEA is that of the daytime summer frock made with attached hood. Pure silk print, in a flower and block design in green and black on white, is used for a neat frock of the shirtwaist type. The attached hood extends from the neat collar, and forms a cowl back when not worn on the head.

COOL AND LOVELY is pure linen now in the stores again—by the yard and made up. Pale beige linen is used for a neat daytime frock with diagonal side buttoning on the bodice and part way down the skirt, the buttons of rhinestone-set gilt metal. Self belt buckle in gilt, and enormous pocket on the skirt, are other details.

THE ROYAL ROAD to a good millinery wardrobe is easily achieved this year via the scarf route. A few untrimmed straw or felt shapes and a supply of scarves should allow for a constant hat change. The scarves are made up into big bows at the side or are bowed at back and have long ends.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

To have a game with Squat N. Burn is truly sudorific. The system, he has tried to learn is super-scientific. The method may be very grand, the one that he is playing, if even he could understand just what the guy was saying.

There was this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH	NORTH
♠K 9 5	♠A
♥None	♥Q J 7 5 3
♦A Q 6 5 3	♦K 9 7
♣A 7 5 4 2	♣K J 10 6

South opens the bidding with one diamond. North responds with one heart. If you are not sure that these bids are correct, you have been avoiding me. Yes you have.

Just for that you can ask your Aunt Minnie for an opening one bid requirements. She will take my book out of her purse and show you exactly what it takes for such a bid.

She will point to a spot where it says such a bid needs five tricks four of which are high cards, of which two are sure tricks. And the suit that is bid must be biddable.

Responder has six tricks. These are enough for a game with what the opener has promised. A one-jump is the signal for showing help enough for a game. Aunt Minnie can point to that in one line.

Then, why should north bid only one heart in the first response? An immediate one-jump makes an additional promise of two sure tricks. This is the only reason he did not one-jump. One line tells that, too.

Does north fear that he will not have a chance to show his additional values, if necessary? Never fear. Not if south knows the simple rules of bridge. And how simple.

A takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round. An easy rule to understand and remember. A rule that takes no more than one line in a book. Aunt Minnie can point it out to you.

You can make all this sound complicated with super-stuff. But what will it get you? Nothing but a headache.

Bonarlaw

Special Moving Pictures Shown

Bonarlaw. (Special.) — On Monday evening of this week a very interesting and instructive showing of moving pictures was held in St. Mark's Parish Hall, sponsored by the Springbrook Women's Institute. Mr. Doug. Ketcheson, of Foxboro, secretary for Hastings County, of the National Film Board of The Federal Government was in charge, with Rev. Paul Christeansen of Springbrook assisting and acting as chairman. The film explaining the Blue Cross plan for hospitalization was of especial interest to those present as it explained that groups such as Women's Institutes could take advantage of the plan at very low cost. Other films shown were "Tom Thomson, Canadian Artist, Woodsman and Guide", "Don't Be a Sucker", "Canadian Screen Magazine", and "Our Shrinking World". Most of the pictures were in technicolor and all were talkies, explaining in detail the pictures screened.

The chairman thanked Mr. Ketcheson for his splendid handling of the films which were shown free of charge

Members Say Canada's Share To U.N. Out of Line

Ottawa, April 26 —(CP)— Dissatisfaction with the disparity between the contributions of Canada and Soviet Russia to the United Nations budget was expressed at Friday's meeting of the Commons External Affairs Committee.

Gordon Graydon (PC-Peel), John Hacket (PC-Stanstead), Euguene Marquis (L-Kamouraska) and M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, agreed that Canada's contribution was out of line when compared with that of Russia.

They said they did not think Canada should have to pay more than half the Soviet contribution when Russia had so much greater a population. Canada's contribution was shown as 3.85 per cent and Russia's at six per cent.

Escot Reid, External Affairs Department official appearing before the committee, said the special U. N. committee on contributions had found difficulty in determining the per capita income of Russia and pointed out that the present scale of contributions was only temporary.

Mr. Graydon said that a country that paid more than half that of a big country should have a "little more to say" in the affairs of the United Nations and the decisions of the military staff committee.

"Canada," he said, "is allowed to pay heavily but is not allowed to have a voice in something that affects every citizen of this country."

G. K. Fraser (PC-Peterborough) said he thought Canada should retain her faith in the United Nations but at the same time "keep our powder dry and keep our armies up.'"

TAKEN TO PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia, April 26—(AP)— Three-year-old Patrick Stephenson of Kingston, Ont., was admitted to the Chevalier Jackson Bronchoscopic Clinic of Temple University Hospital last night for removal of a screw from his throat.

The hospital reported the boy would be under observation for an indefinite time before the operation is performed.

The child, who swallowed the nail while playing at home last Wednesday, was rushed here by automobile today after Kingston doctors attempted unsuccessfully to remove the obstruction with a bronchoscope.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Celeste Holm ran in from an afternoon visit to the circus, repaired the ravages (invisible) of the wind and settled down beside us on the sofa of her hotel suite, a double orange juice on her hand.

The fun and high spirits she portrays on the screen, and on the stage where she created the comedy role of Ado Annie in "Oklahoma!" come naturally to her but she doesn't like it talked about.

"I arrived at a party once where it happened," she said. "The hostess took me by the hand and introduced me as 'the funniest woman I've ever known,' and I got that feeling you get when you can't remember what you're supposed to say next and I couldn't think of a thing to say all evening, even dumb things."

In New York for a holiday to see some Broadway plays and her parents before starting work in 20th Century-Fox' next picture, "Gentleman's Agreement," she has been using spare moments to work on her dramatic role in it.

She will play Anne Dettrey, the girl who loves but loses the newspaper man-hero, to be played by Gregory Peck.

Miss Holm's own life is filled with the things she likes to do. Besides her acting she has her family of "big and little Schuyler to take care of." These two are her husband, Schuyler Dunning, a young airline executive, and their five-months-old son, Daniel Schuyler Dunning.

In addition she takes music and singing lessons and one of the regular courses at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Informs Broadcaster He Did Not Die Of Broken Heart

Amherst, N. S., April 26—(CP) —Fred Blair of Amherst has received a personal apology from Boston author Edward R. Snow because he (Blair) didn't die of a broken heart in a search for buried treasure.

In a recent radio broadcast Snow said Blair, lessee of Oak Island in Chester Basin, about 40 miles down the coast from Halifax, and its rumored buried treasure, had died of a broken heart because he had failed to find the cached riches.

Blair, who heard the broadcast, was quick to inform Snow he was alive and well. Snow hurried to Amherst to apologize — and to Oak Island to gather further material for a book on the unending hunt for the treasure.

Warner Bros., the film studio that gave picture audiences their first taste of lavish musicals and that so recently rang the bell with "Night and Day", carries on the tradition of "42nd Street", "Yankee Doodle Dandy", and the scores of others in their latest Technicolor musical extravaganza, "The Time, the Place and the Girl", the Alex Gottlieb-produced musical festooned with luminaries from the musical and entertainment fields, starring Dennis Morgan, Jack Carson, Janis Paige and Martha Vickers which is currently at the Belle Theatre.

Arthur Schwartz's and Leo Robins' melodic tunes, all of which are rapidly becoming national favorites, are sung by Morgan, Carson, Martha Vickers and Janis Paige. They are also rendered by Carmen Cavallaro, the poet of the keyboard, and danced to by Chandra Kaly and his unusual troupe of dancers and the popular tap dancers, the Condos Brothers. All of the musical numbers were created and staged by LeRoy Prinz. The film was directed by David Butler and the supporting cast features Alan Hale, Angela Greene and Donald Woods.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

Tomorrow, Sunday American baseballdom is honoring the greatest figure in its long and honorable history. In the world of sport no memory is brighter than that of the King of Swat, Babe Ruth, and his records are still intact. Jack Sher, New York sports expert has the following to say about the great Bambino and his colorful career on the diamond.

* * *

It is hard to realize that Babe Ruth is now a sports figure of the past. You somehow think of him as still at the plate, scowling at a pitcher, his big head cocked on one side, his toes turned in, his gargantuan bat waving nervously. No one before or since has ever smashed out such complete and satisfying home runs—730 of them.

* * *

The Babe was colorful, lusty, greathearted, intense. The crowds loved him, and for 22 years he gave them more than their money's worth. Even when he struck out, the Sultan of Swat did it with such gigantic gusts and anger that it was a wonderful thing to watch. After the 1919 gambling scandal, when baseball hit its all-time low in public esteem, Ruth more than any other player won the fans back to the game. They knew he would never let them down.

* * *

The Babe set many marks that still stand unchallenged. The one most people know is that record of 60 swats in one season. He also received the most bases on balls of any man in baseball, 2056; and he struck out the most times too. His lifetime batting average (.342) is among the first six in baseball. ("Shucks," Ruth once said. "I coulda hit a .66 lifetime average easy. But I woulda had to hit them singles.")

* * *

The greatest home run ever smacked was that unforgettable one in the 1932 World Series. The score was tied at 4-4 in the fifth inning and the Cubs had been heckling Ruth who had already hit one homer in the first. As he came to the plate a Cub player rolled a lemon out of the dugout toward him.

* * *

Ruth yelled, "If that bum Root throws in there, I'll knock it over the fence again." The Cubs jeered.

Root grooved one for a strike. The Babe held up one finger. Root sent another down the middle. Babe held up two fingers. Then came the most talked-of gesture in baseball history—the Babe pointed at the fence, indicating where he was going to put the next one.

On the next pitch, there was a solid crack and sailing through the air unbelievably straight, high and true was the home run that Ruth had called.

* * *

He was the most accessible of all ballpayers. He had a big grin, a ready handshake for everybody, most of all for the kids. Every year thousands of grimy little hands thrust out baseballs for the autograph that sent them away with eyes shining. On slow days in right field he would lean against the bleacher screen and chat with them. He would pose for pictures, pat the kids on the head, ask them questions, talk man-to-man with them about baseball.

* * *

Once he learned that a 13-year-old New Jersey boy had undergone a serious operation and had failed to improve. The boy's hero was Babe Ruth. The next morning the door of the hospital ward opened and in walked Babe. Ruth sat on the edge of the bed and talked to the boy as long as the doctors would let him stay. Then he told Johnny that he was going to hit a home run that afternoon, especially for him. He did hit that homer for Johnny, and the boy, his interest in life revived, immediately began to improve.

* * *

From 1915 to 1918 the Babe was known as the top pitcher in the American League. He beat the immortal Walter Johnson six times by a 1-0 score. In a crucial game with Detroit, with the Red Sox leading by one run, he faced the Murderers Row of that time—Ty Cobb, Bob Beach and Sam Crawford—and with the bases loaded, struck them out one-two-three. He still holds the World Series record for the most consecutive scoreless innings pitched, 29, against the Giants and the Cubs.

* * *

The Babe's seasonal holdouts for more money were a splendid source for newspaper copy when he was paid $52,000, then $52,000, then the unbelievable sum of $80,000 for a season's play. None of the holdouts were phony. The Babe believed he was worth a million dollars a year, the way he could hit those homers.

* * *

And his yearly clamor for more money benefited other players. A popular chant at the time, among less spectacular performers, was, "If that guy Ruth is worth $80,000 I must be worth at least a third as much!"

* * *

By 1929 the Babe had settled down quite a bit. He married a Follies girl, Claire Hodgson. A good wife, she has always been a steadying influence on him. He became a proud and careful parent of his two girls, Julia and Dorothy. He was learning moderation, everywhere except at the plate.

* * *

The money kept on rolling in. Ruppert was giving him a bonus for every clout swat. He spent money lavishly, but friends forced him to buy annuities before his retirement in 1935.

* * *

Soon after quitting the game Babe's name dropped out of the sport pages. And later, when we had a war on our hands, there were other things to think about besides baseball. Yet out in the tangled jungles of New Britain, a group of battle-worn Marines saw fanatically charging Japs break into the clear, shouting a chant both unbelievable and challenging—"To hell with Babe Ruth!"

* * *

No, he was not quite forgotten. Not to the Marines on New Britain that morning, facing an enemy whose supreme insult was to curse a man who meant America to the GI's, meant it as much as the hot dogs he loved, and the great game he played.

* * *

And then one day there was a charity game in Yankee Stadium, with some sort of ceremony beforehand. Walter Johnson, the great old-timer, was out in the pitcher's box warming up. Suddenly, a man stepped out of the Yankee dugout. A murmur crept through the crowd. Everybody stood up and then, from every section of the stadium, there came a crashing, swelling roar that the sight of only one man could create.

* * *

It was the Babe. He had the big bat over his shoulder, a big floppy smile on a face that the years hadn't changed much. He waved at the stands. He was 48 years old, but with the sound of the crowd in his ears he must have felt ageless that day.

* * *

The Babe took his position in the box. He stood the same way, feet close together, well back of the plate; broad, sloping shoulders; the old, earnest scowl on his face. And then he pointed his bat at the right-field bleachers.

* * *

Nobody believed he could still do it. It was a great gesture, though. Nobody believed him, except the old players who were there that day, the gray-headed sportswriters, the fans who had become fathers and grandfathers. Johnson wound up and threw a couple across. The Babe swung at one and missed. Nobody laughed that day.

* * *

Then Johnson sent one down the middle, hard and fast. The big club came off Ruth's shoulder, there was a ringing whack. The ball sailed into the air, high, far and beautiful. There was the long "aaah". The ball dropped into the right-field stands for a homer. The Babe trotted around the bases, jogging slowly. The smile on his face was fine to see.

* * *

George Herman Ruth played in an era of celebrated stars. But no sports memory is brighter than his—and his great records are still intact. He was the most colorful, sincere and lovable athlete of his time. If any one man deserves the credit, Babe Ruth must go down in history as the player who made baseball the American national sport.

* * *

The Ontario Baseball Association, it was learned today, has decided to create a number of new series and among them is one which will be known as the "intermediate C". This series, it was pointed out will be for the smaller villages with a population limit of 3,000.

* * *

The O.B.A. is to be commended on this step which is definitely one in the right direction insofar as the more or less isolated small communities are concerned, baseball communities, that is. It will definitely encourage the game and give some club "in the sticks" the chance to win a championship with players who are not strong enough to compete in intermediate "B".

* * *

It is expected that some 25 entries in the new class will be received and this will mean that competition will be very keen. The entire province will be represented, and the series will give these clubs which ordinarily suffered early elimination in the higher bracket, a chance to compete with teams of more or less equal calibre.

* * *

And while on the subject, it has been stated that the Bata Shoe Company, of Batawa, Ont., has generously contributed a trophy for competition in the proposed "C" group. This is a fine gesture on the part of the shoe people, and one that is not only appreciated by the Ontario Baseball Association but by all baseball interests as well.

Major Canadian Communities To Advance Clocks

(By The Canadian Press)

Of major Canadian communities from coast to coast, only a few scattered municipalities in Ontario and the west will remain on standard time after the general switch-over to summer daylight-saving time this weekend.

Voters at Sarnia rejected daylight-saving time at the last municipal elections. London township communities also will leave the clocks alone on Saturday night, although the city of London is going on fast time.

And the city of Windsor will stay on standard time after first announcing that it would adopt fast time. Windsor's city council first voted 9-5 to join most other communities in putting the clocks an hour ahead this weekend, then at a meeting this week found four councillors had changed their minds, and by a 9-5 vote rescinded the daylight saving resolution.

The lakehead cities, Port Arthur and Fort William, and Brandon in Manitoba and Lethbridge in Alberta also stay on standard time.

But the vast majority are putting the clocks ahead this weekend to remain on fast time until Sept. 27.

Toronto, Hamilton and Ottawa, Ontario's three largest cities, put the clocks ahead this weekend. So do Cornwall, Brockville Kingston and Belleville; Oshawa and Peterborough; London, Kitchener, Stratford, Brantford, St. Thomas, Woodstock, St. Catharines Welland, Niagara Falls, Chatham, Guelph, Galt, Owen Sound, Sault Ste. Marie, North Bay and Timmins.

Toronto Extends Warm Welcome To Jr. Champs

Toronto, April 26 — As nice a bunch of kids as ever laced on skates were given as nice a reception as a city could give them Friday afternoon when St. Michael's College Majors, Memorial Cup champs for the second time in three years, detrained at Union Station and were swallowed in the heart-warming adulation of thousands of citizens.

Toronto's greatest junior team of all time—and make no mistage on that score—was accorded the largest reception of any athletic group in the city's history.

Thousands of citizens and hundreds of St. Michael's College students crowded the Union Station concourse, overflowed onto Front St., and lined Bay St., as the players and team officials were driven slowly toward City Hall in seven shiny new convertible coupes, provided for the city by Pat Conway, an ardent St. Michael's follower.

From office buildings, workers sent streamers of ticker tape down on the boys and the Memorial Cup, carried proudly but a little shyly by team captain Ed. Sanford, brilliant centre player, was the centre of attraction in the last car of the group.

At the station platform, the players were welcomed by Controller Dave Balfour on behalf of the city of Toronto, Father L. J. Bondy, president of St. Michael's College and Father H. B. Regan, principal of St. Michael's College School.

Students bearing signs "The Fighting Irish," "Yea Champs" and one carried by a student attired in a cowboy hat which read "Nice Going Pardners," greeted the boys as they practically fought their way to the street. The St. Michael's College band played "McNamara's Band" as the crowd milled around the station entrance.

Headed by the Queen's Own Rifles band, the parade moved up Bay St. to City Hall square where Acting Mayor H. E. McCallum called on the thousands jammed around the square to give three cheers for the champions.

Short words of welcome and praise came from acting Mayor McCallum and responses were made by Coach Joe Primeau, team manager Father Hugh Mallon and team captain Ed Sandford.

Even when Acting Mayor McCallum announced St. Michael's students had been awarded a holiday Monday in honor of their team's prowess, the students weren't satisfied. They called for Fleming Mackell, Les Costello and Red Kelly, and these popular pucksters resoponded nobly, if briefly and shyly.

Following the City Hall reception, the studentsf of the college took over and followed the trains of cars up Bay Street to the college grounds. Players were beseiged by students with requests for autographs. Cameras were in evidence by the hundreds, too, and the players obligingly posed for admirers.

Other receptions and celebrations are in store fo rthe 1946-47 Canadian champions. But they'll have to wait.

The boys want to catch up on their sleep.

Tonight The "Moose" Meets Katan, Nuff Sed

Katanic antics not to be mixed with those of the gentleman Lucifer, although they may smack of same, will feature the main bout at Memorial Arena tonight, when "Old Fingers" John Katan, mixes ring pleasantries with Earl "The Moose" McCready in the main bout of the pachydermic merry-go-round.

The big huskies, one was knocking off the best that New Zealand had to offer, while the other was making prima donnas out of Australian wrestling waltzing Matildas last summer, clash for the first time since the successful invasions "down under."

"The Fingers" Jawn, himself, is perhaps one of the best-hated wrestlers to appear here His rough unorthodox methods have earned for him the moniker of Number 1 Bad Man, but that does not phase the husky Ukrainian-Canadian in the least. La Katan is out to win whether it be high water, or hell-for-leather tactics he uses.

"The Moose," good-natured guy from Aurora, is a popular favorite with Belleville fans. He is big, strong, tough and husky, and he fears no man. "Moose" has an optic cocked on that British Empire title which he came within an ace of winning last Friday night when he lost a mosquito-belch decision to world champion "Whipper" Watson.

Katan, he figures, is just another stepping stone to the Empire crown, and he feels that he will give the hated Jawn the wrestling lesson of his life tonight. It will be a good show.

Toar Morgan, popular Lindsay, Ont., ex-marine will be on hand to see what makes big "Irish" Tom Collins tick, while the mauly "Bulldog" Drummond will essay face-lifting and other operations on Mike (The Body) Sharpe. Note to the gals. The line forms on the right prior to the preliminary. The show starts at 9 o'clock.

CANADIAN SPORT SNAPSHOTS

By WILLIAM H. DUMSDAY
(Canadian Press Sthaff Writer)

Toronto, April 26. (CP)—For the many sports writers who for years endeavored to pry news from National Hockey League meetings, Doug (Windsor Star) Vaughan sounded a popular note when he acclaimed Clarence Campbell "the most progressive leader the circuit has ever had."

Doug, who covers all Red Wings home games via the Detroit River tunnel and witnessed the Stanley Cup finals, says that in the past it was generally acknowledged that to be able to sit gracefully in the N.H.L. throne seat, you had to be nothing more or less than a yes man to the league governors."

Whether the presidential change has been brought about by Campbell's own initiative or the league governors have finally "smartened up," Vaughan admits he wouldn't know, "but the fact remains that Campbell is something more than the figure-head that his predecessors, the late Frank Calder and Marvyn (The Red) Dutton used to be."

Joliat an Eskimo

Tom (Timmins Press) O'Loughlin seems slightly irked because in all the nice things said about Aurel Joliat when the little winger was presented with his key to hockey's Hall of Fame at the Montreal Forum no mention was made of the time Aurel, with a black cap pulled over his eyes, chased pucks in Northern Ontario.

Old timers recall when the former Montreal Canadiens star played with the Iroquois Falls Eskimos and figured on their N.O.H.A. championship team which defeated the Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds 25 years ago.

Who's Sissy?

When Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson said, following the final Stanley Cup battle, that in comparison to hockey players in this era the haunted stars of the past were sissies, he caused Mike (Kingston Whig-Standard) Rodden to come back with:

"Surely, Mr. Ferguson, who has been in close touch with professional hockey for many years —or since its inception—noticed that the great Ottawa Senators team of the early 20s used only six players during 60 minutes of the fastest kind of competition and employed two substitutes in case of dire emergency."

Thomson, Mortson Sign With Leafs For Next Year

Toronto, Apr. 26.—Gus Mortson and Jimmy Thomson, Maple Leafs stellar rookie defence team, Friday signed their contracts for the 1947-8 season. The rock-'em rookies, whose first year work matched the best the rearguard veterans of other teams had to offer brought to 10 the number of Leafs with signatures on contracts. Earlier in the day, defenceman Bill Barilko and forward Don Metz had signed.

The above four names were added to Thursday's signed list of Bill Ezinicki, Harry Watson, Gus Bodnar, Garth Boesch, Vic Lynn and Joe Klukay.

In signing, Mortson and Thomson proudly called attention to their playoff record. Statistics showed that while they were on the ice the opposition scored only five of the 27 goals registered against the Leafs in the playoff games. And two of those five tallies came when the Leafs were shorthanded.

Managing Director Conn Smythe added the comment: "In addition a lot of our goals were scored while Mortson and Thomson were in action. Both of them, plus our other rookies, could have been considered strong contenders for the Calder Trophy.

"The guess is that official announcement will show that Howie Meeker, Leafs' rookie right winger, has won that league honor."

250 Tons Flax Seed Being Rushed to U.K.

New York, April 26 — (AP) — Longshoremen hustled 250 tons of flax seed into the liner Queen Elizabeth yesterday instead of a higher revenue cargo of jewelry and furs as the big ship prepared to race spring planting time to England and thus aid in rehabilitating the flood-devastated British fens. The seed must be planted during the first week in May.

The Cunard White Star line said a higher revenue express cargo of jewelry, furs and typewriters at $1.30 a cubic foot had been set aside for the flax seed, at 40 cents a cubic foot, in response to an urgent request from the Ministry of Food which said the seed must arrive by May 1.

Fear Pirates May Have Seized Coastal Steamship

Rangoon, Apr. 26 (AP).—R.A.F. planes were dispatched today over the Penang area to investigate a theory that pirates might have seized the coastal steamship, Sir Harvey Adamson, missing for a week since advising that she was running into cyclonic winds.

Rescue ships, however, reported sighting wreckage off the south Burma coast, possible of the Adamson.

A flag officer in Malaya relayed a message to the Burma Navy that the Adamson had been reported sighted in the Penang area. A Burmese Navy spokesman said he doubted the accuracy of the message but if it were true, the ship had fallen prey to pirates.

The spokesman said it was unlikely that the Adamson had reached the Penang area without signalling either Singapore or Penang. The 1,000-ton vessel's last message said it was unable to reach its destination, Tavoy.

Players Split $10,000 Pool

Moose Jaw, Sask., April 26 (CP)—A player pool of $10,000 was split among members of the Moose Jaw Canucks junior hockey club here Friday night at a banquet honoring the Memorial Cup finalists, who were beaten in straight games by Toronto St. Michaels.

Each share came to more than $450 and it was believed the first time in history of amateur hockey players were presented their shares in public.

A financial statement revealed operational costs of the club were nearly $15,000. Players were given $55 a month for board and room.

Later the players were honored by cheering fans at the Moose Jaw Arena. Cliff Henderson, president of the Saskatchewan Amateur Hockey Association presented the Abott Cup, emblematic of Western Canada junior hockey championship to Metro Prystal, captain of the Canucks.

CHAPTER 1

The face pressed against the window of the plane winging its way through the night sky from Reno was young and tragic. Wide gray eyes starred dully at a young June moon shining down on fleecy white clouds.

A silvery streak of star shot along the path of the milky way and the girl stirred, sighing. The unearthly beauty was like salt in the wound of her heart, and she closed her eyes and moved her head so that it rested against the back of the seat wearily.

After a time she opened her bag and removed a sheaf of papers to read them again. It was as if she were trying to grasp their meaning.

"And this court by virtue of the power and authority therein vested, and the statute in such case made and provided, doth order, adjudge and decree, that the bonds of matrimony heretofore existing between the plaintiff, April Lind Hillyer, and the defendant Kent Hillyer Sr., be and the same are hereby dissolved, and the same are dissolved accordingly.

Samuel Tinney, Judge."

Just like that! And the same are dissolved accordingly. Six weeks in Reno, a few minutes in a court room, and April no longer belonged to Hill. April, Hill and Kent, Junior, were no longer a family unit. The court had granted full custody of Kenny to his mother.

Small white hands trembled unsteadily as April put the divorce papers back in her bag. The diamonds in her platinum wedding band winked back mockingly and after a little hesitation she twisted the ring from her finger and dropped it into the bag with her decree.

The ring left a deep white circle that looked as though a scar might remain there forever to remind her of the day six years before when Hill had kissed her and placed it there. It was the first time April had ever taken the band from her finger.

Memories flooded her heart with such deep pain that April thought she would surely die. How did people go on living when things like divorce happened to them? Surely they were the people who didn't care. People who wanted to be free to go out and find a new love.

There were the women stopping at the same ranch house in Reno with her for six weeks, for instance. Lillian Mayor who had been there three times to get rid of unwanted husbands, and Alice Hayden who that very morning had screamed with mirth when she told April how she had sold her wedding ring and bought champagne so they could all have a party going back on the train to New York.

That is when April decided she would go mad if she had to travel with the hilarious group who were going to celebrate all the way home. She had slipped away secretly and taken the plane.

April wondered if she were old fashioned and silly because she could see nothing to celebrate about. What was so amusing about making a failure of marriage? Or so funny about a broken home.

Even though it was all over, April still could not believe that she was no longer Hill's wife. She marvelled that she had ever found the courage to go through with a divorce, loving him as she did. What power had driven her on to free Kent Hillyer, when she would rather die than try to live without him?

Now Hill would have to stand on his own feet. It was his only chance to develop the qualities that would help him to be a man. She had taken up the job of spoiling the handsome, loveable playboy where his doting mother had left off. She could no longer endure seeing what they had made of him.

April had married Hill upon her graduation from College in Virginia. The year before Hill had finished school, and a few weeks later become national amateur golf champion. He had been content to sit back on his laurels ever since, even though he held the championship only two years. He had never done a hard days work in his life, except on the golf links.

After Hill played away his own inheritance he had seemed perfectly content when April organized a small music school in Douglaston, Long Island, where she taught piano and singing to keep them going. Money had always grown on trees, and as far as she was concerned it was still growing there.

April had a singing voice that might have taken her anywhere if she had not married and settled down and given up the idea of a professional career. She might have been a concert pianist, as well. But she had preferred being only Mrs. Kent Hillyer.

Even the birth of Kent, Junior, a year after their marriage had seemed to make no impression on Hill's sense of responsibility. April with her endless talent and energy had a genius for making everything go smoothly, and she had done both her own job and Hill's so well that her husband did not realize she was the backbone of the family. Nor did he realize what a struggle she was making to keep them going.

When the day finally came that April awakened to the sickening realization she was turning a man who might have been a success into a failure, she knew what she must do.

As long as she shouldered Hill's burdens for him they would live extravagantly, one jump ahead of the bill collectors, surrounded by a crowd of idle people who were doing the same thing. She had come to despise the lazy, childish men and women they called their friends.

After her marriage April's material instinct and her deep love for Hill had prompted her to shield him from all annoyance or worry. When the day of reckoning came and she wanted a father for her child who would stand between his family and the world, April could see the mistake she had made. Hill was not a man. He was still a boy.

When April attempted to rectify her mistake, Hill became bitter and accused her of no longer caring for him. A tactful suggestion that he was grown up and should settle down to a serious job and not spend his days on the golf links was like waving a red flag at a bull.

The end of their happiness came almost before either of them realized what was happening. And so April went to Reno.

April seemed unaware of the others in the plane with her, so deeply was she engrossed in her own troubles. Her oval face was so white and tragic as she sat leaning back in her seat that Curt De Witt, sitting across the aisle became ill-at-ease.

He tried reading a magazine and some letters in his brief case, but found he was unable to concentrate. Curt was a man who made it a strict policy not to pry in another's business. But he finally decided something would have to be done about the utter dejection of the lovely lady with the shining straight black hair and wide gray eyes.

He was casting about for an excuse to speak with her when April's heavy hand bag slid from her lap to the floor. Before she could rouse herself to retrieve it, Curt had picked it up and handed it to her.

A small white smile trembled on April's mouth as she thanked him in her soft southern voice. Curt De Witt took matters into his own hands.

"May I sit with you awhile?" he said. "It gets lonesome up here in the clouds with no one to talk with."

April lacked the courage to refuse, because the stranger's manner was so disarmingly friendly. He looked like a very nice person. But she would much rather have been left to herself.

Curt seated himself beside April. "Do you enjoy flying?" he smiled.

"Very much," she said. "But I seldom get the opportunity."

"Have you flown far this time?" Curt asked.

"From Reno," the girl said significantly, looking down at her hands.

"Oh, I see," De Witt nodded, understanding.

There was a short silence, then he confided:

"I took the cure there five years ago myself. It isn't a very pleasant experience."

"No it isn't," she sighed heavily.

Curt De Witt understood only too well what the girl beside him was enduring. Perhaps, he thought, it was even worse for a woman in love.

"I suppose," he said then, "there is little consolation in my telling you that you'll get over the way you feel now. Do you mind if I wax paternal and talk? Or would you rather I just went back to my seat and minded my own business?"

April said politely, but without enthusiasm.

"Not at all."

"Perhaps," the man smiled then, "if I'm going to tell you the story of my life," I'd better introduce myself. He took a card from a case in his pocket which revealed to April that he was Curt De Witt, president of Sherlock Steel.

"I'm Mrs. Kent Hillyer," April told him then, a little surprised that the attractive, lean jawed stranger was a man of such importance. He seemed much younger than she would have expected a man of his position to be. Certainly not quite forty, with a fine sensitive face that registered both strength and kindness.

"Your husband was golf champion three or four years ago, wasn't he?" De Witt asked.

When April nodded he told her he had seen Kent Hillyer play frequently on the links of several clubs to which he belonged, because he lived but a few miles from Douglaston out on the Island.

April had often passed the De Witt estate. It was the most beautiful home on Long Island, she had always thought. A great white colonial mansion to stir the blood of any woman brought up in the South with acres of gardens and trees overlooking the waters of the sound.

"So we are neighbors," Curt De Witt smiled his farm charming smile. "That makes it all right for me to take the liberty of giving you a little advice and telling you a bit of my own story, doesn't it?"

"Of course," April made an effort to smile back.

It had been a long time since Curt De Witt had talked of his marriage and divorce. Although he spoke in the highest terms of the woman who had once been his wife, April could read between the lines that she had been the same sort of fun loving, irresponsible person Kent had always been.

De Witt had been too busy making good to waste his time playing with her, and so the inevitable had happened. He lived with his daughter Penny, aged twelve. The former Mrs. De Witt had been married twice in the five years since their divorce, and was living in Hollywood. The father had full custody of his child to whom he was utterly devoted.

As happens very often when two people meet on shipboard, train or plane, Curt and April found themselves exchanging confidences that they would have hesitated to exchange with their oldest friends. Perhaps it was because they discovered they had much in common, and had gone through the same experiences with those they loved.

A little of April's heartbreak eased as she talked with the sympathetic stranger, who seemed suddenly not a stranger at all but someone she had known a long time. Curt De Witt was happy to see a little of the color return to her lovely face and her eyes lose a little of their dull misery. He was acutely conscious that she was one of the most charming young women he had ever seen in his life.

"Don't look back, my dear," he told April finally. "Close the door and lock it. I wasted years learning how useless it is to let something that can't be avoided destroy happiness. I learned it the hard way. You musn't make the same mistake."

"But how," the girl pressed her cold hands together, "how can you stop loving someone who has been your life for so long? Can you turn love off like a faucet?"

"Perhaps not," the man sighed. "But you're young and very beautiful, and you must force yourself to go out and meet new people and keep busy. Love will come again. You must never shut yourself up and weep over what is past. Do plan to go to business?"

April told him of her music school and that her old friend Gay Lorraine had joined her to teach dancing. They would live together and a maid would take care of Kenny while she earned a living. Gay had been a professional dancer, and they hoped to make the Hillyer-Lorraine School of Music and Dancing into something worthwhile.

Curt assured her work was a wonderful thing, but that it was even more necessary that she should plunge at once into a new social life.

"I sound like a meddlesome old lady," he said finally, "giving you all this serious advice. "But having gone through a marital blitzkreig myself, I at least can tell you what not to do."

"You've helped a lot," April said with sincerity. "I'm glad you sat with me. It was all bottled up inside before we talked."

The lights of New York were showing in the distance and Curt De Witt said:

"We're almost home. What do you plan to do when we land?"

"Go home to my child," said April. "I haven't seen him in seven weeks. It's the first time we've ever been separated."

"Won't he be asleep?" Curt asked. "It's ten o'clock. If no one is meeting you, you must let me take you home. Since we're neighbors.

"That would be very kind of you," April hesitated. "But I'm afraid it would put you to a lot of trouble."

Curt patted her arm. "I'll take you home on one condition. That you'll come out and dance awhile first. Now is as good a time as any to start taking my advice. We'll do the town. What do you say?"

The idea would have seemed fantastic an hour before. But after a moment's thought April said she would go. After all Kenny would be asleep, and if she got tired enough she might get a little rest herself. Certainly there was little point in going home to weep on Gay's shoulder.

When the plane came down at La Guardia field, Curt De Witt's chauffeur Mike stood beside his limousine nearby. Curt assisted April from the airliner, carrying her bag and taking her arm as they walked down the gang plank.

"Here's Mike," he said waving to the man who had been his first chauffeur, and Mike touched his cap. His florid Irish face lit with a friendly grin.

Strike of London Dock Workers Halts Unloading

50 Ships With Perishable Food Await Labor Action

London, April 28 —(CP)— Thousands of London dock workers went on strike today, halting the unloading of ships bringing in critically-needed cargoes of food and fuel.

The full extent of the walkout was not immediately apparent, but London newspapers said it was spreading rapidly and dock work throughout the city would be paralyzed.

The strikers walked out in sympathy with 3,800 Glasgow dockers, who quit six weeks ago because 500 workers there were declared "redundant" (surplus) and dropped from the pay rolls.

The stevedores and dockers union, claiming 7,000 members, and the London Lightermen's Union, claiming 4,000, took strike decisions yesterday.

The larger dock section of the transport and general workers union, claiming 14,000, advised its members not to go out. Newspapers said "the great majority" were desregarding the union's caunsel.

Eighty-two ships were reported in the docks. About 50 were carrying perishable foods, but virtually all had refrigeration.

Within a few hours this morning nearly one-half of the port's labor force — 6,800 stevedores and dockers and 3,400 lightermen —was idle.

The strike grew rapidly as men at dock-gate meetings decided to come out despite the advice of their union officials and some observers expected the stoppage to be complete by tomorrow.

Three unions are involved — the 7,000-strong Stevedores and Dockers Union, which is giving its official backing to the stoppage, the Lightermen's Union, also backing the strike, and the Transport and General Workers Union which organizes about 15,000 dockers and whose leaders have advocated peaceful negotiation.

Most members of the first two unions struck at once and the movement spread rapidly among those of the third accepted leadership from the stevedores.

Two ministries — labor and transport — are watching the development closely. The Ministry of Labor, it is understood, is standing by its decision not to set up an independent inquiry into the dismissal of redundant Glasgow workers, so the only possibility at the moment is further negotiations on how to work redundancy decisions.

65,000 ATTEND SHOW

Ottawa, April 28 —(CP)— A total of 65,000 persons attended the National Sportsmen's Show here last week, Alderman L. L. Coulter, chairman of Ottawa's tourist and publicity committee, disclosed over the weekend.

Three shows were staged Saturday instead of two, and the day's attendance soared to 15,800, an all-time high for the week, said Alderman L. L. Coulter.

WODEHOUSE IN U.S.

New York, April 28 (AP)—P G. Wodehouse, British novelist and playwright who drew criticism during the war for German-sponsored broadcasts after his internment in France, arrived Saturday from Eupope on the United States liner America. Wodehouse, accompanied by his wife, said he plans to remain in the United States at length, writing plays and books.

It will likely cause intermittent rain over the Northern Ontario regions on Tuesday increasing cloudiness with rain-showers over the southern regions by Tuesday afternoon and evening.

Motor Vehicle Accidents Account For 6 of 12 Deaths

(By The Canadian Press)

Of the 12 weekend —fatalities recorded in eastern Canada by The Canadian Press today 10 occurred in Ontario. Motor vehicle accidents accounted for 6 of deaths and the other six resulted from a variety of causes, one being the strangling of a woman at Charlottetown and another the suspected murder of a man found near the highway just west of Toronto, dead from a brain hemorrhage.

The body of Gordon A. Wren, Toronto sheet-metal worker, was found 15 feet from the Dundas Highway early Sunday. Provincial Police have discarded a theory that he was victim of a hit-and-run driver and were probing possibilities of foul play.

Police also were not satisfied that the death of an unidentified Oriental, between 55 and 60 years of age, was a suicide. The body was found hanging from a tree near Aurora, north of Toronto.

At Charlottetown Mrs. M. Gallant, 77, was found strangled in her bed and police arrested Peter Vissey, 40, on a charge of murder.

At Elmira, Ont., Archibald C. Morris, 62, was accidentally shot while hunting alone Sunday. A search party found his body, with the gun evidently discharged while crossing a fence.

William E. Morrow's body was found in Halifax harbor, and at Toronto, Fred Hawse, 69, died of shock and excitement after a fire was discovered in his apartment.

The six traffic deaths were those of Mrs. Monica Demoe, 56, struck by a taxicab in Toronto late Sunday night; Stanley Jackson, 42, crushed between two cars Saturday night near Camp Borden; Mrs. Francois Juneau, 80, fatally injured when struck by a car at Ottawa; six-year-old Vern Stopa of Renfrew, who ran into the path of a car; Diana Ritchie. who was struck by a motor truck at Chatham, and 21-year-old A. James, killed in a collision at St. Thomas.

CLOSER CO-OPERATION AIM

Toronto, April 28 — (CP) — Czechoslovakia hopes for stronger economic collaboration with Canada, said Frantisek Nemec, that country's now minister to Canada, on his arrival here Sunday for a week's stay in Toronto.

NO POSSIBILITY OF TRUCE WHILE ISSUE DEBATED

Jewish Underground Determined to Fight Until Britain Ends Mandated Govt.

By EDWARD CURTIS

Jerusalem, April 28 — (AP)— Any possibility of truce in the trouble-ridden Holy Land while the United Nations Assembly is debating its future in New York apparently was ruled out today by Irgun Zvai Leumi, militant Jewish underground organization.

In a secret-radio broadcast yesterday, Irgun repeated demands for an end to Britain's mandated government and military occupation of Palestine and declared there would be "no peace in the country, the Middle East or the entire world until the Palestine question is settled."

The special U. N. session was called to consider setting up a commission to look into that question — complicated by ambitions of the Jews for a national homeland in the Holy Land and of the Arabs for an independent Arab Palestine, plus British "strategic considerations."

In another development related to the U. N. meeting, a highly placed informant said the executive of the Jewish agency, official spokesman for Palestine's 600,000 Jews, had decided to issue literature to impress upon Jewry that "murder and bloodshed" would hurt the Jews' case before the General Assembly.

Collective Punishment

Meanwhile, Britain held a threat of collective punishment for underground action over the Jewish community, and Irgun's smaller offshoot, the Stern gang, stepped up its propaganda.

Gen. Sir Alan Gordon Cunningham, British High Commissioner for Palestine, last night wrote Mayor Israel Rokach of the all-Jewish city of Tel Aviv that "when the next post office vehicle is stolen, the Jewish community must necessarily suffer the loss of its postal services."

A stolen postal truck was used Friday to haul explosives that killed five British officials and wounded six others in a police compound at Sarona, Tel Aviv suburb. In a communique sent later to a Hebrew newspaper, the Stern gang said its members had driven the death truck.

236 Persons Killed

In another communique yesterday, the Stern gang announced that it had carried out the fatal shooting in Haifa Saturday of A. E. Conquest, head of the Haifa Criminal Investigation Department, and in leaflets passed out in all-Arab Jaffa it invited Arabs to join in what it termed "the struggle against British Imperialism."

Pub Habitues Almost Swear Off At Sight of Clergymen in Ginmills

By ED CREAGH

London, April 28—(AP)—Four clergymen went out yesterday on a tour of ginmills—as well as prisons, movie houses and night clubs—as part of the "Christian Commando" campaign, an inter-denominational movement to preach the gospel where it is seldom heard.

From the look that came over the faces of the regulars in the Bunch of Grapes—a big, brassy tavern in suburban Brixton—you would have thought that a troop of cavalry had burst in.

"Look—I'm seeing things," one red-nosed type gasped.

Not Preaching.

"No, you're not, brother," a clergyman responded. "It's often been said that we don't have enough contact with the people. Well, we're trying to remedy that now. We're not here to preach—"

He talked for about three minutes on the Christian way of life and then two other ministers said a word. Everybody listened, even the barmaids.

"Well, that's the lot," announced the first parson. "We don't want to break up the party but—are there any questions?"

"Yus," said an elderly pipe-smoking customer. "What are you lads having?"

Everybody laughed. "I'd like a good glass of lemonade," the clergyman said briskly. The three others said they'd have lemonade, too.

Hands Too Soft.

There wasn't such a kindly reception in the Horse and Hounds, around the corner.

"Let's see your hands," a man shouted.

One of the clergymen held out both hands.

"Soft," the skeptic snorted. "Fat lot of work you've ever done. Why don't they send working men around to talk to us?"

"There are different ways of working, friend," the minister said. "You wouldn't expect a doctor's hands to be all calloused, would you? I doubt if Jesus' hands were hard for many months after He gave up carpentry for the ministry."

Then they gave the previous talks over again, and had some more lemonade. Three of the ministers went off to address a movie audience.

"Ive a wonderful opening line," one of them said. "I'll say, 'This must be the first time a parson ever followed Jane Russell.'"

Failure to Consider Plight Serious May Have Sealed Doom of Miners

By P. C. DUBOIS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Malartic, Que., April 28 —(CP) —The 11 hard-rock miners given up for dead in the fire-filled No. 4 shaft of East Malartic gold mine apparently sealed their own doom in the pre-dawn moments of last Thursday when the fire started and they refused to consider their situation as serious.

This was the opinion expressed today by 28-year-old Germah Gatien, one of four miners who scrambled to safety. He said he believed the trapped 11 must have lived for hours in the mine compartment where they thought they were safe — 500 feet below the 10th level where the fire burned.

"With the exception of the two hoistmen and the deckmen we were all at the bottom when we first smelled smoke," said Gatien.

"John Renault, leader of the 16-man crew who started at midnight on what is called the 'graveyard shift' went up first to investigate and sounded the warning sginal."

Gatien said he rode the "bucket"—used for hauling ore from a mine—part way up the shaft and then scurried up ladders to the eighth level and safety.

When Renault had gone up to investigate the fire there followed Traian Lucaci, 45-year-old native of Romania who was found dead from gas fumes in the drift between shaft No. 3 and shaft No. 4, then Nils Strand, Gerard Dube, 18, Gatien himself and Paul Gervais in that order.

Dube did not get out alive and Gatien could not say what happened to him.

"When we had got up the ladder, I'd say about 100 feet, the others were still at the bottom," said Gatien. "They shouted to us: 'Get the fire-fighters—we'll be all right as long as we get air.'

"That was when we got the nine bells given by Renault from the No. 3 shaft and as far as I know the other fellows hadn't started up the ladders then."

When the bucket came by he and Gervais hopped aboard to get out faster. Then they felt progress was too slow and jumped off at the 10th. level, seat of the fire. The gas fumes were "very bad."

"It was tough going" continued Gatien. "I held a handkerchief to my face and went up the ladders to the eighth level while Gervais turned into the 10th."

Gatien said he and Gervais passed Strand and Lucaci. Strand fought his way out while Gervais became temporarily lost in the drift on the 10th level but struggled on after absorbing fresh air from an air hole.

"I was lucky," said Gatien. "I wouldn't want another close call like that."

Superintendent V. Nethery of the mine said he believed, as did Gatien, that the men did not think they were in peril when they first smelled smoke.

Paul Gervais described his stumbling attempts to get out of the mine as "90 minutes of horror." On the 800-foot cross-cut from the No. 4 shaft to the No. 3 Gervais passed the body of Lucaci. At No. 3 he signalled and a bucket was sent down to bring him to safety.

"I said my beads a couple of dozen times," said Gervais.

THREE DANGEROUS MENTAL PATIENTS ARE RECAPTURED

Search Continues For Fourth Escapee And Hospital Orderly Taken As Hostage

San Francisco, April 28—(AP) —Three of four dangerous mental patients who escaped from the United States Army's Letterman Hospital by trickery and force yesterday were back in custody today while search widened for the fourth escapee and a hospital orderly they took as a hostage.

Still at large, more than 24 hours after the escape, was Frank R. Wallrath, 24. The orderly is Wallace Williams.

Wallrath, a paratrooper during the war, was convicted by an army court martial last Aug. 23 for deserting under fire and for escaping twice from army confinement. He was sentenced to death but President Truman later commuted it to life imprisonment.

The four patients made their escape from the double-locked psychopathic ward at 2 a. m., after slugging four ordelies who were summoned one by one. They opened the ward doors with keys taken from the orderlies and then slugged a guard, taking his .45 calibre pistol.

Terrorized Taxi Drivers

At nightfall the first of the escapees was captured. Joe Salindron, 24, under a five-year sentence for larceny, was caught at Sacramento, 90 miles northeast of San Francisco.

Salindron was arrested after he had terrorized two taxicab drivers with a straight-edged razor. He violently resisted arrest, kicking out the windshield of a patrol car en route to the city jail.

There he tried twice to take his life, once slashing his wrist and attempting to hang himself with his shirt.

A few hours later, police at Stockton, 50 miles south of Sacramento, broke in the door of a downtown hotel and arrested the two others, Homer Richie, 30, and George Heiser, 30.

Richie, who was serving a 14-year sentence for assault with a deadly weapon in New Guinea, admitted he obtained fraudulent passes March 18 with the idea of escaping. Heiser was serving five years for forgery and desertion.

GUNMAN SERVES CUSTOMER, THEN ESCAPES WITH $45

Clerk Of Drug Store Gagged And Dumped Into Basement At Gunpoint

Toronto April 28 (CP)—A lone shabbily-dressed gunman entered a central Toronto drug store today tied up the only attendant, dumped him in a basement corner and then served a customer before escaping with $45 from the till.

I. Klein, the clerk, hearing conversation from his awkward position, realized the robber was ringing up a sale and shouted "Stop him. Stop him."

The cries from the basement frightened the gunman who grabbed all the money from the cash box and fled to the street, disappearing in the traffic.

Klein told police the gunman, wearing an orange and black peak cap, dungaree pants and a dark windbreaker, said after he entered and drew his gun, "don't make a noise and start moving towards the cellar or I'll blow your brains out."

Search for Clerk Reported to Have Snatched Payroll

Montreal, April 28 — (CP) — Police today were searching for a clerk employed by Lunham and Moore (Canada) Limited and reported to have escaped with a $14,000 payroll he snatched at the point of a gun as it was brought into the shipping company's office from a bank this morning.

M. G. Angus, vice-president of the shipowning firm, said a satchel containing the money was brought into the office by H. G. Collins, chief accountant, and A. F. Lane an accountant, when the clerk walked over and took hold of it.

Mr. Collins had asked "Say, what's going on here," when the clerk produced a revolver, Mr. Angus reported, and declared: —"Any of you fellows who follows me is a dead pigeon and I mean it." The clerk then had walked out with the satchel.

EXCITEMENT HIGH AS MOUNTBATTEN VISITS FRONTIER

Hindus, Moslems Hope To Impress Viceroy Whose Aim is to Ease 'Grave Situation'

New Delhi, April 28 (Reuters) —Excitement was running high in Peshawar as Rear Admiral Viscount Mountbatten, the Viceroy, left here today to visit the northwest frontier province, scene of recent communal rioting between Hindus and Moslems.

Both sides—Moslem League and Congress Parties—were reported to be preparing demonstrations to impress the Viceroy. The Moslem League is believed to have sent out a "whisper directive" ordering Moslems to wear green shorts and fly green flags for the occasion.

The red shirts (Congress) led, by the "Frontier Gandhi," Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan, were also believed to be preparing demonstrations throughout the province.

Both Moslem and non-Moslem shops were closed in Peshawar today and normal security precautions were taken.

In New Delhi today Rajendra Prasad, reopening the Indian constituent assembly, declared that the assembly must be prepared for division not only for India but of some provinces.

Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, Vice-President of the Indian interim government, told the assembly which began its third session that the completion of the new constitution was urgent.

"We have arrived at a moment when we have to make quick decisions—final decisions in the sense that we have to act on them," be declared.

Moslems Continue Boycott

The Moslem League continued its boycott of the assembly, and only about 200 of the 389 possible members were present today.

Next weekend Gen. Baron Ismay, senior member of Lord Mountbatten's staff, will fly to London to give the British cabinet a first-hand account of the Viceroy's views following his series of talks with Indian leaders.

Lord Mountbatten's task in his visit to the northwest frontier is to try to ease what Mohammeu Ali Jinnah, Moslem League President, recently described as the "grave situation" there.

The province, where Moslems predominate and Hindus and Sikhs are a minority of five per cent in a population of 5,500,000, is ruled by a "red shirt," or Congress party ministry under Dr. Khan Sahib, Moslem Premier.

During the last two months the Moslem League has been campaigning for the "restoration of civil liberties" and to oust the present provincial government.

TO DEMONSTRATE CAPACITY

Fairfield, Calif., April 28 (AP) —A C-82, nicknamed the "Flying Boxcar" by the United States army, will take off tonight for the first transpacific flight by that type of plane to demonstrate its cargo and troop-carrying potentialities to Pacific area occupation forces.

The big twin-engine plane, built by Fairchild Aircraft Corporation, was adopted by the army last year.

German Post-War Beer Thin Brew And Certainly in Short Supply

By GUY BETTAMY

Kassel, Germany, April 26 — (Reuters)—German beer is not what it used to be and even this thin post-war article is in short supply.

Beer in Germany is not merely an intoxicating beverage — it is an indispensable part of daily life. Just as the French cannot live happily without wine, so Germans cannot do without a sip of beer for mid-day dinner and supper.

When obtainable, the "sip" is of considerable proportions, averaging a quart.

The other day a Social Democrat was sternly rebuked from all parts of the Bavarian landtag for suggesting cutting beer production to save grain.

In Hesse, with its 3,500,000 inhabitants, breweries last year produced a total of about 325,000,000 gallons of beer as compared with 425,000,000 gallons in the war year 1944.

Breweries in Hesse, Bavaria and Wuerttemberg Baden have received licences from the American military government to brew light beer not exceeding 1.7 per cent of alcohol.

Whether the breweries will be able to continue the present supply of beer depends on the decision of the military government concerning the amounts of barley which may be made available. The prospect of obtaining 30,000 tons of barley for brewing in the American zone, is dim, in view of the critical food situation.

In the British zone it is hoped to obtain 16,000 tons of barley for brewing. Incidentally about one-third of the barley used for beer is returned to the farmers in the shape of fodder.

Recover 11 Bodies When Blaze Has Been Put Out

May be Close to 3 Weeks Before Victims Brought Out

By P. C. DUBOIS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Malartic Que., April 28 (CP)— Three special high masses were sung in Saint Martin Church here today in memory of the 12 miners, 11 of them still entombed, who lost their lives in the fire which raged for several days through the lower workings of No. 4 shaft at the East Malartic Gold Mine.

Of the dozen victims of the death-dealing inferno, only the body of Traian Lucaci has been recovered. The Romanian-born Lucaci succumbed when he sought to force his way up the shaft when the the fire broke out Thursday morning. All hope for the 11 men trapped in the mine at the time was abandoned Saturday night.

It was decided to flood and seal off the mine in order to extinguish the flames which had burned steadily in the shaft timbers since Thursday morning. Consultation Saturday night between the management and Percy Smith, in charge of special squads of rescue workers, brought the decision that it would be "both unwise and valueless to attempt further fire-fighting operations from underground."

At Sunday noon, mine manager D. M. Maclean confirmed the decision in a statement read at a press conference. The statement, read by M. A. Thomson of Montreal, director of the mine, said that work to seal off the whole mine completely from the surface and to introduce water into the No. 4 shaft had been started.

The statement added that the idea of sealing off the mine was to prevent any air from getting into the mine "to supply the fire with oxygen." Introduction of the water was designed to "prevent the fire from working any further up No. 4 shaft."

Edward Futterer, consulting engineer, said he could make no forecast about when the bodies of the 11 miners might be taken from the mine. He said that the fire itself wasn't likely to be extinguished within 24 hours from the time that the mine had been sealed off and flooding operations begun.

Some mine employees thought that the bodies might not be brought out for a week, while others considered it might be closer to three weeks.

Mine superintendent V. Methery disclosed that by a grim irony the trapped men were less than one hour away from rescue at one stage of the proceedings.

The mine superintendent said that the rescue work had looked as if it might be crowned with success Saturday but hope was dashed when a six-inch air line snapped at the 10th. level from the terrific heat of the fire.

It was believed that a metal joining in the air line melted from the fire. The air line parted at 3.45 a.m., and an officials said that the high content of carbon monoxide gas in the mine would kill a man in no time.

Police Suspect Murder in Death Of Metal Worker

Toronto, April 28 — (CP) — Provincial Police suspecting murder are investigating the death of Gordon A. Wren, 48-year-old Toronto metalworker, whose body was found yesterday near the Dundas highway in the hamlet of Summerville, 11 miles west of Toronto, by a man on his way to work. An autopsy by Dr. M. C. Dinberg, provincial pathologist, disclosed that Wren died of a brain hemorrhage. A bad cut was found on the left side of his face near his ear. Only other external injury was a slight bruise on the left leg.

Police discharged an earlier theory that Wren was the victim of a hit-and-run driver.

R. S. Carmichael, driving to work Sunday morning, saw the body lying in a grassy patch 15 feet off the highway. "He was lying face down, stretched out full length, one arm behind his back and his suit coat pulled right up over his head," said Carmichael. Constable R. S. Duke of nearby Cooksville failed to find any traces of a highway accident.

Wren telephoned his mother shortly after 6 p. m. Saturday and told her he was going to visit the home of friends, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Coram of Summerville. Mr. Coram told police yesterday that Wren did not arrive. The body was found about 200 yards from the Coram home.

Roy Fenwick, who works a farm near where the body was found, told police he heard a car stop outside his place late Saturday night and roar away a few minutes later.

300 Villagers Are Returning To Homes in May

Sudbourne, Suffolk, April 29— (CP) — Three hundred villagers who had to quit their homes in July, 1942, to make room for the army's 10,000-acred battle school, are returning in May.

They will find every cottage repaired and redecorated, every garden dug and grass cut, every well cleaned out, every hedge trimmed.

This is all part of "operation plowshare," organized by Capt. H. E. L. Birkett, lands officer of East Suffolk war agricultural executive committee. Shell holes will be filled in and the land fertilized.

"By next spring," Capt. Birkett said, "this land will be growing crops of sugar beets, potatoes, barley and oats and cattle will be grazing."

20 INJURED in CRASH

Hillsboro, Tex., April 28—(AP) —A Southwestern Greyhound bus overturned twice near here last night and police said about 20 persons were injured.

Police quoted the bus driver as saying the lights went out on the vehicle causing it to go out of control.

"About half of those injured had broken bones and the other half had cuts and bruises," the sheriff said.

TWO CAMPBELLFORD RESIDENTS INJURED

Result of injuries received in a traffic accident at Warkworth on Saturday night, Mrs. Margaret Dunk and Mrs. May Scott of Campbellford were admitted to Belleville General Hospital on Sunday. The two women were attended by Dr. G. H. Stobie, it being reported that their injuries were not critical.

FINDS BLACK DUCK IN MUSKRAT TRAP

The old saw about "all that glitters is not gold" applies to muskrat trapping as well as to other things, according to Floyd Vanderwater of Moira, in Hungerford township.

As a means of adding to his early spring income Mr. Vanderwater set a few muskrat traps on his Moira farm and after having "fair" success was surprised one morning to find a duck caught in one of his traps. On one of the duck's legs was a metal band 37-643294 with the notification to advise the biological survey at Washington, D.C. The duck, a Black, had been one banded by wild life authorities in the United States as a measure of securing information regarding migration and other factors pertaining to duck population.

HOUSEHOLDERS WARNED AGAINST BURNING REFUSE ON PAVEMENT

City Engineer Charles Mott today warned city householders against the practice of burning leaves and other refuse on the asphalt pavement in front of their homes. Several reports of this being done have been received by the public works department during the past week. The city engineer pointed out that burning of refuse on the pavement is injurious to the asphalt and is against city regulations.

BRIGADE GIVEN RUN DURING WEEKEND

Overheated stovepipes at 179 Church Street were the cause for a brief run by the local fire department after the supper hour on Sunday evening. No damage was reported by firemen.

NEWFOUNDLANDERS IN LONDON

London, April 28 — (CP) — Seven Newfoundland National Convention delegates arrived during the weekend for discussions concerning the constitutional future of their country. The talks are expected to last 14 days.

BEGIN REMOVAL OF HULL

Halifax, April 28 — (CP) — Work has started on removal of the hull of the wrecked ammunition ship Trongate, sunk in the main channel of Halifax harbor in 1942, Foundation Maritime Limited said today. The 3,979-ton vessel, now lying in 80 feet of water, was sunk by shellfire to extinguish a dangerous fire which threatened her cargo of ttoluol.

Tweed

RSM Angus Duffy Special Speaker At Legion Banquet

Tweed — On Wednesday evening April 23rd, the Tweed Branch of the Canadian Legion held its first annual banquet at Hotel Tweedsmuir. It was a fine gathering with over seventy-five veterans of the three services in attendance.

R. S. M. Angus Duffy of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Alderman of the City of Belleville, president of the Canadian Legion in the same city was the guest speaker of the evening.

In the absence of Major Merritt Price, president of the Legion through illness, the vice-president Len Taylor acted as chairman and welcomed the guests. Art Snare acted as song leader. Reeve S. A. McCarey brought greetings from the Municipal Council and congratulated the members on the progress they had made during the past year.

Frank Foster, president of the Kinsmen Club and S. R. Curry, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said that the Legion had the undivided support of both organizations in any undertaking.

The speaker was introduced by Sgt. Ed. Long who served under him in England, Sicily and Italy.

Mr. Long said that he was regarded as a good soldier, one of the best.

The speaker reminded his listeners in a concluding challenging note, that every man who wore the colors has a job to do, whether he knows it or not. We can all play our own part in making Canada a better place to live and if we all do that we need have no fear for the future.

To Erect Dwellings

Mr. Arthur Snare has made the purchase of three and one-half lots on McGowan Street, formerly known as the old Hub Factory and he proposes to erect six small dwellings this year.

This building site overlooking the lake and serviced for waterworks and other public utilities, is considered one of the best in the village.

The six cottage-bungalows will be under construction immediately help and materials are available. They will be insulated throughout, and will be adequate to accommodate small families. Mr. Snare expects that most of his spare time this summer will be devoted to superintending his building operations.

Bus Destroyed By Fire at Picton

Picton, April 28 — Fire completely demolished a bus here early Saturday morning. Owned by Ivan Blackburn, Washburn St., and used in Kingston-to-Picton bus service, the vehicle was a mass of flames when the fire was discovered by an unknown motorist, who aroused the neighborhood. Mr. Blackburn dashed out of his nearby house in bare feet and night attire and moved another bus to safety. The flames were fed by gasoline from the tank and shot 40 feet into the air. All four rear tires blew out. The bus had transported a party of dancers at 2 a.m. and a cigaret butt is blamed for the fire.

County Mourns As Byron O. Lott Is Laid to Rest

Byron O. Lott, Hastings County's "Grand Old Man", who passed away in Belleville General Hospital in the 83rd year last week, was laid in his final resting place in Stirling Cemetery on Sunday afternoon while a county mourned and its representatives from all walks of life paid final touching tribute to one of its best-known native sons.

The funeral service was held in the chapel of the Pinkston Funeral Home. The chapel proper was filled to overflowing as people from all parts of the district, rich and poor, the humble and meek bowed their heads in the last rites to one who called everybody "friend".

All Groups Represented

Perhaps no greater tribute to the memory of one of Hastings County's sons has been paid than that to the late Byron Lott. People of all faiths, creeds and classes, denominations and sects, organizations and associations, and many private individuals united in a common whole in solemn reverent tribute.

The funeral cortege as it slowly wended its way from the chapel to Stirling was a mile long. The cemetery at Stirling was almost black with a solid phalanx of parked automobiles. A chilly late April wind sighed a requiem as hundreds of people stood with bowed heads as the Rev. C. A. Perkins, minister of Holloway Street United Church, solemnly intoned the words of the committal service. There was a reverent hush as the casket was slowly lowered into the grave.

The funeral service was conducted by Mr. Perkins with the Rev. G. D. Martin, minister of King Street United Church, Trenton, assisting.

Masonic Rites

The last rites of the Masonic Order were conducted at the graveside by Wor. Master J. L. Good; Wor. Bro. H. R. Tompkins, and Very Wor. Bro. T. W. Solmes, director of ceremonies. A wealth of floral tributes was colorful evidence of the high regard and esteem in which the late Mr. Lott was held by a host of friends from all parts of the province.

In his funeral address, Mr. Perkins stated that the Resurrection of Jesus is the proof and pledge that the same glorious victory over death and the grave shall be accorded his followers. Thanks be to God this afternoon the Christian is safe in Christ.

"Thus we are gathered here," Mr. Perkins said in eulogy, "as representatives from all walks of life to pay a final tribute to one who has lived in this locality all his life. His philosophy of life, namely, that life itself is a talent to be used and multiplied for use, led him to serve in the field of civic endeavor with distinction."

Friendly Disposition

"His genial disposition and friendly manner," the minister said, "made him a host of friends and acquaintances and provided him with many an opportunity which otherwise would not have been his."

How much satisfaction is derived from the comforting messages that have come to us from the poets, Mr. Perkins said, illustrating the statement with quotation from Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar". This poem was Tennyson's picture of death. Flags are flying. Bells are ringing. Friendly hands wave a last farewell. Soon the rope will slip from the pier and "we shall be sailing over the bar and out to the big sea, to that far-off port we call our "long home".

"We make death a time of mourning and we veil our faces and dress in garments of grief and act as if happiness had left us forever. We regard death as life's greatest disaster."

"Someone has said that sorrow is a pagan mood for death and lamentation a heathen tribute to the grave. But is it Christian. He who conquered death and charted the voyage to Heaven would have us feel as we cross the bar "O Death where is thy sting, O Grave where is thy Victory?"

Death is Just an Incident

"The twilight bell rings. It is the evening bell at the end of the day saying the work is over, labor is ended. Thus death to the follower of Christ is not defeat. It is victory. Death is just an incident in the progress of life. That which is born of the flesh may die. That which is born of the spirit will live forever. That is the sure and blessed hope, the satisfying and appeasing comfort the gospel of Jesus Christ inspires.

"And when the sun sets and we lay down the tools of our earthly toil and turn our faces homeward, may there be rest and peace at eventide. For across the bar awaits the Pilot for our triumphant spirits," Mr. Perkins said in conclusion.

Bearers

The honorary bearers were Mr. Justice Charles A. Cameron; Gordon Robertson; Harry R. Moorman; A. McLean Haig; Col. W. G. Ketcheson; J. Fred Wilson M.P.P.; Erie Denyes, and Mayor Frank S. Follwell.

The active bearers all members of Stirling Lodge No. 69 A.F. and A.M. included: Col. Roscoe Vanderwater M.C., E. W. Sandercock; C. I. Hatton, R. Meiklejohn; G. Bailey and R. E. Fox.

Cars of the Ontario Provincial Police detachment here preceded the funeral cortege to the cemetery.

Military Court Asked to Convict Colonel of Theft

Frankfurt, April 28 (AP)—Declaring "the honor of the United States is at stake," Maj. Joseph S. Robinson asked a military court today to convict Col. Jack W. Durant of stealing the $1,500,000 Hesse family jewels from Kronberg castle in occupied Germany.

A verdict appeared possible by nightfall in the trial, which has lasted nearly five months with hearings held on both sides of the Atlantic.

Durant, 37-year-old former Washington lawyer, is the third United States army officer tried for the theft of the once—Royal Hesse family's jewels from their castle, which the army now occupies as an officers' club. Many of the jewels never have been recovered.

"Throughout the course of two wars," Robinson told the court, "the United States has justly denounced violations by German and other governments of international provisions relating to inviolability of private property in occupied territory.

"We must not and will not be tarred with the same brush."

Durant's wife, a former W.A.C. captain once in charge of the castle, is serving a five year sentence for participation in the jewel theft, and Maj. David Watson is serving three years for receiving part of the loot.

RUSSIAN SOLDIER KILLED

Berlin, April 28 — (AP) — A Russian Army private was shot through the head and killed early Sunday while driving an ambulance down the highway just outside Berlin, the American provost marshal's office reported today. A witness said the shot appeared to come from a passing motorcyclist.

Chamber of Commerce Active In Year Says Annual Report

The annual report of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, just off the press reveals the activities of that organization during the past year.

The interest of the Chamber in community affairs is evidenced in a number of resolutions recommended and presented to the City Council pertaining to such matters as parking meters, housing enterprises, purchase of land for industrial sites, etc.

The chamber endorsed the organization of the Junior Board of Trade and extended the use of its offices and other facilities to the new organization.

It sent a delegation to wait on the Hon. Mr. Doucett, Minister of Highways to discuss the improvement of the Belleville-Bancroft highway. Following this interview and with the co-operation of local members of parliament, five miles of this road is now being improved, the report states.

In view of the expected increase in tourist trade, the chamber interviewed the Garage Operators Association and a request made that one or two garages remain open after 7 p.m. for the convenience of the tourist public. Directors were assured that the request would be granted.

Put Out Booklet

The chamber played an important part in the advertising of the holiday spots in the city and Hastings county. Some fifteen thousand new tourist booklets were ordered and will be distributed throughout the United States and Canada. All information, road maps of the United States and Canada are now available at the chamber offices.

A campaign was inaugurated by the Retail Merchants committee for the formation of a strong retail merchants division in the chamber. This division now has a membership of over 100 and a budget of $1,200 for projects for the expansion of retail trade during the coming year.

Chamber directors, the report states, are endeavoring to build a strong Chamber of Commerce and are quite aware that such requires weight of numbers, active committees and financial support. The membership now consists of over 200 representatives of all walks of life in the city and it is anticipated that this number will swell to 300 during the coming year.

OBITUARY

LEONARD THOMPSON
(Napanee)
(Contributed)

Napanee, April 28 (Special)—A very sad gloom was cast over this community when it was learned of the sudden death of Leonard Thompson by car accident near Deseronto on Thursday April 17th. Leonard better known as "Slim" was liked by all who knew him especially children and elderly people to whom he always seemed to be eager to render various acts of kindness.

Leonard was born in Newburgh, Ont., June 17th., 1913, and came to Napanee with his parents when he was nine years of age. After attending Newburgh and Napanee schools he was employed by Francis Bakery where he made many friends among his customers. After the fire of Francis Bakery he was employed by Canada Bread Co., Ltd., at Belleville, Trenton and Oshawa until May 1946, when he joined his father in the Insurance business, which he was engaged in at the time of his death.

He leaves to mourn his widow formerly Doris A. Reid R.R. No. 4, Belleville, whom he married in Oct. 1936, also his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Thompson and sisters (Bernice) Mrs. Reginald Bowen Napanee and (Edna) Mrs. Perry A Young, Belleville.

The body rested at the Tierney Funeral Home, Napanee, until Monday when the funeral service was conducted in St. Mary Magdalene (Anglican) Church by Ven. Archdeacon R. J. Dumbrille.

Masonic service was held at the graveside in Riverview Cemetery, Napanee by Craig Lodge of Deseronto.

Friends and relatives from out of town attending the funeral were present from Toronto, Oshawa, Peterborough, Trenton, Waupoos, Kingston, Arden, Belleville, Deseronto and surrounding districts.

True Ideal of Youth of World Should Be to Become People Of Power--Maj. J. Foote, V.C.

Hero Of Dieppe Speaks To Large Congregation And Albert College Cadet Corps At St. Andrew's

The true ideal of life for men, especially the youth of the world is to become people of power, and personality within themselves. Down through the ages, men in adversity have often emerged to become something more than they were before, Major John W. Foote, formerly of Madoc, and the only Canadian padre to win the Victoria Cross in the last war, declared here on Sunday.

The hero of Dieppe, who refused to leave his men and was taken prisoner, spoke to a large congregation at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church which included the smartly-uniformed boys' and girls' cadet corps of Albert College. The corps paraded to the church behind the Belleville Collegiate Institute band.

To the young people, Major Foote said, "You will find you will not go through life without facing some situations which are too much for you. There will be a long tussle within yourselves before you decide to start out for yourselves. Perhaps you will do something foolish at some time or another."

Marked Tendency

"But out of these troubles you will emerge to be something more. I find among young people a marked tendency sometimes to demand a change of environment to suit themselves. A lot of men who have moved across the country want to get back. Their idea of adventure is gone. They do not like to see new people and new places. When I find a man like that there is usually something wrong. But perhaps out of these things there comes something better."

"He had found in his own life," Major Foote said, "that he could have had years of misery. He could have sat around and moped and felt sorry for himself. Perhaps these things are a challeng to us and out of them comes something better. For out of the privations and misery suffered in the war, something good came.

There was a good lesson in the depression years, the speaker pointed out. "We must have food and shelter, but in those days people learned they could get along on a lot less than they thought possible."

MAJOR JOHN W FOOTE

Find New Way of Life

"Some people," he went on, "felt that everything was gone. There was nothing to live for. Others found a new way of life, and new interests. They learned that it did not pay to become too much absorbed in the material things of life."

"And we can have a lot of fun in this life, too," Major Foote said. "I enjoy the movies, sports etc., and I like to hear bands play. I like to hear that people are doing things in which they have an interest—and which they are willing to learn. It behooves all to take an interest in things outside themselves."

It is a great thing to have friends, to see them and take an interest in them. "I lived in a room for a long time with 200 other men," Major Foote said. "I cooked with them, ate with them and stayed with them. I learned that you cannot get along living with people unless you have good manners, the kind that grows out of an intimate consideration for other people. I could not have lived without it.

Must Have Religion

Mankind cannot get along without religion. Man has to have his faith in God and in the idea that goodness is important. "We felt the outcome of the war was certain because we knew we were fighting something that was rotten and corrupt. We had to have the faith that was the power to defeat evil. And we must have that faith outside ourselves that is strong enough to sustain us."

Major Foote related certain instances of life in the German prison camps. "In one place where there were 5,000 prisoners, we had a weekly church attendance of 1,000. We had three splendid choirs. One English, one Scottish and one Welsh. The Welsh was the best of the three. We had a band with a membership of 100 and also an orchestra. We had study group meetings, in fact everything of this nature the men wanted."

"The Christian faith does not commit us to too much," the speaker concluded, "but it does commit us to the things that are essential. Many men, who have been sour and cynical have come out in the world, something better."

Minister in Charge

The Rev. J. G. Hornsby, minister of the church was in charge of the service, and formally welcomed the cadets corps, and other visitors. The musical part of the program included the anthem "Non Nobis Domine" (Not unto us, but unto Thee, O Lord), sung by the choir under the direction of the organist and choir director W. E. Fletcher, A.T.C.M.

The cadet corps, both boys and girls, immaculate in their trim uniforms, formed up outside the church and to the music of the Collegiate band paraded through city streets prior to dismissal

Count de Marigny Applies to Union For Seaman's Berth

Montreal April 28 —(CP)— Count Alfred de Marigny has applied to the Canadian Seamen's Union for a berth as a seaman, Danny Daniels, C.S.U. official, said today.

De Marigny accused and acquitted of the Bahamas murder of his father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes, in 1943, telephoned Daniels several weeks ago seeking a ship and was told that the seamen's books were closed the C.S.U. official said.

However, de Marigny had been invited to come to C.S.U. headquarters with his papers and had been assured that his case would be considered by the board. De Marigny, who stated his preference for a ship to a West Indies port, had failed to appear or to communicate with the Union.

It was reported today that Marigny has been ordered deported from Canada as soon as a ship can be found for him. Immigration officials here said any comment on the case would have to come from Ottawa.

TO PRESENT KANGAROO
By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Sydney, Australia, April 28 — (CP) — The Sydney Journalists Club is arranging to fly a young kangaroo from Australia to Canada as a good will gesture in connection with the annual "Byline Ball" of the Toronto Men's Press Club June 7.

The Toronto club invited the Sydney club to be represented at the ball by one of its members, but because none were free to make the trip, Arthur Crouch, Sydney club president, arranged for the gift of the kangaroo.

The kangaroo will be the second to fly the Pacific but first to fly to Canada.

'Leadership in Action' Theme Junior Chamber of Commerce Convention Held in City

Warren E. Jones, Belleville, Named Regional Director For Ensuing Term

Matters pertaining to Junior Chamber of Commerce policy in both civic and national matters were discussed over the weekend when delegates of Region VI embracing the area from Peterborough to Montreal met in Belleville for their annual conference and election of officers.

The conference commenced Friday evening at the Hotel Quinte with a luncheon Saturday noon and a banquet and stag at the Bay of Quinte Country Club Saturday evening.

Young local industrialist Warren E. Jones was named as regional director for the next year, succeeding A. G. Price of Montreal, past president of the Montreal Junior Chamber of Commerce. Tom Carruthers, Belleville, will act as secretary-treasurer.

Charles Lundy, Belleville, conference chairman, presided over the opening session of the conference on Saturday morning, introducing Dave Price, president of the local Junior Board of Trade, who welcomed the delegates to the city. The meeting was then turned over to A. G. Price, regional director.

Theme of Conference.

Speaking briefly at the outset of the conference the regional director pointed out the theme for the conference was "Leadership in Action" and urged that "Jay Cees" fit themselves for the responsibilities of citizenship, aiming at a higher type of men to represent the country in government.

He stated that leadership was lacking in the world's attempt to reconstruct itself after six long years of war. Leadership was a quality which the Junior Chamber strived to develop in its members across the country and throughout the world.

Saturday morning saw the conference break up into clinics with Joe Benson of Kingston as chairman of government and civic affairs; Phil T. R. Pugsley, chairman of leadership training; Hugh Savage, chairman of internal organization and Leo Copeland as chairman of tourism.

Briefs Presented

Just before the conclusion of the conference the clinic leaders presented briefs of their committee findings and brought in resolutions resulting out of them.

One of the highlights of the conference was an Oregon debate "Resolved that Socialism is inevitable in Canada" with Louis Yanover and Malcolm Robb of Belleville presenting the affirmative with Ron Ritchie and Mitchell Dent of Ottawa presenting the negative side.

The two judges and the conference delegates decided unanimously in favor of the negative side. The debate took place at the Saturday noon luncheon at which Dave Price acted as chairman with Phil Pugsley acting as debate chairman.

Fred H. Deacon, of Deacon Brothers, Ltd., was the guest speaker at the conference banquet held Saturday evening. He stated that Canada was the finest country in the world and was producing some of the world's finest goods.

Goods Not Labelled

He claimed, however, that Canadians were remiss in defining their products as being produced in Canada giving as an example the fact that although Canada produces the world's finest cheddar cheese it is impossible to procure in England cheddar cheese which is labelled as being Canadian.

The speaker referred briefly to present conditions in England and told of his own experiences in that country during the critical coal and power shortage there last winter. He admitted food shortages in England and strict government control of industry and rationing but held that England would come back.

"I am not selling Britain short" he said. "Any nation which can build an ocean going liner such as the Queen Elizabeth and operate it at a profit has my complete confidence.

Canada had already done much for Britain. The billion dollar wartime gift and the later credit of $750,000,000 were mentioned. This enabled Britain to purchase the products of Canadian fields, forests and mines.

Vast Potential Market

England represented to Canada a vast potential market but Canadians should merchandise their products in such a manner that the English householder will recognize them as Canadian products. 'If we don't do this we will be missing the boat."

Comparing prices in Canada with prices throughout the world, the speaker stated that prices in this country were certain to rise. Subsidies and controls should be eased. Then the true cost of commodities would be seen instead of paying for part of the cost through paying incomes taxes.

Constructive criticism of government was needed and in this members of Junior Chambers of Commerce had a splendid opportunity to serve their country.

The guest speaker was introduced by Bruce Lattimer with thanks being expressed by Charles Cawker. Other speakers heard briefly were Mayor Frank Follwell, George H. Stokes, M.P., for Hastings South, and Robt. A. Pringle, Industrial Commission chairman. Gus E. Freeman, president of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, also spoke briefly and urged a program of action from the Junior Chamber. "Criticism generally comes from those who do but little but the satisfaction of service comes from a job well done."

Charter Presented

Maurice Rinfrit, Montreal, national vice president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, brought greetings to Mayor Follwell from Mayor Houde of Montreal.

The charter of the recently formed Peterborough Junior Chamber of Commerce, was presented by A. G. Price, regional director, to Kenneth Jones of that city.

Resolutions passed at the annual meeting included one urging formation of a national affairs committee by all member units. Such a committee would study and form opinions on matters of national interest and would not be officially concerned with civic matters.

A second resolution asked that a special committee be set up to investigate conditions detrimental to the tourist trade such as unsanitary restaurants, bad hotels and poor roads. The conference delegates felt that the tourist industry was of special interest to the area represented by the "Jay-Cee" region VI.

A Montreal resolution asked that a committee be set up to decide on national program policy. This would be of considerable assistance to new unit members who might otherwise be in the dark as to the program to be adopted on national policy.

Resolution Not Dealt With

A Belleville resolution which claimed failure on the part of the Chamber of Commerce and the Junior Chamber of Commerce to give effective leadership in meeting problems of production, labor and management and going on record as supporting profit participation in Canadian industry, was not dealt with at the conference.

The resolutions committee recommended that the Belleville resolution be referred to the incoming executive, but Malcolm Robb, Belleville, moved an amendment calling for its discussion by delegates.

Speaking to the resolutions committee motion, Leslie C. Williams, Montreal, and chairman of the national resolutions committee, held that the Belleville resolution was too complicated and had too many angles which members did not clearly understand. He also held that the Junior Board of Trade should not criticise the senior organization for failure to do something about that which the Junior Chamber itself has done very little.

Resolution Tabled

The amendment to have the resolution discussed was carried by conference delegates but owing to lack of time Mr. Robb moved that the resolution be tabled until the next regional conference. This was carried. But to place the matter directly before the new executive the content of the Belleville resolution was brought up under new business, by Charles Lundy of this city.

Appreciation of the visiting delegates to conference chairman Charles Lundy and to his assistants, was expressed by Regional Director A. G. Price, before the conference broke up.

Peterborough Man Held on Charge Attempted Murder

Cobourg, April 28. (CP)—Jack Jackson, 45, was in critical condition in hospital here today with knife wound in the stomach and police held James Angus, 39, of Peterborough, on a charge of attempted murder.

Angus was picked up by police at Jackson's home in the nearby village of Baltimore, where police said they found a blood-stained dagger. Mrs. Jackson was also hurt but suffered only superficial wounds. Her husband's condition was grave.

Police said they believed that Angus had gone to the Jackson home and there attacked both Mr. and Mrs. Jackson. The attack occurred Sunday evening.

Angus was to appear in court today on the attempted murder charge.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto April 28 (CP)—Prices were firm in all groups in the early session on the Toronto Stock Exchange today when low volume and fairly selective trading found the price level edging upward. Action on the whole however, was dull and lacked individual features. Volume for the first three hours was 426,000 shares.

Base metals were firm all morning for good fractional gains but a slight easing off tendency was visible shortly after noon. Golds held on generally minor gains with Bralorne up 1-8 at 11, Kerr Addison up 3-8 at 14 3-8, T. Hughes 10 at $3.40. Secondary issues were in majority for gains but generally within a narrow range.

Industrials posted the odd point change but fractions predominated.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, April 28 —(AP)— Stocks generally tilted moderately toward recovery today although many market leaders faltered and dealings were among the slowest of the year.

Fractional, advances were in the majority near the fourth hour but top gains were reduced.

HOGS

Toronto, April 28 (CP) — Grade A dressed bacon-hogs were unchanged at Brantford $21.35 delivered, in market reporting early today.

Stanley Jackson Plainfield Native Killed at Barrie

Stanley Jackson, formerly of Plainfield, and late residence 4 Lambert Avenue, Toronto, was killed instantly in a motor car accident at Barrie, Ontario, on Saturday last. It is reported that he was towing a car and when he stepped from his own car he was hit by a passing car.

The late Mr. Jackson, who was in his 43rd. year, was born at Plainfield and was a son of Mr. James W. Jackson and the late Mrs. Jackson. For the past six years he lived in Toronto and was in the employ of the Toronto Transportation Commission. He was a member of the United Church. Old friends in this district will regret to learn of his death.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Eva Tripp; one son, Private Harold Jackson, Barrie; one daughter, Mrs. Hilda Thompson, Toronto; his father, James Wesley Jackson of Hermon, Ontario; one brother, Murray Jackson, Holloway; two sisters, Mrs. Emma Bomhour and Mrs. Margaret Lake, both of Bancroft.

The funeral will take place in Toronto on Wednesday.

"Funeral of Andy Depression" Marks Opening of Deacon Bros. Convention

A cigarette-smoking "parson" and a live "corpse" that persisted in fanning a feverish brow with a large white lily while a sign inscribed with the words, "At Rest" hung on his chest, marked a humorous skit that caricatured the passing and "funeral of Andy Depression" in the offices of the Deacon Bros. Ltd. this morning.

The ceremony that marked the demise of the mythical destroyer of human happiness, a brother to the late "Percy Depression" who enjoyed this life from 1929 to 1934, opened a three-day convention of the sales organization of the company. Sales representatives from Halifax to Vancouver and the far north are here to attend the get-together.

The funeral skit that inaugurated the convention came as a complete surprise to the attending representatives. First surprise and the intimation that something out of the ordinary was afoot, was noted in the immaculate morning garb in which Messrs. Fred Deacon and John Deacon were arrayed.

Appropriate Setting

Then the attending representatives were ushered into the spacious offices of Mr. Fred Deacon. Came surprise No. 2. For here in its funeral solemnity was a beautiful casket set against a background of purple drapes, with flanking urns of white lilies.

Atop the casket was a sign which read:-

DIED
"Andy Depression 47-50
at Canada on April 25, 1947
FUNERAL
At Deacon Bros. Ltd, Belleville
On April 28, 1947, 9 a.m.
Interment, City Dump."

Then Mr. Fred Deacon mounted a specially-placed podium and in solemn accent and with funereal mien read a long dissertation on the life and death of the late "Percy Depression" and concluding with a disrespectful eulogy to the late but not lamented "Andy Depression."

In jocular vein he referred to the effects on the world at large of these infamous children, but was glad to announce that the second edition, "Andy" was short-lived.

Later, Mr. George Smith, of the Deacon Sales organization was selected as the "corpse" or the human representative of the late "Andy Depression" and was accordingly invested with the "At Rest" insignia. A large lily was placed in his hands and surrounded by his colleagues, smiled nervously as photographers cameras clicked. Another funereal touch was noted in the black mourning garb worn by a number of the feminine staff of the company who were present at the photographic ceremonies.

The Royal Tour

Britain's Royal Family are on their way back home after the extended tour of the Union of South Africa, possibly the greatest tour of the kind in British history and one that reveals in an unsettled world following the greatest war in history that there is in the nations of the British Commonwealth of Nations the spirit of accord, something so much needed everywhere in the world to bring the real fruits of peace. It was a memorable tour because the entire Royal Family, Their Majesties and their two daughters were taking part.

In the words of Prime Minister Smuts, people of all races and colors have been thrilled by the visit of their King and Queen and the members of their family.

Gifts from the people of the Union were showered upon the members of the Royal Family. These like the great welcome, everywhere extended to the Royal guests prove the warmth of the devotion of the people of that united land of South Africa.

Their Majesties and the Princesses have won completely the hearts of the peoples of the Union. In a world of many changes the British Throne remains with all its ancient significance of the unity in the world of peoples that is in the Commonwealth of Nations. The coming ,the visit and the going of the Royal Family absorbed the attention of the people of the various parts of the Union and the tour was an event of the greatest historic importance to South Africa.

For the rest of the British Commonwealth the remarks of His Majesty may be significant, for he said that it was his hope such tours would be "less unusual in the future."

The responsibilities which rest upon the Crown are very great. Their Majesties and their daughters cannot but be physically tired after the great series of events in which they took part, but they and the people they visited have been spiritually exalted in having met one another in one of the great portions of the Empire where British ideals of democracy are held.

A pleasant voyage to be received by the "welcome home" of the home folk, the centre of the Commonwealth, is the blessing millions of people in South Africa, in other parts of the Commonwealth and in many other parts of the earth will wish the King and Queen and the Princesses.

The tour was arranged by Prime Minister Smuts, one of the great figures in the Commonwealth of Nations. His intense love of his country made him an ideal person to plan the course which the Royal Family were to take. He has seen to it that the Royal guests have had a most intimate and satisfying view and the opportunity of meeting the people of the Union ahd of understanding the appeals of that lovely land.

South Africans now know their King and Queen who have taken a deep interest in their country for the people of all the races have come to know their Sovereign and His Queen very closely. The part the young Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose played in the tour must not be forgotten. The deep family ties between royal parents and daughters are the pride of the British people and an example to the world.

Moscow Meetings End

After almost seven weeks and forty-four meetings the Foreign Ministers of Britain, United States, France and Russia have separated at Moscow with little accomplishment except in clearly showing where the four Great Powers stand on the issues at stake.

Secretary of State Marshall of the United States has placed the responsibility for the lack of success upon Russia.

The question of the future of Germany, its form of government, the future of the Ruhr, the position of Austria, Russian's demand for ten billions of dollars of reparations from Germany, the economic unity of Germany and others remain unsolved.

Before the conference opened there was a strong feeling that it was unlikely to reach successful conclusions on matters of the greatest importance to the world.

The situation leaves intensified the sense of unsettlement and bafflement which will have its results upon the people who are still suffering from the deep wounds of war which ended nearly two years ago.

However there is a plan for another meeting within a couple of months, to see if the Big Four Powers can reach settlement of problems that are crying to be

The Russian attitude has been of such an uncomprising character as to hold out not much hope for meetings in the near future.

An Ancient Killer

Many have forgotten that before vaccination smallpox was one of the principal killers. This had been so throughout the ages. In all times pock-marked faces were numerous in gatherings of people. The disease certainly affected the course of history. Before vaccination it was the curse of armies. In many instances it directly determined the outcome of battle.

In London in the middle of the 18th century, when an English country physician, Edward Jenner was experimenting with vaccination, smallpox caused one death in ten. Dr. Jenner's discoveries grew out of the common observation that whoever recovered from smallpox enjoyed a life-long immunity. The first vaccinations were difficult and dangerous as they tended to spread the disease. About the end of the century, Dr. Jenner demonstrated that innoculation with cowpox would also provide immunity, and thus the present-day method was established.

We are reminded by New York's experience that even yet there is smallpox in the world and that it is often fatal. However, neither New Yorkers nor Clevelanders need ever to fall victim to it. Vaccination about once every five years guarantees immunity.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Master of Perfumery

A new chair has been created at the Institute of Medical and Scientific Research of Grasse which seems destined to become as important as that of chemistry, botany or biology. Its occupant will be a professor of perfumery. "Why not?" said the Mayor of Grasse, as quoted in France-Amerique. There the chairs for textiles and silks, for arts and crafts. Why not for perfumery — one of the most important French exports? After all, Grasse is the international capital of the perfume industry, the city of alchemists. Cultivating and harvesting flowers, distilling, bottling and corking their oils has been for years the occupation of most of the town's inhabitants.

At the turn of the century the idea of a chair of perfumery would have been preposterous. Today perfume is an industry. The gifted and omnipotent "Noses" of Grasse who spent their days sniffing happily jasmines, orange blossoms and spice bouquets will have to bow before the spirit that science will bring to that industry.

One rather surprising result of the introduction of stirrups has been the use of heels on shoes. These were brought in about the sixteenth century to provide a rest for the feet of horsemen. They still survive, although we no longer go about on horseback, in spite of the fact that they are uncomfortable and unhealthy, and that it is impossible to walk naturally in them. This is a striking example of how, through sheer inertia, something can continue to be used when there is no longer any need for it.—G. N. L. Cooke, in London Times.

Dost thou love life? — Then do not squander time for that is the stuff that life is made of.—Benjamin Franklin.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Which Vice President took the oath in Cuba?

William Rufus King of Alabama who was elected Vice President on the Democratic ticket with Franklin Pierce in 1852 took the oath of office in Cuba, then a Spanish possession.

Shortly before the inauguration King went to that country for his health. Congress passed a special act on March 2, 1852, authorizing the American consul at Havana to administer the oath to the Vice President-elect in Cuba. This was done at Havana, March 4, 1853. King returned to Alabama, where he died April 18 of the same year, without performing any of the duties of his new office.

Elbridge Gerry, who was elected Vice President with James Madison in 1812, did not go to Washington for the inauguration March 4, 1812, but took the oath at Boston, March 4, 1812, and did not go to Washington till the Senate met the following May 24.

The constitution does not prescribe a particular oath fon the Vice President as it does in the case of the President, but Paragraph 3 of Article VI provides that Senators, Representatives, members of State legislatures and "all executive and judicial officers of the United States and of the several States, shall be bound by oath of affirmation, to support the Constitution."

The first act of Congress, approved June 1, 1789, provided that this oath should be administered in the following form: "I, A. B., do solemnly swear or affirm (as the case may be) that I will support the Constitution of the United States." Ordinarily the retiring Vice President administers the oath to his successor in that office. If there is no Vice President the President Pro Tempore or some other Senator administers the oath to the incoming Vice President.

It is often said that the United States had a Vice President before it had a President. Owing to the delay in organizing the Federal Government in 1789 John Adams took the oath as Vice President April 21 and began the duties as president of the Senate, while Washington did not take the oath as President till April 30, and then the country had a qualified Vice President nine days before it had a qualified President.

As President of the Senate Vice President Adams took part in the debates and made long speeches from the chair, a precedent not followed by Vice President Jefferson and his successors.

Million Workers Get Wage Boost During April

New York, April 28 —(AP)— Three new wage settlements announced over the weekend brought to nearly 1,000,000 the number of workers in the steel automobile and electrical industries in the United States who won wage increases during April.

Settlements boosting hourly wages approximately 15 cents when vacation pay and other benefits are included were announced Saturday by General Electric Company, Chrysler Corporation, and Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation.

This wage pattern developed during a month that saw these four other major developments in the labor and economic field: (1) initial congressional action on labor legislation; (2) an appeal from the administration to stem the rise in prices; (3) a six-day walkout of 400,000 mine workers called in memory of 111 mine dead in the Centralia, Ill., disaster, a stoppage that lengthened to two weeks for most mines, and (4) the strike of more than 300,000 telephone workers April 7 over still-unsettled contract issues.

Chrysler's settlement with 70,000 members of the United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.), which will affect also 15,000 unaffiliated and salaried employees, left only Ford Motor Company among the "Big Three" with wage negotiations still pending. Ford negotiations were to begin May 31, but in view of the settlements by General Motors and Chrysler they may open sooner.

Setting a precedent for the General Motors settlement, and subsequent spread of the pattern to steel and the automobile industries, was the earlier action of the United Rubber Workers (C.I.O.) in getting substantially the same terms from the major rubber companies.

RMC at Kingston Will Return to Its Traditional Role

Ottawa, April 28 — (CP) — A long-awaited announcement heralding the return of the Royal Military College at Kingston, to its traditional role as the training ground for Canada's permanent force army officers is expected to be made next week, it was learned today.

Defence Department officials declined comment on reports that September, 1948, had been set as the month for renewal of the training which turned out its last class of gentlemen cadets in 1942 and then accepted a different role in the prosecution of the war.

It became a staff college for the officers who led the Canadians in action in the Second World War. In June, 1946, it was the scene of the opening of the first post-war staff college in the British Commonwealth, one to take rank with the Camberleys and Quettas. It also was the first peacetime staff college in army history.

One hint of R.M.C.'s cadet-training future was given during Defence Minister Claxton's recent western tour when he said that naval and air force officer cadets would be trained jointly at the Royal Roads Naval College in British Columbia and that it was hoped eventually to have officer cadets of all three forces train together both there and at R. M. C. The courses start this September.

The impact of combined operations and of the closed co-ordination of the defence department generally are expected to make themselves felt sharply in the new syllabus laid down for the gentlemen-cadets when they eventually do return to R. M. C. after five years and more of exile.

The college was founded in 1874. most of Canada's top ground commanders of the recent war were graduates.

HAY FEVER CATCHES MORE AND PEOPLE WITH THEIR THEIR CAL CIUM DOWN

I keep telling people here, each year, that any one with susceptibility to pollen should begin well in advance of the season hardening or densenitizing himself or herself against it by booping the daily intake of lime calcium.

Nutrition authorities find that calcium is the element most frequently deficient in the diet of Americans.

Medical authoritities find that calcium is beneficial in various ailments in which weeping, oozing, watery dripping from the nasal passages, sneezing or hyperesthetic rhinitis may be manifest—and that's hay fever, isn't it?

I am no authority about anything to speak of here, but I am convinced that booping the daily intake of calcium (and of course vitamin D to insure good utilization of the calcium) for six or eight weeks before the hay fever season or as nearly so as there may still be time for, and continuing the daily supplementation of the diet with calcium and vitamin D throughout the season, is the most satisfactory way to harden or desensitize oneself against pollinosis or hay fever.

For the symtomatic relief of the distressing manifestations—the stuffiness, irritation, sneezing—of hay fever, ashma or other form allergy, the best emergency remedy I know is potassium chloride combined with vitamin C. In some cases of allergy this works like magic; in other cases it has no effect at all. Remember, this is no remedy or cure, but merely a relief for allergic misery in some circumstances—just what circumstances I don't know.

Finally, the general formula I gave here a year ago (it is for your physician to prescribe and it is not available otherwise), has proved satisfactory in a great many cases of severe hay fever with asthmatic manifestations—it is a combination off vitamin C, thiamine, racephedrine and theophylline. I can give no further physicians if they ask for it.

All the information and advice I have for persons subject to hay fever, asthma or allergy to pollen is given in the pamphlets "Hay Fever," "Asthma," "Relief for Allergy" (any one mailed on request if you provide stamped envelope bearing your address, and in the booklet "The Calcium Shortage". (ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope).

Steps in Care of the Nails

For beautiful nails, give them a five minute bath in warm cuticle oil once a week.

By HELEN FOLLETT

LUCKY is the lady who can toddle once a week to the beauty works, get herself prettied. Some of us find it difficult to spare the time, life being the stampede of activities that it is. If Genevieve, the beautiful manicurist, grooms your pink finger sheaths every seven days, you'll never have to give them a thought, it is likely.

But, if you aren't indulging in professional attentions, you'll have to do quick cleanup jobs now and then. Nails take a terrible punishment if a woman has to go through the domestic chores every day.

The Proper Tools

One should have the proper tools, a long, sharp flexible file of high grade steel, beveling files or emergy boards, orange wood sticks, cuticle cream, a nail white pencil, polish and polish remover.

Start with the filing, sweeping from sides to centre, forming a pleasing oval line. Pass the stick under the nail eaves to flush up little shreds that remain there; remove them with the emery board. The reason for using the metal file first is because it does the job more quickly than emery. Remove the polish.

Now for a good old scrubbing with hot soap suds and a brush, rinse and dry. Use the nail white pencil. Apply cuticle cream or mineral oil to each nail to soften the flesh that must be lifted gently with the orange wood stick Do little circles.

Pressure at the base of the nail must be avoided as the matrix can be injured and a deformed nail may result. Snip off hangnails if you are so unfortunate as to have these pests, being careful not to make a wound. After this, another hand washing to remove cream or oil.

Before the polish is applied the pink shells should be as dry as a bone, absolutely free of oily applications.

Marmora

Marmora.—The April meeting of St. Paul's W.A., was held at the home of Mrs. Eugene Brady on Thursday afternoon. In the absence of the President, Mrs. J. M. Brownlie, the rector presided. The meeting opened with prayer and the W.A. Litany. Mrs. H. Wilkins read the Bible lesson. The rector drew attention to Dorcas work asking members to donate for the bale to be sent to a mission field.

A stirring report was given by Mrs. S. C. Boyd, the Branch's delegate to the 61st annual Diocesan meeting recently held in Brockville. The speaker mentioned that the sixty-nine branches to the W.A. in the Diocese were represented at this gathering. Over 400 communicants partook of the Sacrament, administered by Right Rev. John Lyons, Bishop of Ontario and Right Rev. W. L. Wright, Bishop of Algoma, assisted by other clergy. The Thankoffering of over $16,000 was the largest in the history of the W.A. Mrs. Boyd mentioned that the W.A. was planning the collection of used Christmas cards to send to foreign mission fields where these cards are used by the missionaries in various ways.

The Study period was led by Rev. J. M. Brownlie with thoughts centring on an Indian Christmas in Kangra. The meeting closed with the benediction and refreshments were served by the hostess.

Lantigen "E"

TAKEN BY MOUTH NO PAINFUL INJECTIONS

LANTIGEN "E" contains extracts of pollens of grasses, weeds, and spores of Canadian origin to which Hay Fever sufferers in Canada are usually allergic. Sufferers from Hay Fever are well advised to start taking LANTIGEN "E" about a month before their usual attack begins. The severity of the attack may be greatly reduced, if not eliminated entirely, when LANTIGEN "E" is taken as directed. Since bacterial infection of the upper respiratory tract frequently occurs with Hay Fever, LANTIGEN "E" combines the antigens of these organisms, a vaccine, with the pollens of grasses, weeds, and spores.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Another Husband Wants To Spank His Wife

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Since my marriage, about a year ago, my wife has set out to rule our home and make me something I have always despised—a hen-pecked husband. When she does not get her way, she goes into a tantrum and sulks, refusing to speak to me or do her household work, for days at a time. On at least three occasions, after a spat, she went out with one of her former suitors.

Following our last dispute and reconciliation, I told her that, next time, I would give her the good spanking she should have received from her father years ago. She told me that I don't have the courage to spank her and, if I did, I would be a wife beater.

What I would like to know is: (1) Are there any young wives today who are spanked by their husbands during their early years of marriage, and, if so, what percentage of the total would you estimate they are? (2) Do you believe an application of the hairbrush to your wife would be justified and would it have any constructive effect? "T. R."

Dear "T. R.":

I am quite certain that there are no statistics about the number of brides who have been spanked by their husbands. Personally, I would estimate the percentage to be very slightly above zero. As to whether or not such a course would do your spoiled wife any good or not, I have no idea. But, personally again, I believe there are other and more suitable ways in which you can make it clear to her that you intend neither to let her "henpeck" you, nor to let her have her own way invariably.

I realize, of course, that this matter of spanking wives pops up every now and then, but I think it all pretty silly and childish, and—an adult like yourself should be able to work out his problem in a more mature fashion.

A Mixed Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 19, engaged to a fellow of 21. We are of different religion, and, at the time of our engagement, he planned to change his religion for me.

Since then I found out that none of his people will attend his wedding if he is married in my church. My father insists on all his family marrying in our church, and I'd like to please my father, but I'd also like to see my fiance happy, and not to have any of his people at his wedding certainly would not help to make him so.

So we have decided to be married quietly, and don't you think we should have our way so far as that goes? As long as we have each other, there is really nothing else that's of real importance. "L.C.H."

Dear "L.C.H.":

I think you make quite a mistake in feeling that your love is all that matters in a situation of this kind and that "nothing else is of real importance." There are many things of very great importance and seriousness to be considered in this type of marriage.

If your fiance is quite certain that he will be happy and content in changing his religion, it may be that no future problems will arise between you, so far as this is concerned. But it would be a good idea for both of you to look ahead, as far as possible, and make as sure as you can, at this point, that you are always likely to look at the problems of married life as they affect yourselves and your children, from the same viewpoint.

As far as your wedding is concerned, I don't quite know what you mean by being married "quietly." Do you mean that you would be married without either of your families being present and simply making it a matter of yourselves and the clergyman? It is too bad that fiance's family take the stand they do, but, if you are unable to change their attitude, then I think you would be entirely within your rights to keep the ceremony your own personal affair.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Blue Lids And Golden Lashes

Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

It might be a bright idea to take a fling at eye shadows.

This is the time of year when a woman thinks that maybe she'd better get herself a new face for the approaching holiday season and the galas thereof. It occurs to her that it might be a bright idea to take a fling at eye shadows. She has observed that on some women they are seductive and impart a mysterious, compelling air. She has also noticed that on others they appear pretty messy, suggest late hours if not actual dissipation. Not knowing just how to tackle the matter, she has held back. But now—well, what the heck? Why not? When Daddy sees them he will probably jump into a fit, and that may stir up his sluggish circulation, be of benefit to his health.

Reports from the cosmetic front are to the effect that eye shadows are pushing their way along, getting more and more popular. They are taking a more prominent place among those various units, items, gadgets and tricks that go toward composing the feminine face according to modern ideas.

The first rule: endeavor to find a color that will flatter the eyes, the complexion and the hair. A big order. It is a good idea to toddle to a make-up bar and get professional advice, which costs nothing. All you have to do is to make a reasonable number of purchases. The attendants at these bars—practically all large department stores have them—know the make-up alphabet from A to Z and back again.

Cast a weather eye over the offerings in the shops. Eyelid pigment comes in many different shades of blue, mauve, purple, green, brown and grey. Blue ranks highest in favor; it flatters blondes and brunettes, but the redheads should steer clear of it. A faint sage green is their eyelid dish; it is friendly to the flaming thatch. If violet eyes want a purple depth, bronze shadows will be a happy choice. Green can be used on green eyes, but it must not be a shade that is stronger than that of the eye itself.

The blue-eyed dolly will find many tones of blue pastes, and her selection must be carefully made. Grey shadows are supposed to be for grey eyes, but mauve will give the eyes more character and, often, a faint green will prove effective.

Condition the flesh with a light cream, removing as much of it as you can. Apply the coloring medium sparingly, friction it in as you do rouge, starting at the inner corner of the eyelid. Do not let it extend beyond the far terminal of the eyebrow. See that it does a fade-away as you work upward.

Treatment of the lashes must be accomplished delicately so that the lid coloring is not disturbed. Use brown mascara, never black. If you would follow a new line of make-up thought, you can touch the lashes with gold. Always brush from underneath upward to give the lashes a pretty tilt.

DOLL'S Hospital
DOLLS 104 HOSPITAL

Disabled Navy Vet Finds Career in Broken Dolls — Disabled dolls from the U.S.A., England and all parts of Canada are pyramiding a neat profit for 100%-disabled Fleet Air Arm veteran Les Upright (shown above) whose successful doll's hospital at 104 Barton St. East, Hamilton, Ont., purchased by 6½ years' gratuities, has enabled DVA officials to write him off their books as a closed case. When woeful little girls like three-year-old Elaine Rhodes (above) of 130 Avondale Ave., come to him for help, Les knows he's in the right job.

Fashion Flashes

THE TRIM LOOK for a suit is nicely achieved by a tailored weskit dickie. White pique is used for a neat number with a collared, scoop neckline and a pearl-buttoned front. The deep, oval neckline is filled in with white organdie, with groups of horizontal tucks separated by pearl buttons.

ROW UPON ROW of tiny black lace ruffles is a good formula for an evening skirt, especially when it is topped with a white marquisette blouse. The vestee front and the cuffs of the long, loose sleeves are encrusted with iridescent sequins, which also make the tiny club collar.

VERY CRISP fabrics, such as taffeta, moire or faille, are liked for after-five informal wear. Navy faille taffeta makes a nice little suit dress, the jacket top flaring in tiered sections at the hips. Sleeve ruffs and a wide framing collar are of white batiste and lace.

COMING BACK into the handbag picture is the underarm bag, which is expected to register more strongly come fall. Saddle-stitched saddle leather is used for a nice version of the underarm bag made with a flap closing that conceals a zipper top as well as a small outside zzipper compartment just under the flap.

A CARRY-OVER from last year is the bowler or derby hat gone completely feminine. White Milan straw is used for one of these little brow-clearing hats, all decked out with neatly tailored white chiffon roses and stiff white chicken-mesh veiling.

Not in many seasons has the little frock been so well handled, the little frock that is so good for those important little evenings. Navy blue silk crepe is used for such a frock. The skirt is rather long and very full. The plain bodice has a deep, scooped-out oval neckline flanked by a very deep, pleated self-bertha.

Big and beautiful coats are often seen in bold plaid designs and have attached hoods that also serve as cowl collars.

Cover-up sections are used for new strapless evening frocks. Gray marquisette over pink taffeta is used for a pretty frock. The skirt has a side ripple with large sequin and bead motifs. A two-tiered capelet with similar trimming discloses, when removed, a strapless bodice with draped waistline and bustline.

The backbone of a wardrobe for a city child who has to spend much of the summer in town is a dark suit of light-weight fabric. Black or navy pure silk shantung is used for handsome suits cut on softly tailored lines, with tapering revers and one-button closing at the waist. Jackets are rather long; some have fish-tail backs, while others are plain.

Ready for Spring wear, and good right through the Summer, are simple hats of fine straw with flower or fruit wreaths. White Milan is used for a neat hat with rounded crown and softly rippled brim wreathed in natural-looking fruits.

Double Surprise Party is Held

On Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. James Archer, Front Street, were host and hostess for a double surprise party in honor of Mrs. Seymour Bushell and Mr. Yorke Bushell.

Entertainment for the evening was games of euchre followed by dancing.

Prizes were won by, ladies, first, Mrs. J. Archer, second, Mrs. S. Bushell, third, Mrs. P. Hibbard; men, first, Mr. J. Haggerty, second, Mr. W. Bushell and third Mr. Lee Collier.

Lone hand prize went to Mrs. S. Bushell, and the travelling prize was won by Mr. Paul Hibbard.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, with a large birthday cake as the centre of attraction.

Cup and Saucer Shower Given

Mrs. Fraser Paul, 16 Forin street was the hostess for a cup and saucer shower given recently in honor of Miss Keitha Paul when a number of her friends were entertained for an evening of bingo games.

The lovely gifts were presented from the dining table, for which Miss Paul graciously thanked her friends individually and collectively.

Miss Ruby Palbiski, who has recently been transferred from the local branch of Loblaw's Groceteria to the St. Thomas store, was also present and was the recipient of a number of farewell gifts.

The hostess served dainty refreshments.

GREATER PRICE SLASHES

Pottstown, Pa., April 28 —(AP)—Pottstown merchants, who say they are "not convinced that a 10 per cent reduction is enough," today planned a one-day test in which prices will be slashed 20 to 50 per cent.

"We are asking our merchants to make their reductions as large as possible," said the Chamber of Commerce, "to see whether low prices will attract the consumer's dollar."

Should the Wednesday profit-sharing event revive customer buying, a profit-sharing week will follow, the chamber added.

Wesleyan Methodist Church Dedicated to Service of God Before Large Congregation

Many Clergymen Present With Batavia, N.Y., Pastor Delivering Main Address

Baskets of Calla lilies and Spring blossoms, potted plants and ferns added their beauty to the bright newness of cream colored walls in the auditorium of the new Wesleyan Methodist Church on Everett St., which was filled to more than capacity on Sunday afternoon for the Service of Dedication.

On the platform with Rev. J. S. A. Spearman, minister of the congregation, were Rev. F. W. Blanchard of Brockville, president of the Wesleyan conference; Rev. J. A. Bayne of Cornwall; Rev. Mr. Keilty of Winchester; Rev. J. H. Weaver of Newington, Mr. Hughes of Brockville and Mr. Ed. Wilson, (song leader) as well as Rev. John Woodhouse of Batavia, N. Y., the guest preacher of the day, and Mrs. Spearman, Mrs. Sheldon Robinson, of Winchester, and Mrs. E. Wilson.

Clergy Bring Greetings

Local clergymen bringing greetings and good wishes for the success of Christian work in connection with this congregation were Rev. C. V. Freeman of the Missionary Alliance Tabernacle; Rev. E. A. Wicks of Grace Chapel; and Rev. J. G. Nussey of the Standard Church.

With Miss Blanchard as pianist, the service opened with the hymn "Faith of Our Fathers", and an invocation by Rev. J. A. Bayne.

The president of the conference introduced the Ceremony of Dedication by explaining that this church was being opened not to take members away from other congregations, but to co-operate with other church bodies in making Belleville a better place in which to live. He said: "It's wonderful what good may be done if everyone helps a little."

Not Entirely New

The church, which is not entirely new, was brought in sections, on trucks, from Waltham Que., a distance of 150 miles.

Prior to the dedication, Mr. Blanchard on behalf of the congregation spoke briefly in commendation of Rev. and Mrs. Spearman, "who have worked tirelessly and ceaselessly for the successful completion of this project" while two trustees of the church presented to them a comfortable occasional chair, and to this unexpected gesture of fellowship Mr. Spearman feelingly responded.

Speaking for the officials of the church to the conference president Mr. Arnold Rigby said: "On behalf of the trustees of this church and of the congregation here assembled, and for the glory of God, I hereby present to you this building, to be dedicated to the service and the worship of God," to which the president replied by leading in a litany, with the other clergymen and laymen making the responses as follows:—"To God the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and Earth,"

We dedicate this House."

"To God the Son, Prophet, Priest and King, who ever liveth to make intercession for us,"

We dedicate this House."

To God the Holy Ghost, our abiding Comforter and Sanctifier who reveals the things of God to us,"

"We dedicate this House."

"To the ministry of prayer, to the ministry of music, to the teaching of the Scriptures, to the work of evangelism, to the fulfillment of God's commission,"

We dedicate this House, with a prayer that from now on, this may be sacredly kept as a place where men meet God."

Fine Musical Program

The Scripture lesson, Psalm 24, was read by the resident minister and Rev. J. H. Weaver of Newington led in the dedicatory prayer.

During the service the ministry of music was beautifully presented in a duet, "The Glorious Church" by Mrs. S. Robinson and Rev. J. H. Weaver of Newington, and by the Wilson trio, Mr. and Mrs. E. Wilson and "Jimmie" singing "I Am Rich in the Kingdom of God."

Apparently not in need of a formal introduction after the morning service of worship, the talented young preacher from Batavia, N.Y., entranced his audience with the vibrant tones of a fine baritone voice in his rendition of "The Holy City," playing his own accompaniment.

Later, basing his remarks on the words of St. Paul, "I am become all things to all men, that by all means I may save some," Mr. Woodhouse chose as his theme, "The Pioneer Phase of Christian Ministry," saying in part: "Pre-requisites of a Christian are, to lead the way in any development to launch the Gospel, using new ideas to get out of old tracks and ruts."

Requisites Required

"Our talents are of God," continued the speaker. "Either they are direct gifts, or acquired accomplishments. The more you have, the greater your responsibility for their use in benefiting mankind. Christian experience comes to many through a very real fight against the forces of evil. The requisites required are,-

1. A strong body to stand the strain of pioneering.
2. A purpose to fulfil God's will in life.
3. A willingness to serve, with time for study and prayer.
4. A well trained mind; 2nd Timothy, chapter 1, verse 7. "Faith is the Victory."
5. Individualist Ideals; Be original. Columbus, St. Paul, Martin Luther, John Knox, John Wesley, D. L. Moody, each used original methods for expressing his individual ideals.
6. Have a conviction concerning the Kingdom. Be Practical.

To fulfil his agenda of a pioneer, Christians must be surrendered to God; must be called of God; must work for God."

Minister Asks Questions

"The results of pioneer work are aching feet, a tired mind, a weary body and a contrite spirit; but the reward is found in the words of St. Paul, 'I have fought a good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith.'"

In conclusion the speaker asked the thought-provoking questions, —"What have you done with your time? What have you done with your possessions? What is your equipment for service?"

At the morning service Mr. Woodhouse preached on the subject, "Holiness Becometh Thy House, O, Lord"; and in the evening he chose "Heaven Becometh Thy Reward, O, Christian."

Women's Activities

BRIDGE STREET W.A.

The Women's Association of Bridge Street United Church met last Friday with Mrs. Rollins, president, presiding. Mrs. McCabe's and Mrs. Franklin's group were in charge of opening ceremonies. Mrs. Hermon took the devotional period.

A piano duet by Mrs. Houston and Mrs. Franklin was very much enjoyed.

Mrs. Ackerman introduced the guest speaker although well known to so many, Mrs. I. L. Moore, who in her gracious manner told of her trip to and from Australia, which was intensely interesting and humorous travelling by train, boat and plane. A vote of thanks was extended Mrs. Moore by Mrs. Fairman. Refreshments were served by the group in charge.

Mohawk Reserve

Mohawk Reserve — A frequent visitor to relatives on the Reserve, Edward Brant died in St. Catharines, Thursday. He was 28 years of age, and a veteran of World War II. He is survived by his English war bride, Zella, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Brant, St. Catharines, and one brother, Burton, of Niagara Falls, N.Y. He had been a patient in Christie Street Hospital, Toronto. Mr. Brant was a navigator in the R.C.A.F. and made 56 operational flights over Germany, and later worked with radar. Mr. and Mrs. Herman Claus, the deceased's Godparents, attended the funeral in St. Catharines, Saturday.

A baby boy arrived at Belleville General Hospital Thursday morning for Mr. and Mrs. Boyce Cook, Shannonville.

Mrs. Elwood Brant has returned home from Belleville General Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hill and Mrs. Bertha Maracle were weekend guests of Mrs. Herbert Pringle at the Rectory.

Mrs. Arthur Brant was hostess to the Shannonville group of the Homemakers' Clubs Friday afternoon. Mrs. Donald Campbell, Reg. N., was the guest speaker.

An enjoyable social evening was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Hill, Tuesday, sponsored by the Centre Homemakers' Group. Card games were played, Mrs. Hilton Leween winning first prize and Mrs. Leslie Claus, the consolation prize. The gentleman's first prize went to Mr. W. E. Maracle, and the consolation prize to Mr. Jerry Brant. Mr. Thomas Brant won the travelling prize, Mrs. Thomas Hill, the lucky chair prize, and Mr. Kenneth Brant, a delicious cake. The proceeds were $11.38.

An unfortunate accident occurred Saturday night, when a house owned by Mr. Alax. Brant was destroyed by fire. Two hundred baby chicks were destroyed.

Much sympathy is felt for Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Maracle in the death of their three-weeks-old baby daughter.

Yvonne Myrtle Brant, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Brant, died in Belleville General Hospital. Canon Kidd officiated at the funeral on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Maracle and the former's mother, Mrs. Lena Maracle, have returned to their home in Hamilton, Ont.

Messrs. Thomas Maracle, Alex. Maracle, Oshawa; Frank and Earl Maracle, Toronto, and Mr. Andrew Sero, Oshawa, were here for the burial of Mrs. Ace Maracle in Christ Church Cemetery Saturday. The Reverend C. P. Heaven, Rector of Shannonville parish, officiated.

Chief Norway Maracle is building a new cottage on his bay shore property.

Mrs. Herbert Pringle was a luncheon guest of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hill on Sunday.

Mrs. N. Doreen was hostess to the W. A. Wednesday, and Mrs. E. S. Maracle and Mrs. Clifford Maracle to the Guild on Thursday.

Mr. Ace Maracle is leaving in the near future for Oshawa, where he will make his home with his son, Alex.

TWO ELECTROCUTED

Bellfonte, Pa., April 28—(AP)—Two Philadelphia (Negro) men were electrocuted early today for a robbery-slaying in which they made off with only $6.

They had made one last request—for ice cream—and both were supplied with all they wanted to eat.

The men, David Brooks and Albert Wooding, were convicted of first degree murder charges in the fatal shooting of Thomas Burnby, 67, Philadelphia hardware merchant, Dec. 14, 1945.

Stirling

Stirling (Special) — On Tuesday evening the home of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Tucker was the scene of a happy gathering when the members of the family, grandchildren, relatives and some friends gathered in honor of Mrs. Tucker's birthday.

The guest of honor, who was taken completely by surprise, was the recipient of many gifts and flowers.

Games were played and dainty refreshments served.

Mr. and Mrs. Edison Wynne and Delmore, of Campbellford, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Fox.

Mr. Fred Eggleton, Toronto, spent the weekend with his mother.

Rev. W. H. V. Walker attended a special meeting of Kingston Presbyterial in Belleville on Tuesday when the resignation of Rev. J. Murdock of Madoc, was accepted, and Mr. Walker was appointed Moderator.

Mr. and Mrs. John Stiles have returned home from a two weeks' visit with their son Mr. Ward Stiles and Mrs. Stiles at Smiths Falls, Ont.

Mr. Fred Bateman was elected Deputy Grand Master at the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East, held in Brockville, Ont.

A team from St. John's A.Y.P.A. entered the drama contest held in Picton, on Wednesday night. The play entitled "Elmer Cleans Up" included the following cast under the direction of Mr. Fred Houchin, Messrs. Jimmie Wright and Jack Hermiston, Mrs. Verna Woodbeck and Misses Lorene Archdekin and Barbara Prince. They won third prize.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Harold McGee, a son on Thursday, April 17th.

Mission Band

The March meeting of St. Paul's Mission Band was held on Monday afternoon in the Sunday School room with a good attendance. Tommy Wells and Paul Barker are on the program committee for next month. Janet Ayrhart and Judy Broadworth gathered the offering which was dedicated by Ruth Donnan. Mrs. Irish had charge of the study period; the Scripture lessons were read by Catherine Heasman and Marlene Carlisle. Marie Jones offered prayer.

Ruth Donnan, a piano solo, readings were given by Grace Heasman and Paul Marker and Ruth Brady. The books were distributed by Norma Donnan.

Mrs. Earl Bailey attended the Eighth Biennial meeting of the Bay of Quinte Conference branch of the Woman's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada held in Port Hope last week.

BUT, you know, IT IS HAY

WHEN we were a bit younger, "it ain't hay" was a smart way of saying that the money involved was really important.

We'll wager the man who coined the phrase was not a farmer. Because a farmer would see that there is a lot of similarity between the hay in his mow and important money . . . money in the bank.

For the wise farmer stores hay—not just enough for a mild winter, but enough for the longest, most severe one.

And the wise saver provides not only for the expenditures he plans : : : for money to spend wisely on worthwhile things . . . but for the unforeseen emergency—the unexpected opportunity.

During the war years, nearly half a million more Canadians realized that setting aside money in a savings account at the B of M was sound commonsense—like the farmer putting hay in his barn. That makes a million and a half B of M depositors following a policy that is at once in the best interests of the individual depositor and in the best interests of the nation.

For money in the bank doesn't lie idle. It works constantly in two ways. It works for the saver and it works for national prosperity—providing, by loans and investment, the capital that creates employment. It helps to produce goods : : : to produce prosperity.

You learn a sound and understandable bidding system. For what? To know what your hand can produce; how to tell partner; what your partner is saying; what opponents say to each other.

Use it in this pair of partnership hands!

South	North
♠ K 9 5	♠ A
♥ None	♥ Q J 7 5 3
♦ A Q 6 5 3	♦ K 9 7
♣ A 7 5 4 2	♣ K J 10 8

The first two rounds of bids go like this:

South	North
1 D	1 H
2 C	4 C

North has tricks enough for a jump. But he lacks the two sure tricks required for an immediate one-jump. This is why he did not hop until the second round. How many tricks has he shown?

The south opening of one diamond promised five tricks. Such things as quality of tricks is also promised by the opener. But we are now talking only of the tricks a hand expects to take.

The south raise in number over one heart to two clubs promises another trick. It is a trick in addition to the five shown by the opening. Therefore, south says he has six tricks.

A jump promises tricks enough to help make a game. It takes 11 to make a game in clubs. So, the jump assist by north on the second round promised five. This will make 11 with the six in south.

Actually, the north hand can count six tricks. This is one more than his jump has revealed. So far he has not been able to show it.

The south hand can actually count seven tricks. Even with only five shown by north, south can see 12 tricks in their pair. If he can see enough aces and kings, a slam should be their goal.

Such is the precise information partners exchange with each other with a sound system. It is not necessary to be so fussy to play bridge. Only to play the best bridge.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The film story of some of the world's greatest musicians and music, contained in the movie "Carnegie Hall", is one of the best concerts anyone could go to.

Its artists returned to the real Carnegie Hall in New York to make the picture last summer. Among the performers are Jascha Heifetz, Lily Pons, Rise Stevens, Walter Damrosch, Arthur Rubinstein, Jan Peerce, George Piatigorsky, Harry James and Vaughn Monroe.

New Contract

Helen Walker is back on the road to a top-notch screen career again after having being unhappily delayed by the unfortunate accident when her car crashed and one of the soldiers to whom she had given a lift was killed. She was acquitted of manslaughter charges and now Twentieth Century-Fox has given her a new contract and an important part in "Nightmare Alley."

She will play Lilith, the bad girl who ruins Tyrone Power.

"Joe E." Straight

Famous "Mr. Bigmouth," Joe E. Brown, who has been starring in the Chicago company of the stage success "Harvey" about a six-foot, invisible rabbit, will return to the screen to play a straight dramatic role in "The Tender Years."

The part of a protestant minister will be his first straight part in the movies, but before he took to the screen he was a success as a dramatic actor on the stage.

WHAT A HUNTER!

On a wager "Buffalo Bill" Cody once killed 38 buffalo in a day.

Frank H. Brown,

Income Tax Commissioner and Deputy Minister of National Revenue, who is reported to have resigned. Mr. Brown, who succeeded to the Deputy Minister's post when it was vacated by C. Fraser Elliott, was reported to be in poor health.

Sentences Must Start From Time Of Conviction

Toronto, April 28 —(CP)— "Peeping Toms" and others guilty of committing public nuisances and mischief have been free from prosecution recently because magistrates have lacked effective power to deal with such cases, Cecil Snyder, deputy Ontario attorney-general, told a joint conference of more than 100 Ontario magistrates and crown attorneys here Saturday.

The Ontario Court of Appeal raised the question of magistrates administering preventive justice —the act of binding over on bond persons convicted of public nuisance — when it questioned the right of magistrates to deal with such cases, said Mr. Snyder.

Since such offences are not listed under the criminal code offenders have been tried under the old English common law.

The meeting adopted a resolution that statutory amendments be sought to give magistrates the right to administer preventive justice.

W. B. Common of the Ontario Attorney-General's Department said that a forthright declaration of the law on the question of statements taken by police from accused persons is urgently needed. This was a major issue in the Dick torso-murder trials at Hamilton.

The conference traced the history of the law on statements and expressed the view that the most recent interpretation by Canadian courts was a departure from all previous judgments.

Mr. Snyder pointed out also that by a recent court of appeal decision magistrates and judges cannot date back sentences to the time of arrest, but that sentence must begin on the date of conviction.

Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell told the evening banquet that the government is pushing a policy of improving policing in Ontario with stress on meeting the police needs of every section of the province.

Mr. Blackwell was elected honorary president of the magistrates' section with Magistrate C. Gullen of Toronto president, Magistrate D. A. Menzies of London vice-president and Magistrate W. F. Woodliffe of Sudbury secretary.

A. Douglas Bell of Chatham was elected president of the crown attorneys' division with H. F. McCulloch of Hamilton vice-president and C. C. Savage of London secretary.

Miss Ruth Knox, of Belleville, visited Mr. and Mrs. Harper Knox.

Rev. P. C. Christensen was guest preacher at George Street United Church, Peterborough, on Sunday evening, while Rev. Horton of Peterborough had charge of the service here.

Mr. Joe Wasik of Port Hope, spent the weekend with Mrs. Wasik and Sharon.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Heath, Campbellford, were visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Knox on Sunday.

Mrs. Ernest Sarles, Minto, spent a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Jack Watson.

Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Reid celebrated their 58th wedding anniversary quietly at their home on April 22nd.

On Wednesday evening the home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Bateman was filled with friends and neighbors to spend a social evening with them before leaving for their new home in Springbrook. During the evening Mr. Allan McComb acted as chairman. Mrs. Morley Barlow read the address and Mr. Robins presented Mr. and Mrs. Bateman with a trilight floor lamp while Mr. Huff presented Ruth and Donna each with bedroom lamps. They all thanked their friends for the lovely remembrances. A very enjoyable evening was spent in cards and dancing for which music was furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Tanner and Mr. Hagerman of Minto.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Broadworth have moved on the farm vacated by Mr. and Mrs. Bateman.

AT THE McCARTHY — James Lydon, Jane Withers and Charles Quigley, as they appear in a scene from "Affairs of Geraldine," Republic's amusing new comedy, starting Monday at the McCarthy Theatre along with Daphne Du Maurier's "The Years Between," featuring Michael Redgrave and Flora Robson.

ASSUMPTION ONE GAME DOWN IN QUEST FOR TITLE

Vancouver Meralomas Win Third Game on Saturday by 63-52 Score

Vancouver, April 28 (CP) — The purple Raiders of Assumption College have reached the end of the line in their quest for the Canadian senior basketball title. One game down with two to play in their best-of-five series against Vancouver Meralomas, the Raiders need a win tonight to stay in the picture.

First item on their agenda will be a plan to stop large Ole Bakken, 'Loma centre and top scorer in every game so far whose 17 points sparked the coast quintet to a 63-52 victory in the third game Saturday night.

The zone defence that had Vancouver baffled during Assumption's 51-47 win Friday night wasn't clicking Saturday as the coast quintet took a first-quarter lead with Bakken supplying 10 of their 20 points, boosted it at half-time and staved off the visitors' closing burst to finish a comfortable 11 points ahead.

46 Personal Fouls

Forty-six personal fouls were handed out in the rough contest and two members of each club were benched in the hectic last quarter. Final blow to Assumption's hopes was a disqualifying technical foul to Ado Roral, their top scorer, for too strenuously protesting one of referee George Siborne's decisions.

Siborne, whose refereeing brought a number of Windsor complaints during the series, won't be in action in the fourth game, Wink Willo taking over his spot.

Roral and Vancouver guard Ron Weber following Bakken's 17-point total with 14 apiece. Windsor's Freddy Thomas had 11 while teammate Bill Coulthard and Sandy Robertson of 'Lomas, each with 10, were the only others to hit double figures.

Saturday's loss, coupled with a 76-49 defeat in last Wednesday's opener left the Raiders 3-3 underdogs in the series.

Grandma Shows Them All How

Chicago, April 28 — (AP) — Eleanore Ligenza, five, wanted her hair to be its prettiest for sister Pauline's first birthday party, so the mother wrapped it on bobby pins to "set" curls.

As the first guests were arriving Eleanor swallowed one of the pins. Her father, Harry, 28, began applying artificial respiration; some one else summoned the fire department's inhalator squad.

Then grandmother Julia Ligenza, 52, went into action. She simply reached into Eleanor's throat and withdrew the pin.

AT THE BELLE — Dennis Morgan heads a cast of funmakers in Warner's Technicolor musical hit, "The Time, The Place, and The Girl," featuring Jack Carson, Martha Vickers, S. Z. (Cuddles) Sakall, Janet Paige, Carmen Cavallaro and his Orchestra and the Condos Brothers.

John Katan Marks First Visit Here With Main Bout Win Over Earl McCready

Well Known "Mat Villain" Applies Crushing Chin-Lock Hold to Take First and Third Falls; Morgan Defeats Collins and Sharpe-Drummond Draw

The scowling visage of John "The Fingers" Katan, the pride of Palermo, Ontario, that is, turned hopefully in the direction of the noggin of dashing "Whipper" Billy Watson, upon which rests the British Empire Wrestling crown, on Saturday night, while the mat bauble danced farther out of the reach of Earl "Moose McCready after their embroglio in the Memorial Arena.

For "The Fingers," in the main event of a highly entertaining grunt and groan card, effectively squashed the immediate hopes of the Moose to tangle with Watson for another crack at the crown. La Katan, using a terrific chin-lock on the Moosian maxillaries won the first fall after 20 minutes of mat calisthenics, dropped the second heat when the Moose flattened him after eighteen minutes and won the third and deciding fall in eight short minutes with the same punishing jaw-clamping hold.

Both men who spent last year in Australia and New Zealand in barnstorming tours were in the pink of condition. But there were no Alphonse and Gaston gestures after the two squared off for the first fall.

Same Old Katan

The deep-dyed villainous tactics, that are part and parcel of the Katanic style of wrestling, have lost none of their dusky coloring while being displayed to the natives "down under" and Katan proved that he is still one of the topflight wrestlers extant despite the onorthodox methods he uses. He carried the fight to the "Moose" in the first fall and met a willing opponent in the Pride Aurora.

He gouged, poked and attempted to spear the Moosian eyeballs on several occasions, while the large crowd of Saturday night wrestling fans howled and shrieked their disapproval. In turn it roared its acclaim when McCready flared back in rightous anger and heaved several elbow smashes at the Katan jaw.

The two battled for approximately twenty minutes when Katan suddenly clamped a vise-like grip around the Moosian neck. This hold, termed a chin-lock is terrific in its punishment, and no one outside of a giraffe can break it. Katan got the nod for the fall after he held the Moose helpless on the mat. McCready protested to Referee Fox that Katan used a choking hold, but the official waved him away and that was that.

"Moose" Takes Second

McCready, came out for the second fall, fighting mad and weathered a storm of Katanic finger-prods and pokes. He eluded the neck-breaking chin-lock which appeared to be Katan's chief stock-in-trade of the evening and finally nailed the Palermo Panther after eighteen minutes of gruelling milling.

But the third fall of the ninety-minute time-limit bout was of brief duration. It is a long ride to Palermo and the hour was getting late. Katan apparently infuriated and the fact that the Moose had evened matters went after the opposition with his typical bad-man fury.

He was definitely "out" to apply that chin-lock again, and McCready steered off all his efforts to clamp it on his handsome neck for about eight minutes. The end came suddenly. There was a flurry of arms and legs. An audible click and a groan as Katan took advantage of a sudden opening and once more got McCready's head in the proper position, On went the lock and the affair of the evening was over. McCready still complained that the hold was used to choke him, but the official apparently was of a different opinion, and the Katan flipper was raised in token of victory.

Toar Morgan won a popular decision over the highly touted Irish Tom Collins, who calls Buffalo his home. The Irisher, of a decided bad-man type, inflicted some severe punishment on the dashing ex-marine while showing a marked yen to escape that of the Toar.

Morgan finally chased the Irishman into a corner and promptly flattened him with a body spread after eighteen minutes of grilling.

Handsome Ben Sharpe, brother of Mike "The Body" and "Bulldog" Drummond staged a lively preliminary that ended in a draw. Referee Cliff Fox handled all three bouts.

Sports Roundup

By AL COLLETTI
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, April 28 (CP) — Thousands of racing fans from many parts of the United States and Canada will journey to Louisville, Ky., to watch the 73rd annual Kentucky Derby Saturday—an event that several veteran "run for the roses" observers call the country's "biggest sucker trap where the racing public gets an expert cleaning and pressing job." ....Hotel reservations have been closed for months, but scores of owners of private homes offer their residences for rent during derby weekend.

Roman Holiday

In one of the most bitter denunciations of the Derby we have come across since last saying "never again!" A well-known racing scribe who prefers to remain anonymous because he feels he might be barred from the Churchill Downs press section, wrote in a national sports magazine that:

"The Derby is a widely-heralded event, a horse race parlayed into glamor on a mint julep, a blanket of roses and the alcoholic strains of 'My Old Kentucky Home.' Uncontrolled drunkenness is one of its major faults. Another is the attempt to crowd 125,000 people—or more, if possible—into a space capable of holding comfortably only 25,000."

"This year they expect the beautiful-sounding run for the roses to clip the tourist trade for $1,750,000 in a one-day wallet-draining proposition which has no equal in sporting annals.

Big Track Bill

The writer points out that on ordinary days it would cost $3.60 for a reserved seat in the grandstand. He says here's what you lay out for the Friday-Saturday combination: Stadium box—$72.50; grandstand box $106.50; first floor clubhouse box $101.70; second floor clubhouse box $136.50....if these prices are too high you can get a terrace seat for $9.15 or a mezzanine seat at $10.95.

TORONTO LEAFS WIN AND LOSE TO JERSEY GIANTS

Jim Konstanty Hurls First Shutout of the Current Season

(By The Associated Press)

So far, International League batters have been enjoying a number of good days at the plate but the circuit's hurlers are showing signs of rounding into form and base hits shouldn't echo as often as they have in the past from here on in.

Yesterday some fine hurling jobs featured three doubleheaders. Top effort was Erv Palica's two-hit seven-inning 3-1 victory over Newark Bears after the Bears had taken the opener of the twin bill from Montreal Royals, 4-1, behind the four - hit pitching of Dick Ames.

Palica, a 19-year-old righthander, had a no-hitter in his grasp until the last inning when with one out, Bill Drescher singled and Jack Phillips tripled for the only Bear safeties of the game.

At Jersey City, Jim Konstanty twirled the circuit's first shutout by blanking the Giants, 4-0, in the nightcap of a double-header after the Giants had taken the opener from Toronto Maple Leafs, 6-4.

Konstanty limited the Giants to five hits the same number the Leafs collected off three Giant tossers.

Outfielder Bill Barnacle won the opener for the Giants by belting his record homer of the game in the ninth inning with one aboard off relief hurler Dwight Simonds.

The largest crowd of the day, 17,664, saw Baltimore Orioles split a bargain bill with the visiting Rochester Red Wings, the Wings took the lid-lifter, 3-1, as veteran Glenn Gardner limited the Orioles to seven hits and the Orioles copped the afterpiece, 4-3, although held to three safeties by Johnny Mikan and Max Surkont.

Babe Ruth Paid Personal Tribute At Yankee Stadium

Presented With Plaque of Himself Signed by All Club Presidents

By JACK HAND

New York, April 28 — (AP) — Babe Ruth still "owns" the Yankee Stadium.

Jake Ruppert is gone and Ed Barrow has been supplanted in the glistening Larry MacPhail era but the Babe still holds full title in the hearts of the folks who pay the way.

Walking slowly up the steps of the New York Yankee Stadium dugout yesterday afternoon into full view of the 58,339 "Babe Ruth Day" fans, the 52-year-old convalescent Bambino was greeted by a thunderous roar.

Most of the waistline bulge had melted under the strain of 82 days in hospital after his serious neck operation and his heavy voice had faded to a husky half-whisper that tugged at the heart strings.

The greatest home run hitter the game ever produced stood a few feet away from the batters' box from which he used to bombard the bleachers. He was surrounded by such dignitaries as Francis Cardinal Spellman, Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler and president Will Harridge of the American League and Ford Frick of the National League who already had finished their brief talks.

"You know how bad my voice sounds," the Babe started. "Well, it feels just as bad." And he went on from there to tell a year-old Larry Cutler of a brox American Legion team "You've got to start from way down at the bottom ... and if you're successsful and you try hard enough, you're bound to come out on top just like these fellows (pointing to New York Yankees bench)."

Young Cutler, representing the boys with whom Ruth will work under the Ford Company's Legion baseball plan, had hit a popular keynote when he said, "Just to be able to tell Babe Ruth how proud we are to have him back in baseball — back where he belongs and to know that he is going to be with us kids — well, that's the biggest and best thing that could happen."

On the tangible side, the Babe received a plaque from the American League bearing a raised image of himself and the signature of all the club presidents. The National League gave him a leather book containing the signatures of all the players in the circuit dedicated to "Babe Ruth whose batting average through the years is exceeded only by the size of his heart."

BEANS AND GRAIN

The main agricultural products of Madagascar are coffee and rice.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

The boys whose softball abilities are such that they are unable to meet the intermediate loop demands are not letting the figurative grass grow under their feet. Some of the lads with a strong yen for the game, and desirous of giving the boys on the sidelines an opportunity to play the game, got together the other night and out of the conclave, popped a new organization.

• • •

It is known as the Belleville Commercial Softball League and will comprise eight teams. Included are Goodrich Oil; Sheridans Billiards, Elliott's Service Station; Whalen's Dairy, Avon Jewellery, Belleville Bankers, Quinte Dry Beverages and another squad as yet unnamed.

• • •

Heading the new softball set-up is Bill Dennis, Honorary President; Jim Brennan, President, Murray "Mitch" Mitchell, Secretary and Evan "Tip" Tummon, Treasurer.

• • •

And the boys have laid down some hard and fast rules. The league, they point out, is primarily designed to provide an opportunity for the average or older player who likes to play the game and may not get the opportunity to do so because of stiffer competition, and a higher calibre of play. To this end the league has restricted the eligible player list by ruling out any one who plays in any other organized softball for baseball loop in the city this year, or who played in such leagues in 1946. The league has set the opening date as Wednesday, May 21. The schedule will be drawn up later.

• • •

The foundation for a Bay of Quinte District C.O.S.S.A. track and field meet to be held on the Albert College grounds on May 31 was laid at a well-attended meeting of the executive the other day. The meeting was held under the chairmanship of Principal Perkins, Picton Collegiate Institute and representatives Belleville C.I., St. Michael's, Napanee, Picton, Trenton, Tweed, Stirling and Wellington were present.

• • •

Other schools in the district are Madoc, Marmora, Brighton, Colborne, Campbellford and Norwood and it is expected all will send strong representations of student athletes to the meet. Events will be held for junior, intermediate and senior boys and girls. Age limits are junior, under 15 to May 1, 1947; intermediate under 17 to May 1 and senior under 20 to May 1.

• • •

The old gent with the scythe and whiskers has finally caught up with two former Belleville hockey stars in the persons of Doug Runions and Bill Sherry, members of the Hamilton Tigers senior club which bowed to the youthful Montreal Royals in the Allan Cup playdowns the other night.

• • •

Runions, who says he is 37 years of age, and Sherry along with several other members of the "Old Men of the Mountain" have declared their intentions of hanging up the sticks, equipment and skates, in favor of younger and speedier hockey blood. Sherry and Runions, were members of the Belleville junior hockey team many long years ago. There are some [illegible] in the city who are willing to bet that Doug's age was stationary for three or four years.

• • •

The Peterboro Junior Chamber of Commerce is holding forth with a mammoth Jamboree come May 24 and the lads in the Liftlock City have gone all out to provide some outstanding sports and other attractions. There will be jalopy races, a dog show, horse-shoe pitching, and other events. Outstanding feature perhaps is a Monster Softball Tournament which will likely attract the cream of the district's mushball squads.

• • •

The Tournament is an open event with both men's and women's divisions. It costs you twenty bucks to enter a team in the male section but if your squad wins you get a juicy prize of $200. If you place second you collect one hundred simoleons. In the women's division the prize is one hundred smackers and second prize fifty iron men. Entry fee, $10. All entries must be in the hands of W. S. Lloyst, chairman Softball Committee, Junior Chamber of Commerce, Peterboro, no later than May 20.

• • •

Frankie Dyer, Picton's ambitious baseball pitcher, who shaves but once a week, left yesterday for Kingston where he will try out with the Ponies of the Border Baseball League. Dyer, who caused a sensation in baseball circles down that way last year when he spent a brief interlude with Ben Lady's gallants, will be given every opportunity to make good, so reports say.

• • •

Next time you visit the Bowl-O-Drome here take a squint in one of the advertising cubicles and get an eyeful of the handsome Bowl-O-Drome Gold Trophy which will next year be put up for open competition among the kegling clubs of Central Ontario. Tis a thing of regal beauty and they tell us it cost something in the three-figure columns.

• • •

Teams of five players with a team average of not less than 200 will be eligible to compete. So the rules governing the trophy state. By that is meant that every member of the team does not have to have an average of 200. If one member has a 230 figure and another 160 that makes the team as a whole eligible for competition. Invitations to teams outside the city have not been forwarded this year, but any applications will be honored.

• • •

The tournament gets under way during the first part of May and a number of city teams have already entered. Open tournaments for the trophy will be started next year, and it believed the event will finally resolve itself into one of the outstanding bowling events in this part of Ontario.

• • •

And while you're peeking around, you may as well see the two handsome silver trophies on display. One is the Lorne McDougall Insurance Agencies Cup for the Mixed League, while the other is that donated by the Ted Schwab Gift Shoppe for the Ladies League.

• • •

Joe "King Krol" mighty gridiron star of the Toronto Argonauts and who led that team to its second straight Dominion title last year was named the winner of the Lou Marsh Memorial Trophy as Canada's outstanding sports competitor for 1946. Barbara Ann Scott, glamerous world's champion figure skater, won it in 1945.

• • •

The youthful speeding Montreal Royals, stampeded the Calgary Stampeders by a 6-3 score in the first battle in the Allan Cup series on Saturday night.

Montreal, April 28 (CP)— McGill University's football squad, complete with new coach and a yen to get above the dismal showing of the past few years, plans to start early to mold a contender for next fall.

A special football caucus is scheduled for mid-day, with the great Columbia coach, Lou Little, dealing out bits of grid-gold information. Little formerly was boss over Vic Obeck, appointed full-time coach of the Redmen after last season.

McGill graduates and football coaches from other squads here are expected to show up for the sessions, which will be preceded by a special McGill football school earlier in the month.

Hockey Tour

In another phase of the athletics, McGill plans to send a hockey team to England for a series of games next September. If present negotiations are successful the Redmen will meet empire Pool Wembley—a composite of Lions and Monarchs—and Harringay Arena, another composite team, and several other squads.

If McGill makes the trip it will be only second Canadian university-team to play overseas. The old Varsity Grads went over to take the Olympic championship in 1928 after capturing the Allan Cup the year before.

Old Feud

There was plenty of once-great boxing talent in the Forum ring here last week when Jack Dempsey and Jack Sharkey acted as referees for a wrestling merry-go-round. And while here, the two Jacks tangled in a game of gin rummy that promoted almost as much rivalry as their title bout of 1927, according to Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson.

In the last deal there was a miscount, in Dempsey's hand, Fergie reports. Sharkey, not one to take that lying down snarled:

Calgary Stampeders can hardly blame Evangeline Miles of Calgary for their 7-3 defeat by Montreal Royals in the opening game of the Allen Cup playoffs at Maple Leaf Gardens Saturday night. A rabid Stampeder fan, Evangeline, received almost as much attention from the crowd as her favorite team through her excitable efforts to root home a winner! Here she brandishes her tattered program, cheering her team on.

O.R.F.U. to Open 1947 Schedule On Labor Day

(By The Canadian Press)

Sarnia St. Andrew's Bombers by defeating Hamilton Laidlaw Excelsiors in the Sarnia Collegiate gymnasium Saturday with a 42-36 score, became Ontario Intermediate B Church Basketball Champions. Hamilton took a previous game 53-49, but the Bombers won the two-game series 91-89.

Montreal Canadiens won their second victory on Calgary ice Saturday night when they defeated National Hockey League all-stars 8-3. Maurice of Canadiens continued his scoring feud with Max Beneley as they did in the N.H.L. season. Richard, with three goals, took a slight lead over Bentley's two. Both teams left for a return engagement in Edmonton Monday before going to British Columbia to continue their exhibition series.

The Canadian Olympic Association's Executive committee has named two joint chairmen of an Ontario Branch of the Association to collect funds for support of the 1948 Canadian Olympic team. Gerald Wigle of Hamilton will organize a drive in southern and western Ontario and Harold Grang of Toronto, will organize the north and east sections of the province. Objective for Ontario is $30,000, and for the Dominion $90,000.

The Ontario Rugby Football Union, oldest Senior Eastern Canadian Rugby League, will open its 1947 schedule Labor Day, Sept. 1 and end Nov. 1. This is the league's earliest known opening date. Teams represented in the 30-game schedule are: Ottawa Trojans, Toronto Balmy Beach, Toronto Indians, Hamilton Wild Cats, Sarnia Imperials, and Windsor Rockets.

Trials for swimming entries in the Canadian Olympic team will be held in Verdun, Que., on a date to be announced later, the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association decided at a closing session of its annual meeting in Winnipeg Saturday. Only swimmers and divers measuring up to Olympic standards will be chosen for the team.

WEEKEND STARS

(By the Associated Press)

Ted Williams, Red Sox: Singled over second and drew four passes in a row as Boston and Philadelphia played a 6-6 tie.

Hank Greenberg, Pirates: Failed to hit safely in seven official times at bat in doubleheader, but walked and was hit by pitched ball as Pirates dropped two to Reds 6-1 and 2-1.

Stan Musial, Cardinals: Went hitless in four times at bat as St. Louis was blanked by the Cubs 3-0.

Jackie Robinson, Dodgers: Did not connect safely in four official times at bat but walked and scored important run in Brooklyn's 9-8 victory over Giants.

Mickey Vernon, Senators: Failed to get the ball out of the infield in four times at bat but Washington eked out a 1-0 win over New York.

1946 Pace-setters, Cardinals And Red Sox Having Trouble In Current Baseball Races

St. Louis Team Not Hitting and Boston Looks Bad in the Field

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

What has happened to the Cards and Red Sox?

It is still a bit early for too much concern but already calamity howlers are pointing at the lowly position occupied by the defending champions in the current major league pennant races.

Boasting practically the identical high flying aggregation which upset Boston Red Sox in the World Series last October, St. Louis Cardinals were expected to name the flag-clinching date this season.

Instead, the Redbirds, in a complete about face, have dropped seven of their first nine starts against their western rivals to find themselves sharing a cellar berth with New York Giants.

The cold hard facts are simply that the Cardinals, from spark plug Stan Musial down, are not hitting their weight. In addition, the pitchers are not doing the kind of hurling they are capable of.

For instance, in absorbing a 3-0 shutout at the hands of the Cubs in Chicago yesterday, the Redbirds climaxed a nine-game stretch during which they made only 58 hits on 290 times at bat for a meagre .200 batting average. Not a single St. Louis player is hitting .300 or better. Musial, the league's batting king last year, has a ridiculous .147 figure.

Don't Look Good

Although not as disappointing as the Cards, Boston's Red Sox have not looked at all like the club which swept aside all opposition last year. The Sox have won five, lost five and tied one. As they head west for their first extended road trip, they are only 1½ games behind the first-place New York Yankees, but are the same distance away from last place.

The Sox had to come from behind to earn a standoff yesterday as rain halted the first game of a scheduled doubleheader with the Red Sox and A's deadlocked at 6-6. The second game was washed out.

Although they spoiled Babe Ruth Day for 58,339 fans at the Yankee Stadium by losing to Sid Hudson and Washington Senators, 1-0, the Yankees had the satisfaction of taking over first place from Chicago White Sox who dropped both ends of a doubleheader to the Browns at St. Louis.

Muddy Ruel's Browns took two pitching duels from the White Sox 4-2 and 3-2.

Dodgers Down Giants

The Dodgers, who have lost only once in their last 13 meetings with New York Giants at Ebbets Field, climaxed an uphill battle with a run in the ninth to win 9-8.

One of the largest crowds in Crosley Field — 36,961 — saw Cincinnati Reds take two from Pittsburgh 6-1 and 2-1 to virtually tie the Pirates for third place. Bucky Walters, veteran Redleg righthander, who needs only nine more triumphs to notch 200 big league victories, gave up six hits to win the opener.

Two former American League stars, Dutch Leonard and Schoolboy Rowe, pitched Philadelphia Phils to identical 5-4 triumphs over Boston Braves in Shibe Park.

CALGARY BOWS TO ROYALS 7-3 IN FIRST GAME

Montreal Squad Has Too Much Speed for Last Year's Champions

By WILF GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 28 (CP)— It might be a different story in Montreal tomorrow night but the fact that the Calgary Stampeders failed to live up to Manager Dave Duchak's prediction that Montreal Royals wouldn't outskate them stands out today as the big reason why they are down the first game of the Allan Cup final for the Canadian senior hockey championship.

Before more than 11,000 fans at Maple Leaf Gardens here Saturday night the veteran Stampeders couldn't keep up the pace of the young, hustling Royals after the first ten minutes and the Eastern champions registered a 7-3 triumph in the opening game of the best-of-seven series.

For the first ten minutes, and especially after Joe Fisher dashed around the Montreal net to slide the puck by Gerry McNeil at 1:47 and give them a 1-0 lead, the Stampeders looked as if they would be able to hold their own, but they faded badly after that.

The Stampeders whose average age is 27 against 23 for the Royals, came up with some fast hockey at times in the second and third periods, but most of the going they appeared leg weary.

Collapse Sudden

The Stampeders' collapse was sudden, coming just after the midway mark of the first period when Cliff Malone and Doug Harvey who played a stellar game despite an ankle injury, fired goals within 35 seconds to put the Royals out in front 2-1.

They were never behind after that and in the middle frame Floyd Curry scored on a pass from Rip Riopelle to give them a 3-1 lead which took into the third period. In this session they outscored the Stampeders 4-2 with Malone getting a second goal and Jerry Plamondon, Pete Morin and Tod Campeau the others.

The Royals were out in front 5-1 before Red Hunter tipped in a blueline shot from Syd Shoquist for Calgary's second goal at 9:55 of the third period. Their third counter scored by Dunc Grant with less than five minutes left on a passing play with Bob Brownridge and Syd Craddock, was sandwiched in between Campeau's goal and Malone's second marker.

Malone in addition to tallying twice ticked up two assists to lead the Montreal point-getters. Tod Campeau followed him for scoring laurels with a goal and two assists.

MAJOR "A" LOOP NAMES W. FRASER 1947 PRESIDENT

Bowling League Holds High Successful Annual; Prizes, Trophies Presented

Bill Fraser, popular member of the York Trading team of the Major "A" Bowling League of the city, was elected to the presidency of the organization at the annual meeting of the League held in the Bowl-O-Drome over the weekend. The new prexy succeeds past-president Cliff Argue.

Other officers elected are: Vice President, Joe Legault; Secretary, Evan Barlow (re-elected) and Treasurer, Joe Kirkwood (re-elected). Captains of the teams comprising the league will form the executive.

Trophies and prizes were awarded to various winning teams during the business session of the meeting. The Belleville Golf team which defeated the C.N.R. team in the finals, and later defeated the winners of the Commercial and Stewart Warner leagues were adjudged the city champions and were presented with the trophy emblematic of the title by Manager George Barnes of the Bowl-O-Drome.

The personnel of the champion Belleville Golf team which will receive miniatures of the trophy includes Joe Legault, captain; L. Lennox, H. Ridley, J. Kirkwood, Evan Barlow, R. Lennox and E. Patrick.

The York Trading Company team with Bill Fraser captain won the first consolation prize with a mark of 3225 with the Optical squad winning second prize with a mark of 3303.

Veteran Wins

Joe Legault, veteran bowler, said to be one of the best in Eastern Ontario, was absent through illness. He won the prize for the season's high average, a mark of 235. Jim White got the prize for high 3-string with a mark of 939 while Dawson Boyd took the honors in the high single class with a score of 414.

Secretary Evan Barlow, in presenting the prize to Mr. Legault paid a fine tribute to the veteran of the keglers. "Joe is one of the outstanding bowlers in this part of Ontario, a grand guy and a fine fellow. He is one who never criticizes his fellow bowlers nor does he like to hear any one else do it. He is quite ill at present and we all hope he will be back with us soon."

President Cliff Argue, before relinquishing the chair, offered various suggestions and recommendations to the incoming executive. He felt that the handicap system should be abolished, and also recommended that foul line judges be appointed next year in order that the league could be recognized by the Ontario Bowling Association. If this is done, he said, all records and scores could be forwarded to the Ontario Association and the league become eligible for prizes.

He mentioned the fact that over 40 bowlers of the league had average scores of over 200. Last year there were 5 and he felt the increase was due in no small part to the excellence of the alleys.

There was some discussion regarding the question of handicaps. Some came out flatfooted against it while others maintained it should remain in force. Another suggestion was to the effect that if the system be retained, it should not mean a handicap of more than 15 pins per player. Final suggestion was that the new executive discuss the matter and bring in a recommendation to the next open meeting.

Sylvanus Apps Appointed Ont. Athletic Commissioner

Will Continue With Maple Leafs if Medical Condition Warrants

Toronto, April 28. (CP)—Likeable Sylvanus Apps, one of the greatest stars of the National Hockey League with Toronto Maple Leafs, today assumed new part-time duties as Commissioner of Athletics for Ontario, a post in which he has supervision of professional sport such as boxing and wrestling in this province.

In announcing the appointment Sunday Premier George Drew said: "I feel sure it will be generally agreed throughout the province that there is no finer or cleaner sportsman in Ontario than Syl Apps."

The appointment was made under new legislation passed at the last session of the Ontario Legislature, which abolished the former Ontario Athletic Commission that had been dormant for some years.

"In addition to handling the problems arising in connection with professional sports," said Premier Drew, "he will be closely associated with the physical fitness and recreation program which is rapidly spreading throughout the whole province with financial assistance from the Ontario Government.

Will Continue Hockey

The 32-year-old native of Paris, Ont., said he would continue playing professional hockey next season unless a medical examination should indicate the time has come for him to retire. Earlier he had announced that the season just concluded would be his last with the N.H.L., but later he changed his mind.

A star at track and field before he turned professional with Toronto Leafs in 1936, Apps had a brilliant amateur hockey record before becoming one of the steadiest and most productive point-scoring forwards of the National League.

He has frequently been placed on the N.H.L.'s all-star team and in 1941-42 when he paced the Leafs to his first Stanley Cup he won the Lady Byng trophy as the most gentlemanly player.

As an amateur athlete he also won points for Canada in the pole-vault event at the 1936 Olympic games.

Has Three Children

He is married and has three children, two girls and a boy. He holds a Bachelor of Arts degree from McMaster. He was an unsuccessful Progressive Conservative candidate in the Ontario elections of 1945.

Apps joined the Canadian active army as a private in 1944, gaining his commission as a lieutenant in March, 1945. He volunteered for the Pacific theatre of war, and played very little hockey while in the army.

Appointee Gives Statement

Toronto, April 28. (CP)—Syl Apps said today that he had given the matter considerable thought before he was officially offered, and accepted the new post as Ontario Athletic Commissioner announced Sunday by Premier Drew.

The great centre of the Toronto Maple Leafs of the N.H.L. added: "In accepting, I feel that I can do something constructive for sport. In particular I feel that there is much to be done for amateur sport, particularly the younger boys.

"The assurance that I would have the help and advice of trained government experts from the treasury and legal departments made it much easier for me to decide to accept."

A. W. Steele, for many years before his appointment as O.A.C. secretary an official of the Ontario branch of the Amateur Athletic Commission of Canada, will continue as secretary to Apps.

Mysterious Mercedes, Built For Hitlerites To Rule Speedways, Groomed For Classic

By BOB MYERS

Los Angeles, April 28 (AP)—The barred door to an inconspicuous building on Santa Monica boulevard was unbolted and the way was clear to view a so-called automobile named to race in the Indianapolis Speedway classic May 30.

The car, a Mercedes Benz, low slung, rather ugly in its flatness and dull silver finish, was the one Adolf Hitler and his cohorts secretly spent a fortune developing in the late 1930s.

Finished in 1939, this four-wheeled "master race car" must have been a mechanical offshoot of the Hitlerite two-legged "master race" obsession—a roaring, flashing 480-horse power automobile designed to rule the speedways of the world.

Millionaire-sportsman Tommy Lee, son of the late Don Lee, Los Angeles automobile magnate who devoted many years of his life to a hobby building racing cars, bought the Mercedes last year for a reported $30,000.

Lee's chief mechanic, Mal Ord, said the mystery car is "something of a mystery car to us too."

He said he expects it to travel 186 miles an hour, but added: "maybe, it'll only do 40. We've got to see first."

Ord and his assistant, Babe Stump, explained some of its technical details. It uses ethylene glycol instead of water. Special fuel of an alcohol base and a special type of oil must be employed, the cost of which, not counting preliminary tests, will amount to more than $600 for the Indianapolis preliminaries and race.

Ottawa Girl Wins Grand Aggregate in Bowling Tournament

Toronto, April 28 (CP)—Women's titles were decided at the Canadian Bowling Association's 21st annual tournament Saturday night with Miss Ruth Clapp of Ottawa annexing the grand aggregate and Elsie Bailey of Oshawa being crowned singles queen of the five-pin bowlers.

Miss Clapp was a surprise winner of the women's aggregate with a total of 2,214 pins. The Bo Keep trophy in fact was already being presented to Toronto's Miss Tiny Baker, who rolled 2,211, when a recheck showed Miss Clapp was the winner with three points better.

In the women's singles Miss Bailey had strong opposition from Toronto girls. She finished with a total of 830 to take a good lead over Toronto's K. McAllister, who rolled 793. Four other Toronto girls were right behind the first two.

The ladies' doubles title went to Muriel Burns and Dorothy Blackmore of Toronto, with 1,443 points.

Toronto outfits took all honors in the ladies' team event, with Home Furniture leading on a 3,439 total.

In the men's division D. Lisson of Peterborough went into the lead for the singles title with an 889 triple. R. Murie of Kingston was second with 884 and the former leader, Ford Martin of Kingston, went to third place with 851.

The Ottawa doubles team of Desormeaux and Durocher held their lead with 1,572 pins but Reynolds and Abraham of Hamilton moved into second with 1,569.

The men's grand aggregate saw Ford Martin of Peterborough still tops with 2,303 and V. Bernard of Toronto, next with 2,262.

The men's team standing showed Toronto McKenzie's first with 3,675, Oshawa's U.A.W. team No. 2 in second place with 3,473, Bolodrome of Ottawa third with 3,467 and York Bowling of Ottawa fourth with 3,443.

CHAPTER 2

Then April saw Hill. She was so amazed she stopped dead in her tracks. He stood swaying on his feet a few feet away, taking in the scene with puzzled eyes. April said under her breath:

"There's my husband. Wait a second."

Curt De Witt recognized the large blond man as the one time golf champion and one glance told him Kent Hillyer had been drinking heavily.

"Steady," he pressed April's arm fleetingly. "I'll stand by."

April walked over to where Kent stood, with shaking knees.

"Hello, darling!" he greeted her with a great show of hilarity. "I just dropped 'round to see if you didn't want to go out and celebrate. Thanks for the mem'ries and all that stuff. How's about it?"

April's first impulse was to mother him as she always had. To take care of him and see that he got back to his own apartment all right. But cold reasoning and Curt De Witt's presence close by kept her from giving in to her feelings.

"No, Hill," she said not quite steadily. "I have other plans."

"I can see that," Kent glared in the direction of De Witt. It didn't take you long, to find another man, did it?"

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself," April told him quietly.

Hill raised his hat:

"Well, thanks for the mem'ries an' all that stuff. I'll be seein' you in the papers, darling."

April turned and walked away, her heart pounding coldly. When she got into the car, Kent stared after her in hurt disbelief.

Humiliation burned in two pink spots in April's cheeks. Her lovely chin raised a little higher, and she sank into the luxurious upholstery of the De Witt limousine with a defiant toss of her beautiful head. She was almost in a mood to celebrate!

When she arrived home in Douglaston in the wee' sma' hours of the morning, April had learned a great deal more about Curt De Witt. He was a perfect gentleman, she decided. Charming, gallant, a brilliant conversationalist, a divine dancer and apparently had all the money in the world. She was very grateful to him when she held out her hand at the door:

"Thanks terribly," she smiled tiredly. "You've been very kind."

"Put me at the top of your list of escorts," he held her hand tightly, "any time you want to go places. I'd like to help you through these first deep waters, my dear. If I may?"

She nodded, feeling tears in her throat. Gay, standing by the window in the sunrise, was astonished to see the limousine drive up and April get out and walk up to the door with a dark handsome man who stood for several minutes holding her hand. April had orchids on her shoulder.

"Well," she said aloud, "that makes sense. I never would have believed it."

Gay dreaded spoiling April's celebration with the news it would be her unpleasant duty to impart. And she was more than sorry that another burden was to be added to April's slender shoulders.

For in the other twin bed in Gay's room slept April's nineteen year old problem sister Cherry Lind. Cherry had left college, broken her engagement to Pat Hastings, and arrived the afternoon before with the announced intention of living with April and becoming a model.

Cherry always meant trouble.

On second thought, Gay decided not to tell April of Cherry's arrival until she had some rest. She hoped April wouldn't go into her room and see the lovely blonde sleeping there.

When April turned her key in the lock and saw Gay, she was surprised to find her up at the crack of dawn.

"Darling!" she smothered her old friend in a warm embrace. "You shouldn't have stayed awake for me."

"I slept awhile," Gay kissed her pale cheek. 'But I was too excited about your coming home to stay in bed. Who's the man? What is this? Tell me everything! What have you been up to?"

"Wait a minute," April laughed. "Let me catch my breath. How's my baby?"

"Super,' Gay said. "He has missed you terribly, and he was very excited last night when I told him you'd be home when he woke up. But he's in perfect health."

"I suppose if I open his door at this hour, he'll awaken and never go back to sleep. I'd better wait a few minutes," April restrains her desire to see Kenny with difficulty.

"I'll make some coffee," Gay said. "Come out in the kitchen where we can talk. Are you terribly tired?"

"Not very," April followed her. "I should be though. I've been dancing at just about every club in town."

Gay shook her red head:

"I never would have believed it, darling. I still don't get it. But it's the smartest thing you've ever done. I was sure you were the martyr type. Did you meet your fate in Reno?"

"On the plane this afternoon," April confided. "A pick up, you might say. But it all came about in a very charming way, and he's a perfect gentleman. He's Curt De Witt, president of Sherlock Steel."

Gay almost dropped the coffee percolator.

"The man who owns that magnificent colonial house we've admired so much out on Pitman Road?"

"That's right. He's divorced too, and has a daughter Penny, twelve years old, who lives with him."

Gay chortled. "I hope Hill hears that you went out and celebrated your first night home. I guess that would sort of take the wind out of his sails. He's so sure you'll never look at another man."

April lost her assumed air of gayety.

"He does know," she said. "He was at the airport. I've never seen him so overboard. He must have been drinking for days. "Wanted to celebrate our new freedom."

Gay looked surprised. "Tigby? That's something new. At least I'd give Hill credit for having too much intelligence to try to drown his sorrows."

"It isn't like him," April sighed. "I'm so worried. Suppose he goes out and gets himself into some kind of a mess. I'd never forgive myself."

Gay said grimly: "There you go! I hoped after you had the sense to divorce the guy you'd stop mothering him to death. He isn't your worry any more, darling."

"I know," April swallowed the lump in her throat. "But I suppose it's going to take me a long time to feel divorced. I was so terribly married for six years."

They talked for awhile of the trip to Reno, of the things that happened while April was away, and after they'd had their coffee April could restrain herself no longer from going into Kenny's room.

She opened and closed the nursery door softly, but when she knelt beside the bed of her son and kissed his bright little cheek he opened his eyes and cried joyfully:

"Mommy! Did you get home, Mommy?"

April smothered him with kisses and he clung to her so tightly that she could scarcely get her breath.

"I'll crawl in beside you, darling," she laughed shakily, "and we'll have a big love. Wait till Mommy slips out of her dress. You must tell me everything that happened. Did you miss me?"

Kenny's large blue eyes filled with tears. His small chin trembled.

"I cried lots for you Mommy. When Aunt Gay didn't see me. She was very good to me, but I don't want you to go 'way again, not ever.".

April climbed into his bed and took him in her arms. She cradled his blonde head to her breast and said through her tears:

"I won't darling. Not ever again. Mother had to go away this time. But I'll stay home after this. I promise."

It seemed to April that in the seven weeks since she had been in Reno, Kenny looked even more like his father than he had before. The same blonde curly hair and deep blue eyes, and he was strong and sturdy like Hill. There was none of her dark slender beauty about the boy. He was all Hillyer.

How can I bear it? She asked herself, holding her son close, and for a moment she was overwhelmed with the tragedy that had befallen her home. As if reading her thoughts the child asked suddenly:

"Mommy, what is a deevorce?"

Stunned, April held him a little closer, parrying for time. She was unprepared to answer. It had never occurred to her he was old enough to ask questions. Kenny went on urgently:

"Marfy that girl next door said you went to Reno to get a deevorce. Did you bring it back with you, Mommy? Could I see it?"

"I—it's nothing to see, darling," April smoothed his curls with her trembling hand. "I—it's just a piece of paper. You—couldn't read it, sweet."

Kenny persisted: "But what is it, Mommy?"

Fumblingly, April tried to explain to her five year old son that his mother and father were no longer married. That is what it meant. When two people could no longer live together happily they got a divorce.

When she had finished Kenny sat up in bed, looking down at her with large, puzzled eyes. His bewildered look cut through her heart like a knife.

Answer to Saturday's Puzzle

New Command For Guerrillas

Athens, April 26 (AP)—Two Athens newspapers published reporters today saying that Nicholas Zachariades, secretary-general of the Greek Communist Party, had assumed comand of a large guerilla band in the Grevena area, replacing "General Markos."

The Ministry of Public Order which said it had been seeking Zachariades for several weeks in connection with a libel charge, commented that it had heard the same report, but had not been able to confirm it.

Brig. Stylianos Mandikis, spokesman for the general staff told a press conference last night that government forces had destroyed about 10 per cent of the estimated 10,000 to 12,000 guerillas in the country since April 1 and added that evidences of dissension and deterioration morale in guerilla ranks were coming to light.

HAIPHONG DEVELOPMENT

GRIM PICTURE GIVEN

London, April 28 (Reuters)—A "grim picture" of India in the 10 years following the country's independence from Britain was given by J. Singh, president of the India League of America. Addressing London headquarters of the India League, Singh said that "never have I found so deep a feeling of bitterness and distrust between Hindus and Moslems and such a complete lack of faith in each other."

20,000 Young Pines Planted At Bird's Creek

A total of 50,000 young pines will have been added to Hastings county forest projects this spring when the balance of 20,000 trees are planted at Bird's Creek, five miles north of Bancroft.

On Saturday junior farmers of the North Hastings district, together with neighboring farmers and county officials planted a large percentage of the 20,000 trees and the balance will be planted later by high school boys from the Bancroft district.

Attending the planting from the south part of the county were Elmer Sandercock, Erle Denyes, Ross Bailey and Reeve Harry Harrison of Thurlow township. Warden Archie Harvie and a number of northern reeves were also present.

Finish of the planting at Bird's Creekk will complete the county tree planting program for this year. Last week some 30,000 trees were planted at the county forest project at Actinolite, 39 miles north of Belleville.

Oil Executive Victor in Grim Struggle With Sea

Beaufort, S. C., April 28—(AP)—Victor in his grim struggle with the sea during which he would promise himself only to live "10 minutes longer." Clayton Boardman, wealthy oil company executive, rested today from the ordeal of nine hours in the water.

Boardman, 56, of Augusta, Ga., one of four men swept seaward by an ebb tide Saturday when their 16-foot fishing boat swamped, clung to a small cushion until the sea washed him ashore early Sunday. The body of one of his companions has been recovered. The other two men still are missing.

"I promised myself I would try to stay up just 10 minutes longer," he said. "When that 10 minutes was up I'd say to myself, 'You've gone this far — try another 10 minutes.'

"A shrimp boat came within 125 feet of me and then went away. I felt my last chance had gone and I was lost for good, but somehow I kept hanging on."

Boardman was able to give only a brief account of his hours in the water. He had removed his outer clothes while afloat and, at the end of the ordeal when he felt the beach beneath his feet, he burrowed into the said to keep warm.

Henry Wallace Criticized by British Paper

London, April 28. (AP)—The Independent Manchester Guardian criticized Henry A. Wallace today because, it said, he permitted his New York magazine to publish advertisements appealing for funds to help Jewish extremists in Palestine.

"One of the parodxes of Mr. Henry Wallace's character," the Guardian said, "is that while he gushes (in England) about the British he permits the paper of which he is editor to publish (in America) appeals for funds to support an armed revolt against British authority."

"What has been the contribution of Mr. Wallace to the solution of the Palestine problem?" the Guardian asked. "Does he want a United Nations solution, or does he accept the argument of the Terrorists that the bomb and the murderer must prevail?"

Wallace told a press conference in Paris last Friday that he wanted Britain to implement the original Balfour doctrine in Palestine and that he wanted the United Nations to carry out a huge spending program there.

Regarding Jewish extremists, Wallace deplored their violence but described them as a "resistance movement" whose actions had "been necessary to arouse the conscience of the world."

Murderer Attends Beatification Of His Victim

Vatican City, April 28—(AP)—A convicted murdered, repentant and his prison sentence ended, attended the beatification yesterday of his victim, 11-year-old Maria Goretti.

Semi-official Vatican sources, in reporting this, said Alexandro Serenelli, now 63, apparently was not recognized by anyone in the crowd of 25,000 who attended the ceremony at St. Peter's Basilica.

Maria Goretti was stabbed by Serenelli in 1902 after she had successfully resisted his attempts to attack her. He served 27 years. While in prison he expressed repentance and said the little girl he had killed had appeared to him several times in his dreams.

At the investigation for Maria's beatification, Serenelli was the principal witness in her behalf. After his release Serenelli entered a monastery, where he is known as Father Stephano and performs mainly menial tasks for the other monks.

NOT A CANDIDATE

Sarnia, Ont., April 28 (CP)—J. J. Robinette, Toronto lawyer mentioned recently as a possible candidate for the leadership of the Liberal Party in Ontario, said today he would not accept the leadership—"even if I were drafted."

Mr. Robinette said he would be a delegate to the Ontario provincial convention in Toronto next month but added:

"You can't practice law and still be actively concerned in politics. At the moment my concern is the practice of law."

GEN. MANTAKAS ARRESTED, REPORT

Athens, April 28 — (Reuters) — Maj.-Gen. Emmanouil Mantakas, a former commander in E. L. A. S. Greek left-wing military organization during the war, has been arrested in Athens, it was reported today.

His arrest is believed to be related to the start of guerrilla activities in Crete, where Mantakas led a small E.L.A.S. force during the German occupation.

COLLEGIATE NEWS

ASSEMBLY
By ROGER WHITE

A mock wedding entitled "Here Comes the Bride... Let's Run!" or "They all Kissed the Bride but the Groom" was dramatized by 11A much to our delight. The bride wore something old (a gown her grandmother must have worn ..to bed); somthing new (a fresh bunch of carrots for a bouquet); somethin borrowed (whatever it was, it didn't show) and the groom looked blue enough to satisfy us. The ceremony was completed when the eager groom was chained down and a genuine sugar-plated doughnut slipped over the dainty wrist of the blushing bride.

Earlier in the program, Mary Bongard recited "Uncle Podger Hangs a Picture." This is the first feature of its type to be presented in assembly and everyone enjoyed it. If anyone feels he can equal Mary in a reading of this nature, by all means let us have more!

Meribeth Holgate played "The Minute Waltz" by Chopin and responding to the loud applause encored with "A Spanish Dance."

The entire program was fast moving, cleverly written and most expertly handled.

GIRLS' SPORTS
By RUTH MEADES

Not much has been stirring in the way of sports for the girls last week due to, perhaps, the "doings" in the gym. The crew gathered together to fix our gyms have been very mysterious as to what was going on, but things are beginning to take shape now and we want to thank these boys and girls for showing their whole-hearted interest and great ability in dressing up the gym for the formal.

The only game held was on April 22 between XC and XE with a score of 4-2 for XC. The referee was M. Hamilton. On Wednesday the 23rd of April the Badmington Club held their usual meeting.

On Tuesday, the 22nd of April, our girls gathered together in lines of 3 on the Campus for the first meeting of the Girl Cadets. We want to thank you, girls, for the splendid turn out and are sure, with such a lovely battalion we will have a great time drilling and parading. Those were unable to attend the first gathering come along to the next one and find out just how much fun it is.

BOYS' SPORTS
By "MERT" MASSEY

"Boys' Night" is creeping up swiftly. Just to give you an idea of what to expect there will be tumbling, high-bar work, statuary work, pyramids, parallel-bar work, horse-work, and new addition to the school, the trampolene. Besides all this fine display there will be quartets individual solo efforts, skits and many other fine entertainments.

The boys have been working faithfully and strenuously under the fine directing of "Red" Townsend to give you a show which you won't easily forget. Such well-known figures as George Garrow, Grant Locke, George Locke, Jim McKay, Jack Campbell, and a swell cast of many others are combining their efforts to bring to you something I'm sure you'll always remember Besides this fine display a dance will be held Friday night May 9th. The proceeds of this display will go to the "Students' Council." Let us not forget the fine work of fellows such as Dick Stackhouse, (advertising) "Sheriff" O'Flynn (dance convener) or Jim Airth (business manager) who are really doing a swell job to help round out the evening of entertainment, and to bring it to a smashing success.

CUFF NOTES

Despite the weather, spring is really here — the hockey series, professional at least, are over and the baseball writers have quit discussing Leo's suspension. However, this might mean that spring has given way to summer, judging by the extended schedules. A proof that spring has come is that skipping ropes, roller skates, bicycles, and balls are out again after an enforced absence. Just notice the noon-hour activity on the campus, and the post class excitement on the neighborhood lots.

For proof positive, though, we must turn to junior. Out of winter clothing and into short pants he has already accumulated an impressive array of red jagged scars about the knees. These scars are as sure a sign of spring as green leaves. In addition to that one particular group has been immunized against something or other and are sporting scars on their arms that look as if the doctors used a hammer and chisel in place of a hypo.

Like the birds and Capistrano the boys from university have come home to roost. Some returned rather the worse for wear, looking as though they made the last ten miles walking on their thumbs. I have been assured that it is a disease common among their clan and is known as "pen fatigue." Nevertheless we welcome them back with open beds and hope that they all scored 95 in every exam. Welcome home men.

THRILLED FRIENDS I HAVE KNOWN
By HERBERT

Henry Wadsworth Thaddeus Mc Shill,
Hoped to enjoy every fleeting thrill,
So, putting emotion ahead of his will,
Lit a cigar with a ten dollar bill.

While a cousin called Titus Henry McTite,
Loved the thrill of a rousing fight,
To satisfy fancy with rugged delight,
McTite was accustomed to stay out at night.

A gentleman friend by the name of Dale
Was quick of wit, but rather frail;
He attended bull fights, hearty and hale,
But excitement killed him at a nylon sale.

Reunion — For the first time since he was four years old, Edgar Treadway, 38, of Leaside, met his mother in Los Angeles, Calif., as a result of being chosen by fellow employees of the Leaside plant of Corning Glass Works of Canada, Ltd., to represent them on a company-sponsored coast to coast tour. Separated 34 years ago when his parents became estranged in Canada, Treadway was taken by his father and reared in the belief his mother was dead. It wasn't until more than a decade later, after the death of his father, that he learned that his mother, Mrs. Eugenia Loverock, was alive and living in Los Angeles, having subsequently remarried.

FLYING MISSILES HIT WINNIPEG

Minor Planet Struck Earth In E. Siberia

Moscow, April 29 (AP)—V. G. Fesenkov, Chairman of the Meteorite Committee of the U.S.S.R. Academy of Science, said today it was possible that a minor planet collided with the earth Feb. 12, 1947, when a missile, described as a meteorite, fell in eastern Siberia.

"It is now becoming increasingly clear," Fesenkov stated, "that it was an exceptional phenomenon in many respects. For one thing some of the fragments smashed through the surface strata of soil and penetrated into bedrock, leaving several dozen craters, the biggest of them about 75 feet in diameter.

"The combination of circumstances required for a heavenly body to strike our plant with sufficient force to create craters is exceedingly rare."

Donald MacLean Given Five Years On Theft Count

Hamilton, April 29. (CP)—Donald MacLean, 69, under sentence of five years in penitentiary as an accessory after the fact in the torso slaying more than a year ago of his son-in-law John Dick, today pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing cash and street car tickets from the Hamilton St. Railway Company for which both he and Dick worked.

Judge William F. Schwnger sentenced MacLean, who said he stole the money and tickets over a 15-year period, to five years in penitentiary. He will serve the sentence concurrently with his other penitentiary term.

When the charge was read to him, MacLean said:

"I'll take the rap. I'll plead guilty."

Police said that in MacLean's home they found 26,200 streetcar tickets — "every pocket in every suit was filled with them."

Dr. R. T. Finlayson of Hamilton, called as a defence witness, said it was "doubtful" MacLean would live out the five years.

MacLean was said to have admitted stealing money and tickets over a period of 15 years while he worked as a janitor for the street railway company. The thefts came to light when police hunted clues to the torso slaying.

Bodies of Trapped Miners May Not Be Freed for Days

By P. C. Dubois
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Malartic, Que., April 29 (CP)—While a diamond drill bit into the earth boring a hole from which it was hoped to glean information about the fire which took the lives of 12 miners, officials of East Malartic Gold Mines said today it might be several days before the bodies of the 11 men entombed in the mine were recovered.

The drill was used to probe the inner workings of the mine in the vicinity of the spot where the 11 men had been trapped when fire broke out last Thursday morning in the East Malartic No. 4 shaft. When the drill hole is completed, instruments which will register the heat of the fire and extent of the fumes will be lowered into the pit.

No Estimate Made

Mine officials said no estimate could be made of when the bodies might be recovered until such tests were undertaken. One source said it might be several days before the 10th level near where the bodies are expected to be found—will be reached.

The body of the 12th miner victim of the deadly fumes, Traian Lucaci, was released from the morgue yesterday and is to be taken to Montreal for burial.

While the diamond drill crews were at work, flooding of the No. 4 shaft continued. Regular work at the mine has been suspended as a precautionary measure during the flooding operations.

Ironically, it was disclosed by 28-year-old Germain Gatien, a miner who escaped from the death trap, that the 11 men who were doomed to die in the lower reaches of the mine were not at all perturbed when the fire broke out.

"They shouted, 'get the fire-fighters—we'll be all right as long as we get air'" said Gatien.

HOUSE PASSES MORE CLAUSES OF CONTROL BILL

Member Contends There Were Black Markets In British Columbia Nails And Maritime Lumber

By DOUGLAS HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 29. (CP)—Another demonstration of parliamentary cohesion among British Columbia members fell upon the Commons last night and prompted a Maritimer to recommend the sincerest form of flattery—namely imitation.

After listening to the far western representatives of three parties attack housing and nail shortages as a single unit, A. J. Brooks (PC-Royal) called upon his fellow Maritimers for emulation and offered an example by joining R. J. Winters (L—Queens-Lunenburg) in urging government action to help the lumbering industry in the three down east provinces.

The night's debate, with George McIlraith, parliamentary assistant to Reconstruction Minister Howe, bearing the full brunt of the attack, carried the House through three more clauses of the Omnibus Control Bill and left it arguing about No. 51 out of 57.

Veterans Minister Mackenzie, the House Leader, said the leaders of the various parties had agreed to make every effort to complete study of the Control Bill before Finance Minister Abbott delivers his first budget at 8 p.m., E.D.T., tonight.

The House gave its approval to Omnibus Bill clauses extending emergency orders-in-council on emergency shelter, industries control and steel control after hearing contentions that there were black markets both in British Columbia nails and Maritime lumber.

Col. Brooks' call for Maritime unity came when he supported Col. Winters in his request that one of three things be done to ease the situation for Maritime lumbermen who felt they were being "squeezed from all sides".

The points:

1. If there is an overall shortage of lumber in Canada, then Maritime Lumber should be funnelled into upper Canadian markets.
2. The domestic price ceiling should be raised.
3. Full consideration should be given to increasing the export quotas.

Col. Brooks said "we could take a lesson from British Columbia. . . I sometimes think we play too much politics down east. If we united more, we wouldn't be where we are."

He charged "rank discrimination" by the government in raising western lumber prices without touching those of the Maritimes.

Refusal to relax export quotas was wasting a billion feet of birch lumber which was diseased and dying and couldn't be marketed. Millions of dollars was being lost, he argued.

Maintains Silence

At the afternoon session, the government maintained its silence on immigration changes in the face of attempts by some opposition members to obtain a statement on displaced persons and refugees in Europe. These members held that this question was distinct from long-term immigration policy and some of them backed up their requests with protests against plans to bring another 1,100 Polish veterans to Canada for farm work.

Cannot Expect U.K. to Expend Blood, Treasure Singlehanded On UN Palestine Decisions

—CADOGAN

By MAX HARRELSON

New York, April 29 — (AP) — Britain declared today that she could not be expected to "expend blood and treasure single-handed" to carry out recommendations of the United Nations on the future of Palestine.

This was the reply Sir Alexander Cadogan gave when India challenged him to give assurances that Britain would abide by recommendations of the Palestine session of the United Nations Assembly.

The exchange took place shortly after the Assembly's steering committee met to decide whether the extraordinary session should be broadened to include consideration of Arab demands for immediate Palestine independence.

Egypt then plunged into the controversy and demanded that the committee act on the Arab demands either before or along with Britain's proposal for creation of a fact-finding committee to report back on the Palestine question at the September meeting of the Assembly.

Assembly president Oswaldo Aranha of Brazil ruled, however, that the British proposal should be taken up first.

The Indian demand was backed by Andrei A. Gromyko of Russia and Mahmound Hassan Pasha of Egypt.

Sir Alexander read a statement by Lord Hall in the House of Lords last week which said:—"I shouldn't imagine Britain carrying out a policy which they thought wrong."

Sir Alexander said he would amplify the position of Britain in a day or two in the Assembly.

HILL TRIBESMEN ASK FUTURE BE IN THEIR HANDS

Little Cohesion Possessed by 2,500,000 Pathans Except Love for Islam and Liberty

By NOEL BUCKLEY

Peshawar, India, April 29 — (Reuters)—Jealous of the freedom they have enjoyed for centuries, the tribal Pathans of India's northwest frontier have demanded that when "British authorities leave India next year their future shall remain in their own hands.

At their annual jirga (gathering) held recently at the mouth of the Khyber Pass—their tribal territory—the spokesman of the Afridis told Sir Olaf Caroe, governor of the northwest frontier province, that the British government with whom they have agreements, "should not marry us in Delhi without our consent."

With little cohesion except their intense devotion to Islam and personal liberty together with their common language, Pushtu, some of the tribes are anxious that whatever future agreements are made should be made by representatives of the entire tribal belt, extending from Baluchistan to Kashmir, about 25,000 square miles of nearly-barren hills with an estimated population of 2,500,000.

The care with which Great Britain has guarded the northwest frontier since it came under her control in 1849 might appear disproportionate to the menace of the tribesmen, however warlike. But behind the hillmen the British have seen a possible threat from Central Asia, from where so many invaders of India came through the passes the hillmen guard.

As peace and good order was established in the Punjab and on both banks of the Indus the necessity of preserving the settled communities from tribal raids became in itself an important responsibility.

Though their numbers appear insignificant in relation to India's 400,000,000, the tribesmen are not a small danger and they are held at peace in their arid hills by a strong permanent garrison in the frontier forts and by the payment of large sums of money annually.

RUSSIA BLAMED FOR FAILURE TO AGREE ON TREATIES

Marshall Serves Notice U. S. Will Press for European Recovery

By EDWARD E. BOMAR

Washington, April 29 (AP) — The United States served notice on Russia today that she will drive ahead with steps to help speed Europe's recovery without awaiting the big-power "compromise of exhaustion" foreseen by Premier Stalin.

State Secretary Marshall disclosed the Soviet leader's suggestion and the American reply in a plain-spoken report to the people last night on the dissension-torn Moscow Foreign Ministers Conference.

Stalin told him at their meeting two weeks ago, Marshall said, that the Big Four powers might be able to compromise all their major differences "after they had exhausted themselves in dispute."

Marshall put the blame squarely on Russia for the failure of the foreign ministers to agree on a peace treaty for Austria and the rough outlines of one for Germany, and declared:

Patient Sinking

"The patient is sinking while the doctors deliberate."

"I believe that action cannot await compromise through exhaustion," Marshall went on. "Whatever action is possible to meet these pressing problems must be taken without delay."

The secretary did not elaborate on the point.

However, one major action which already is being taken is the economic unification of the British and American occupation zones of Germany designed to make them self-supporting. Marshall said the invitation for Russia and France to join in the arrangement continues in force.

Marshall said guardedly that at Moscow "possibly greater progress toward final settlement was made than is realized."

Must Not Compromise

"Critical differences were for the first time brought into the light and now stand clearly defined so that future negotiations can start with a knowledge of exactly what the issues are and must be settled."

But he cautioned that the differences between Russia and the Western Powers are "matters of vast importance to the lives of the people of Europe and to the future course of world history," and added:

"We must not compromise on great principles in order to achieve agreement for agreement's sake."

One Man Killed, 2 Seriously Hurt As Car is Ditched

Dummondville, Que., April 29 (CP)—One man was killed and two others suffered serious injuries today when the car in which they were riding ran into a ditch, travelled along it for more than 200 feet, struck an electric light pole then turned over several times.

Dead was Jean Baptiste Bergeron of St. Simon de Drummondville, while injured were Eddy Bergeron, also of St. Simon who suffered a probable skull fracture in addition to other injuries, and Rodger Boisjoly of St. Simon, owner of the automobile, who received general bruises and shock.

First Flying Course for Navy Officers Opens at R.C.A.F. Station, Trenton

Trenton, Ont., April 29 (CP)—Five flying list officers of the Royal Canadian Navy climbed into Harvard planes at this R.C.A.F. station today, signalling the start of the first flying course of its kind for navy personnel.

The naval trainees, who already have completed three weeks ground school in which they gained basic knowledge of such things as air navigation, meteorology, engines, radio and air traffic rules, will have rolled up approximately 200 hours in the air by the time they graduate.

They will be taught by staff instructors of the R.C.A.F. Central Flying School here who themselves recently completed an eight-week flying instructors' refresher course. In addition to instructing the naval officers, they will give instructors' refresher courses to 24 former R.C.A.F. instructors.

The navy men, most of whom already have sea-going experience, will be with Canada's air craft carriers on completion of their training.

REDUCE PRICES, INCREASE OUTPUT, TRUMAN ADVISES

Businessmen Are Urged To Avoid Wasteful Methods and Dispel Inflationary Cloud

Washington, April 29 (AP)—President Truman told the United States Chamber of Commerce today "a pressing task of all businessmen is to reduce wherever possible at all levels while steadily increasing production."

This reiteration of Truman's repeated assertion that prices must go down if the United States is to avoid serious inflation and depression came before 2,000 delegates to the Chamber's 35th annual convention.

In a message prepared for delivery by presidential aid John R. Steelman, Truman said:

"No community leaders have a greater responsibility at this moment, or a greater opportunity for service to their country, than our businessmen....

"By careful planning, by elimination of wasteful methods and practices, by expanding facilities where needed, and by increasing productivity, businessmen can greatly help in dispelling the inflationary cloud now hanging over us."

One of Truman's cabinet officers, Navy Secretary Forrestal, told the delegates earlier the best present contribution the United States can make to world peace is "the maintenance of substantial military power."

Until the United Nations has a chance to reach "maturity," Forrestal said, American armed force is the main hope for the world stability necessary to international commerce, "The greatest and most practical agent of civilization."

Civilian Aircraft Crashes Since '41

Toronto, April 29 —(CP)— Report today of a missing aircraft with 12 passengers aboard, between Lethbridge and Vancouver, marked the second incident in Trans-Canada Air Lines history, involving passengers. Nine passengers and three crew members were killed in the crash of a T.C.A. plane near Armstrong, Ont, Feb. 6, 1941.

Other major civilian aircraft crashes in Canada and Newfoundland include:

Oct. 30, 1941 — Twenty killed in crash of American Airlines plane near St. Thomas, Ont.

Dec. 20, 1942 — C.P.R. airliner disappeared shortly before it was to have landed in Vancouver; wreckage found Aug. 9, 1943. 13 persons killed.

Aug. 31, 1946 — Seven persons reported missing aboard Queen Charlotte Airlines Stranraer flying boat on mercy flight to Prince Rupert, B.C.

Sept. 18, 1946 — Twenty-six killed in crash of Belgian airliner en route from Belgium to New York, near Gander Lake, Nfld. Twenty seventh victim died later.

Oct. 3, 1946 — Thirty nine killed in crash of American Overseas Airlines plane, Hare Hill, Nfld., 15 miles northeast of Stephenville.

Reported on Range Three Minutes Before Landing

U.S. Coast Guard Says Fire Seen on Vancouver Island

By GEORGE [illegible]
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Vancouver, April 29—(CP)—A large oil-slick, a quarter of a mile southwest of Steveston, B. C., at the mouth of the Fraser River in the Straits of Georgia, has been spotted by searchers for the missing Trans-Canada Air Dines plane which vanished last night with 15 persons aboard.

Vancouver, April 29 — (CP)—Planes from airports in Southern British Columbia roared into the sky at daybreak today in hopes of finding some trace of a twin-engined Trans Canada Airlines Lodestar that vanished early today with 15 persons aboard after reporting its position over Vancouver airport.

The aircraft, on flight No. 3 from Toronto, has not been heard of since reporting on range to the control tower here at 11:27 PDT last night (2:27 a. m. EDT today), just three minutes before it was scheduled to land on a westbound flight from Lethbridge in Alta. It carried 12 passengers and a crew of three.

It was feared it may have plunged into the Straits of Georgia as it sought safety at the Patricia Bay airport, 16 miles from Victoria, after failing to make a landing here.

Reports from Nanaimo told of a "clap like thunder" early today after a plane had been heard, its engines spluttering, off the coast.

"I heard a sound like thunder," said Mrs. A. Newberry, a Nanaimo resident. "Then there was silence."

Other residents reported hearing the plane, just off the coast.

Bob Stewart, president of the Nanaimo Free Press, heard it at 12:15 a.m.

"It was flying low, and its engines were making a peculiar noise. They were loud, and then they faded."

Three passengers were Airlines employees, including Mr. C. Nugent of Winnipeg, who was accompanied by his wife.

Eleven planes from Vancouver and Nanaimo, B.C., are scouring the Georgia Straits and Southern Vancouver Island where the aircraft, now more than three hours past its fuel endurance, is believed to have come down.

First Since 1941

The accident is the first serious one involving a TCA plane since Feb. 6, 1941, when nine passengers and three crew members were killed in a crash at Armstrong in Northwestern Ontario.

Officials at Northwest Air Command, Vancouver, said four R. C. A. F. planes were taking part in the search and that a fifth was standing by in Victoria. Trans-Canada Air Lines threw four aircraft into the air at dawn and officials said a fifth would be dispatched shortly.

The Nanaimo Flying Club contributed an additional three planes to the large searching force.

Issued an Appeal

Meanwhile R.C.A.F. officials issued an appeal to any Gulf islands or Southern Vancouver Island residents hearing a plane between midnight and one a.m. (PDT), to phone the aircraft distress section here.

They said the search had been narrowed generally to an area of about 30 miles between Duncan, Chemaimus and Nanaimo, B. C., on the east coast of Vancouver Island and approximately due west of Vancouver.

T. C. A. officials said a fire, spotted earlier by the R.C.A.F. on the island, had proved to be a small bush fire. It was at first feared that the fire might prove to be the missing aircraft.

List of Passengers:

The following were aboard the plane:

Passengers:

C. P. Reaper, 531 Grosvenor Ave., Westmount, Que.
H. Wolfe, London, Eng.
V. Armond, 23, Lee Court, Donald St., Winnipeg.
D. Vance, 76 Guay Ave., St. Vital, Man.
W. Robson, 206 Kensington St., Winnipeg.
Miss Jane V. Warren, Vancouver.
Miss Margaret R. Hamblin, Vancouver.
L. Millar, Vancouver.

Non-revenue Passengers:

Mr. and Mrs. C. Nugent, Winnipeg.
Miss N. Lesiuke, Trail, B.C.
Miss Margaret Trerise, Vancouver.

Crew members:

Captain W. G. Pike, Vancouver and Toronto.
First Officer A. A. Stewart, Vancouver.
Stewardess: Miss H. M. Salisbury, New Westminster, B.C.

Sister of Trenton Woman Aboard Missing Plane

Dan Cupid rode as a non-revenue passenger on the Trans-Canada Airlines plane, reported missing between Lethbridge and Vancouver after reporting to ground control stations three minutes before its scheduled landing time.

Aboard the airliner was a honeymoon couple on the first jaunt of a cross-continent wedding trip, that was to end in a return journey to Toronto.

They are Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Nugent of Winnipeg, who were married in the western city on Saturday night. Mr. Nugent is a T.C.A. official while Mrs. Nugent his bride, is the former Marjorie Brown, of Winnipeg, and a sister of Mrs. P. L. Smith of Trenton.

Mrs. Smith heard the first reports of the missing plane over the air. The radio flash did not give any names and she immediately contacted the news room of the Ontario Intelligencer and learned that the missing plane was that which carried her sister and her bridegroom.

"Marjorie was married in Winnipeg on Saturday night," Mrs. Smith related in a worried voice over the telephone. "They intended to go to Vancouver and return to Toronto on their honeymoon. We were supposed to have met them in Toronto on their return."

"I do hope they are safe," she said.

U.K.'s Winter Loss 4,000,000 Sheep; 'Never Has Nature Dealt Such Blows'

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 29. (CP)—A grim accounting of Britain's winter losses, including 4,000,000 sheep and lambs or 20 per cent of the country's flocks, was given by Agriculture Minister Williams with a warning it might affect meat supplies for years.

Williams, in his speech, gave this summary of disaster in the worst winter in 50 years:

In some areas losses ranged from 80 to 90 per cent. One flock was reduced by 1,000 to 64 by Winter snows;

Spring floods had covered 690,000 acres of farmland which now was reduced to 80,000. Late sowing was expected to incur further losses in production. The government would introduce legislation to compensate farmers if late-sown fields fail to produce a normal yield;

Stocks of feeding stuffs were at a record low level and dollar area purchases of basic foods must be continued because home output could not be quickly increased.

"Never in living memory has nature dealt such grave and cruel blows," the minister said.

WIRING SCHOOL TO BE CONDUCTED

An "Adequate Wiring School" is being held here on Thursday for electrical contractors of the district, about twenty-five in all. Improvement of wiring in homes, schools and commercial buildings is being sought. Experts from the Hydro Electric Power Commission, Toronto, will attend the meeting and give instruction. Schools of this type are being held in various parts of Ontario. Utilities officials and contractors from all parts of this district are expected to attend.

FIREMEN'S SCHOOL OPENS IN KINGSTON

The annual two-day Regional Firemen's Training School begins today at Queen's University, Kingston. The course will include lectures and an actual demonstration of fire-fighting technique by the Kingston Fire Department under Fire Chief V. C. Brightman.

The firemen will be welcomed by Principal R. C. Wallace, Queen's University. Major J. Stuart Crawford, Fire Chief Angus Mickle, Lachine, president of the Dominion Fire Chiefs' Association and W. J. Scott, O.B.E., Ontario Fire Marshal.

The Belleville Fire Department will not be represented at the school, it was learned today.

FIVE DELEGATES ATTEND CONVENTION

Five delegates from Belleville restaurants attended the third annual convention of the Canadian Restaurant Association held at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto last week. Belleville delegates were Mr. and Mrs. G. Mowers, the Round Spot; Mr. W. Badgley, Guild Restaurant; J. T. Bothwell, Guild Restaurant, and Mr. George DeVuyst, Old Tavern Bar-B-Q.

POLICE COURT

A total of 76 cases were listed on the docket for Tuesday morning's city police court before Magistrate T. Y. Wills, the vast majority of them being traffic violations dating from one week ago. Owing to the absence of the magistrate no court was held on Friday.

With the morning court proceedings lasting until twelve-thirty noon the most of the time was taken up by a charge of intoxication against a local woman who contested the case. She was found guilty and assessed the conventional $10. fine with costs of $22 being assessed.

Municipal Board Refuses Request Of City Council

The Ontario Municipal Board turned down the application of the local city council for permission to purchase Sidney township property for the development of a municipal airport without the ratepayers voting on the matter.

Members of city council were informed of the decision of the board when at council meeting Monday evening a communication from the board was read advising of the decision. During March a public hearing on the matter had been held at the city hall when arguments both for and against the airport project had been heard by two members of the Municipal Board. Decision of the board members had been deferred.

The communication from the board regarding the council application to purchase the property at a cost of $25,000 was brief and to the point and was as follows:

"Further to the hearing of this application on the 13th inst., I am directed to advise you that a dispensation of the vote of the ratepayers has been refused by the board."

The application by the city asked that the city be permitted to purchase approximately 190 acres in Sidney township to be developed as an airport. Dispensation of the vote of the taxpayers was asked to enable the city to take advantage of the options which would run out before the ratepayers could vote on the matter.

There was no discussion by council members on the decision of the Municipal Board.

Letter to the Editor

TRUCKERS HAVE THEIR PROBLEMS, TOO

Editor, Ontario Intelligencer:

To a person who is vitally interested in trucking and traffic movements in this city, I noticed recently something which is both ironic and quite disappointing.

There is a building being erected in the foot-bridge gangway, apparently right in the path of the proposed Riverside Drive regarding which we read about and heard so much about just recently.

This drive seemed to be the answer to a large percentage of our traffic troubles and the parking problem on Front Street. It was going to eliminate a lot of parking on Front Street, the necessity of trucks holding up traffic while trying desperately to get through those narrow holes designed solely for horses and wagons in days long gone by, also eliminate much of the risk to life and limb which can hardly be unobserved by any person using their eyes on the west side of Front Street while playing cat and mouse with bumpers, fenders and back racks.

This morning I watched a 45-foot tractor-trailer unit entering the gangway beside Kresge's store off Front Street. The driver made it all right after much backing up but he could hardly have been held responsible if he had backed into a car or a pedestrian during the process. Two minutes later I watched a smaller truck negotiating the gangway opposite Campbell Street. In this instance some very thoughtful driver had parked his or her car partly in the entrance to the gangway so that the truck driver had to approach the opening between the buildings on a decided angle. He made it all right but though no fault of the car owner. Another six inches would have meant damage to the car.

To one who finds these things part of his daily business worries the new stores beside the foot-bridge are going to be quite a nuisance. Belleville has passed up a good bet again.

Clothing Collection For British Flood Relief Campaign May 14th

The date for the collection of clothing for the British Flood Relief Campaign here has been set.

Starting at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of Wednesday, May 14, city trucks will move off from an appointed rendezvous to various zones of the city to pick up the cartons of clothing and shoes.

This was announced today following a special meeting of the Campaign Committee under the chairmanship of Mayor Frank Follwell.

Members of service clubs and other city organizations will man the trucks, and with the co-operation of the general public in packaging and placing the parcels in a convenient place on verandahs or pavements, it is expected the collection will be completed within a few hours.

The Campaign Committee urges the general public to start immediately to select clothing it intends to give to the stricken people of Britain, so that everything will be in readiness on the day of collection. Shoes should be tied in pairs. Remember, dancing pumps and silk dresses, evening wear (ladies) etc., are not acceptable.

Want Good Quality

It is requested that clothing of good quality and in good state of repair be sent to Britain. Remember, the people of Britain have been through and are going through very bad periods and are trying to build up their self respect. Unbecoming, out-of-date clothes depress deeply. Work parties and individuals in Britain will try to cope in remaking, but spirits are low, everyone is tired and accessories such as buttons, thread, etc., are hard to get. Belleville should see to it that its gifts are a credit to its people and its community.

All washable things should be washed, but ironing is not necessary as the clothing will be pressure-baled anyway. Anyone who can get things cleaned is urged to do so. Clean and dirty clothes should be packaged separately.

The public is asked to pack all clothes in containers, boxes, sacks, etc., and to donate any extra containers as these will be needed for packing at the Central Depot.

Clothes should be mended. It is likely mending parties will be at the depot ,but if clothes are mended by the donor, it will greatly facilitate the work of these people.

Get Shoes Mended

Try to get shoes mended, if possible. For that is a slow and difficult process in Britain. Buttons and buckles should be sewn on, laces in place, and the shoes tied in pairs.

Pin a note on the gift with the donor's name and address. It will be interesting to know who gets the different gifts of clothing.

And don't forget warm clothing especially overcoats. Men's and boys' clothing are especially needed. Shoes, men and women's and rubber boots and galoshes, especially children's.

Bedding and household linen is invaluable. Almost everything even tea towels, is on coupons in Britain and the things which are not, such as blankets and sheets are practically unobtainable over there.

Remember the collection date, 2 p.m. Wednesday, May 14. Have that parcel or parcels ready for the collectors.

Old Home Week Entertainment To be Provided by Rai Purdy

Rai Purdy, radio impresario and numbered among Canada's outstanding purveyors of entertainment, will be in charge of the Belleville Old Home Week attractions, officials of the General Committee announced the other day.

At present, Purdy is in charge of more productions than a Hollywood motion picture tycoon and his efforts take him from opera to barn dances.

His present productions include "Georgie's Wife" a daily soap opera, broadcast from coast to coast; the weekly evening show "Canadian Cavalcade", and the promising "Stars to Be". His present ambitions include the staging of gigantic outdoor spectacles and a contract for the grandstand show at the Canadian National Exhibition which reopens at Toronto this year.

Purdy first broke into radio and the entertainment field ten years ago. At the end of a year he had his own company as a free-lance producer and when he went to England in 1942 to join the Canadian Army Show overseas, he left behind a concern that continued to net a good profit during his period of service abroad.

Staged Rodeo in England

He staged "Rhythm Rodeo" while in England, and while it received little mention back in Canada, it equalled many Broadway runs, playing 30 consecutive performances to 2,000 troops nightly.

Since returning from overseas he has been busy lining up a Toronto headquarters with 5,000 square feet of rehearsal space in addition to a stage where he plans to ready many shows for Canadians.

He is rated as Canada's top trouper and he will bring to Belleville's Old Home Week all the famous figures of his vivid imagination.

Part of the entertainment that Mr. Purdy has planned for his gala round of attractions here during Old Home Week include parades, many of them mounted; bands galore; an old-time fiddling contest; beauty contest; moustache-growing contest; vaudeville shows featuring top stars of radio and screen dancing to internationally famous name bands; international speedboat regatta; swimming contest and mayors' race.

Most Elaborate

The entertainment as a whole will be by far the most elaborate series of its kind ever seen in the city. There will be something doing every minute and the committee is leaving no stones unturned to make the event a red-letter one in the history of the city.

And the proceeds of the week will be devoted to the construction of the Community Swimming Pool, a worthwhile cause, if there ever was one here. The pool will fill a long-needed want where parents as well as children will be able to enjoy themselves in pleasant sanitary surroundings The proposed pool will be healthful as well as entertaining, and should be a worthy monument to the community interest of the residents of the city.

Aims, Objectives Of Old Home Week Outlined to Council

Aims and objectives of the Old Home Week program for the coming July were outlined before members of city council Monday evening by C. N "Nick" Nicholson, Old Home Week secretary.

Speaking briefly before council members Mr. Nicholson stated that it had been learned that all councillors were not fully acquainted with the Old Home Week program aims. These he said were, first, to bring back former residents, secondly to obtain publicity for Belleville and, thirdly, to raise money for the proposed community swimming pool.

Few Now Opposed

He admitted that there had been opposition to the holding of Old Home Week this year but now that the program had been arranged he found very few people opposed. The service clubs had entered enthusiastically into the project and the Rai Purdy Productions Ltd., Toronto, had been retained to supply the entertainment. There would be three national broadcasts and advance publicity for these broadcasts in all metropolitan newspapers.

Alderman Allin asked regarding the program for Monday night, July 14th to which Alderman Duffy replied that he believed something could be worked out with the Old Home Week committee. Mr. Nicholson stated he thought there was an understanding that the Old Home Week commitee would provide the entertainment for Monday night.

Considered Before

"Understanding for July 14th?" asked Alderman Lazenby.

"The holding of Veterans' Day was considered long before the holding of Old Home Week and I think that if this organization wants to capitalize on Veterans' Day, the veterans should at least participate in some of the returns."

Mayor Follwell returned that he thought the veterans would welcome some sort of entertainment for the evening of Veterans' Day.

To this Alderman Lazenby replied that it might be wise for the council to meet with the committee of veterans from The Army and Navy, the Canadian Legion and the C.N.R. War Veterans' Association in regard to program plans for the day. "I would not like to see a monkey wrench thrown into the program," he stated.

"There has yet been no monkey wrench thrown into the proceedings," returned the Mayor, as he announced he would be only too pleased to call a meeting of council with the veterans' committee. No further action was taken and the matter was dropped.

WARNS PROSPECTIVE OIL USERS

Sarnia, April 29 — (CP)—President H. H. Hewetson yesterday told the annual meeting of shareholders of Imperial Oil Limited that there would be continued increase in the demand for heating oils, and warned all persons contemplating the use of oil for heating not to install oil burning equipment unless he has a dependable assurance of supply.

Recommendations On Fire By-law Referred Back

City council at their regular meeting on Monday evening failed to ratify a previous committee meeting recommendation called for a revision of the present fire by-law to prohibit firemen from accepting off-duty employment.

When the recommendation came up for final passing Alderman Newton Wilbur, chairman of fire, asked that the motion passed in committee regarding the enforcement of the fire department age limit and that regarding the acceptance of off-duty work by firemen also be referred back.

"Since the recommendation was passed in committee I have found that the matter calls for further investigation," stated Alderman Wilber as he asked that the recommendation be referred back to committee. The motion to refer the matter back to committee was seconded by Mayor Frank Follwell.

"I thought the Chairman of Fire had already thoroughly investigated this matter before the recommendation was written," interjected Alderman Jack Allin.

Alderman Clarke held that the present fire by-law had been drawn up in good faith but admitted that apparently it would not operate. "It is unfair to say that the firemen cannot accept off-duty employment unless the same regulations govern other city employees. If we are paying our firemen a living wage they should not work while off duty."

Alderman Butler agreed with Alderman Wilbur that possibly a fuller investigation into the matter was needed. Council finally voted to refer the matter again to committee and advocated that conditions of work as provided by the fire fighters' federation be considered.

March is Second Busiest Month In Hospital

With one exception the month of March, 1947, was the busiest month at Belleville General Hospital for a period of over one year, it has been announced through the monthly statistical report published by the hospital.

Number of patient days during the month totalled 4,974 which within the past year was exceeded only by the month of August last year. The number of admissions in August exceeded those of last month but the patients did not stay as long in hospital. The average stay in hospital during March was 9.50 days.

The number of major operations also showed an increase during the past year with 138 being performed as against 126 during March last year.

Boy Scout Activities

The paper salvage campaign held last week by the 1st. Belleville Cubs and Boy Scouts was very successful. Scout leader H. Nicholls stated that over one and a half tons of paper had been collected through the co-operation of the citizens living in the area covered.

A second campaign is planned for the first week in May. The area to be covered by the next collection will be between Bridge and Victoria Streets from Pinnacle to Dufferin Streets.

TRUMAN TO INSPECT SITE

Massena, N. Y., April 29—(AP)—President Truman has been invited to inspect the site of the St. Lawrence seaway power project on his way to Ottawa next June. Mayor Rollin A. Newton wrote the president yesterday extending the invitation from this town of 11,000.

OBITUARY

MRS. M. BEGG (Brighton)

Brighton, April 29. (Special.) The people of Brighton and vicinity were shocked and grieved at the passing of Mrs. M. Begg, after a few days' illness. She was in her forty-eighth year and seemed to be in her usual good health until Saturday when she was taken with a heart attack and passed away early Thursday morning, April 24th. Just three months previously her husband, Mr. Magnus Begg passed away of a heart attack at Manhattan Beach, Calif. Mrs. Begg's maiden name was Elizabeth Irene Sandford, daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. Chas. Sandford.

She had always lived in Brighton and by her kindly disposition had endeared herself to all with whom she came in contact. Besides several cousins, the nearest remaining member of her family is an aunt, Miss Margaret Ferris, who has always made her home with Mrs. Begg.

The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. Mr. Anderson of Trinity St. Andrew's United Church, at the home, on Platt Street, on Saturday afternoon. There was a large attendance at the funeral and the flowers were numerous and beautiful.

The bearers were Messrs. P. Arnoldi, J. Wheeler, R. Freeman, E. Nesbitt, W. Nesbitt and Dr. Dunnett.

The flower-bearers were girls of the Miss. Evening Auxilary of which Mrs. Begg was an interested member.

Entombment took place in the family mausoleum, in Mount Hope Cemetery, Brighton.

EDWARD BRANT

(St. Catharines—Bloomfield)

The following obituary from the St. Catharines paper will be of interest to friends of Edward Brant in this district:

A wide circle of friends will be shocked to learn of the untimely death of Flt. Lt. Edward Brant at the Veterans' Hospital, Hamilton, Wednesday, April 23, 1947, in his 29th year. He was the beloved husband of Zillah Jenkinson of 112 Pelham Rd. Born in Bloomfield, Ont., the late Flt. Lt. Brant had resided in the United States for 16 years prior to his coming to St. Catharines. He was a member of the airforce for four years, nine months, serving in the capacity of observer in a bomber crew. The late Flt. Lt. Brant leaves to mourn his demise, besides his widow, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Brant of St. Catharines, and one brother, Burton, of Niagara Falls.

Police Blotter

Patsy Henn, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Henn, Murney Street, suffered a bruised knee Saturday afternoon when she darted out from behind a bus on Moira Street and ran into the side of a car driven by C. E. Ruddy, of Ottawa. Driver of the car drove the little girl to her home, it being reported she had suffered no other injury but a bruised knee.

Fred Berry, Pinnacle Street, reported the theft of a wheel tire and tube from his car which was parked in the rear yard of an Upper Front Street service station.

Ronald Hiles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hiles, Everett St., reported that a motorist had run over his parked bicycle smashing the front wheel. He secured the licence number of the car and the Motor Vehicles Branch is being checked for the name of the owner.

Theft of a mantel clock from a Catherine Street residence and the attempted theft of a topcoat from a car parked on William Street, were also reported over the weekend.

Grant Badgley, William Street, reported the theft of his coat from his car which had been left parked on the street overnight. Later he called police to say the coat had not been stolen but had been taken into the house by his landlady.

While going to church the landlady had seen a youth in her roomer's auto apparently trying on the topcoat. She called and the youth left the coat and ran up the street.

Harry Smith to Erect Garage, Restaurant and 25 Tourist Cabins on Foster Avenue

Permit to Erect Buildings Given by City Council at Lengthy Session

Harry Smith, local coal merchant, at council, Monday night, was granted permission to construct at Dundas Street and Foster Avenue, a new restaurant, garage and 25 permanent tourist cabins at an estimated cost of $70,000.

The new garage and restaurant will cost $20,000 while the 25 tourist cabins will cost an estimated $2,000 each, or a total of $50,000.

Although the majority of councillors appeared willing to deal with the matter immediately, Alderman William Harvey felt that the application should have been first presented in committee, and moved that the matter be referred to committee. An amendment to proceed with the matter was carried with result that permission was granted for Mr. Smith to proceed.

It was felt that if the 25 tourist cabins were intended for permanent occupancy, they would do considerable to relieve the current housing shortage in the city.

Auditor's Report Presented

The auditor's report for 1946 was presented by Auditor F. A. R. MacFadden. A deficit of $1,307 was reported by the auditor for all city departments.

Mayor Follwell thanked the auditor for his comprehensive audit report and congratulated 1946 alderman for coming out so well on the year's operation.

"I am surprised that we had a deficit of only $1,300 on the year's operation," stated Alderman Clarke, chairman of Finance. "We should be grateful to the committee chairmen of last year who stayed so well within their budgets despite rising costs. I move the adoption of the report."

The Mayor also congratulated the chairman of Finance, who he said had considerable responsibility in keeping costs in line. Alderman Harvey felt last year's council should be commended on the report as there had been considerable criticism of increased expenditures.

Auditor Great Help.

Alderman Clarke returned that the city auditor had been a great help to the financial department of the city.

Reason for the wide range in administration costs of the three city utilities, hydro water and gas, was asked by Alderman Clarke. He stated that administration costs for hydro and water amounted to approximately two dollars each for the some 5,000 customers served, while administration costs for gas amounted to about five dollars each for the some 700 customers.

A recommendation was passed by council asking that the council representative on the Public Utilities Commission secure from the commission an explanation of the difference in administration costs.

A recommendation from the Retail Merchants' Division of the Chamber of Commerce asking for observance of Victoria Day on Monday, May 26th., instead of on Saturday, resulted in considerable discussion before the matter was referred to committee for further consideration. Mayor Follwell stated that he felt the wishes of the local industrialists should be considered on the matter, while Alderman Allin held that in general industrialists were opposed to observance of a holiday on any day but on a statutory holiday.

Feel They Should be Consulted.

Mayor Follwell felt that this city should take leadership in a campaign for observance of all holidays on the Monday closest to that of the actual date.

"The manufacturers feel slighted because of the fact that they are not consulted when holidays are declared," stated Alderman Vanner. They employ just as many workers as the merchants and feel they should be consulted."

Decision of council was that the recommendation should go back to the Retail Merchants for a complete expression on the matter from the entire Chamber of Commerce.

Council recommended that the city auditor be paid an annual salary of $2,500 for auditing the books of all city department, including schools. The salary will be paid monthly.

Concur In Motion

Council concurred with a recommendation from the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities asking that the Canadian government set up an immigration policy. However, they asked amendment of the resolution to the effect that preference be given to British subjects and that as second choice Scandinavian stock with farming and mining experience be permitted to enter the country.

Alderman Laxenby felt that with 18-year-old British males unable to immigrate to Canada because of call-up regulations, they should not be discriminated against by permitting immigrants from Europe into Canada. Alderman Vanner felt that something should be done to stir the government into the adoption of some form of immigration policy.

To Erect Platform

The McColl Frontenac Company was granted permission to erect a portable unloading platform for use at their south Front Street warehouse premises. While in use the platform would temporarily block off the sidewalk passing the premises. The same company was also granted permission to erect a 15,000 gallon capacity gasoline storage tank.

A committee of Alderman Harvey and Clarke, with the city comptroller, city engineer and Mayor Follwell was named to interview Sidney township officials regarding an agreement for apportioning of costs for snowplowing and road repairs on Sidney Street.

Cost Prohibitive

The suggested Frank Street subway beneath the C.N.R. railway came up for discussion following a report of a special committee of Alderman Harvey, Hyde, Allin and the city engineer. On consultation with the Board of Transport it was estimated that a subway at this point would cost an estimated $150,000.

Alderman Harvey stated he had been surprised at the estimated cost of the subway at this point and thought consideration might be given to a level crossing. Alderman Hyde returned that the Transport Board would not approve of a level crossing.

Alderman Clarke asked how many residents lived in the area which would be served by the proposed subway. He was told there were 15 to 20. "For $150,000 the city could buy the whole thing out and move the residents elsewhere," he stated.

Refers to Highway.

Mayor Follwell referred to the proposed two-lane highway which the Highways Department expects to construct north of the city and suggested that the proposed Frank Street subway might be considered by the department as an artery leading into the city. He suggested that negotiations be entered into with the department with the view of obtaining financial assistance from the province for construction of the proposed subway.

Construction of a new sewer on Benjamin Street running from Yeomans to Sidney Street was granted while the tender of S. R. McCrory of Stirling for the construction of the Wellington Street sewer was accepted at $5,506.30. Two other tenders were received, that of the MacFarland Construction Company being for $7,270.87, and the Diamond Construction Company $7,289.67.

Should Not Delay.

Mayor Follwell pointed out that residences were already being constructed in this area and awarding of the sewer tender should not be delayed. Alderman Harvey felt that a Belleville contractor should be given the contract but Alderman Armstrong pointed out that people are building houses at a time of high cost and the city should save all money possible for the home owners as it would be they who would pay for the sewer.

Under inquiries Alderman Allin wanted to know why the special meeting called for discussion on the gas plant question was called in the afternoon instead of in the evening. He was told by the Mayor that it had been called in the afternoon for the convenience of members of the Utilities Commission, and also of some Aldermen.

The above Alderman criticized the action of Alderman Follwell in leaving council after it had commenced when that Alderman had previously complained of him being absent when some particular business was being transacted. Mayor Follwell stated that Alderman Follwell had been granted permission to leave council to attend an inquest.

Mayor Answers Query

Date of the expected installation of the ice plant in the Memorial Arena was asked by Alderman Hyde. Mayor Follwell returned that the ice plant equipment was expected in the city within ten days for commencement of installation. The rink committee had decided to defer the installation of pipe and the laying of the composition concrete floor until later in the season in order to take advantage of the continuity of the wrestling, boxing and dancing season. Complete installation of the plant would be made by September 1st, it was stated.

Delay in the setting up of traffic protection measures voted by council for each of the city schools was criticized by Alderman Follwell who stated that it seemed ridiculous to hold up such a worthwhile project. He was informed that suitable material for construction of signs could not be procured, it later being moved that the signs be made locally from available materials.

Alderman Wants Action

Alderman Lattimer wanted action from the recently appointed traffic control committee, while Alderman Vanner enquired as to when Health Minister Hon. Russell T. Kelly would be coming to the city to discuss the convalescent hospital proposal.

The Mayor returned that the Minister had been busy and would come to Belleville at the earliest opportunity.

Alderman Harvey complimented the employees of the public works department on their cooperation when called out in an emergency.

Under motions council voted to renew the options on the Cummings and Cook property on the river bank behind Front St., stores, with the view of providing additional parking space. Entrance would be by the present laneway east of the Legault property.

Claims Idea Not Feasible

Alderman Follwell felt that the idea was not feasible and suggested that if the Riverside Drive project was not to be opened up as originally intended, it should not be opened at all. He claimed that the Bridge Street laneway was too narrow and that its use by the public would create a bottleneck.

The Mayor was asked to appoint a committee to inspect city streets regarding repairs and asphalt treatment.

Under general business Mayor Follwell congratulated Alderman Hyde on his appointment as president of the Children's Aid Society. He also congratulated Alderman Clarke on his appointment as representative to the organization from city council.

Alderman Allin attempted to give notice of motion regarding the solicitor being instructed to draw up a proper question in reference to a two-year term for aldermen for submission to the electorate at the next election. The notice of motion failed however to get before the council.

Additional Lights Ordered

An additional light was recommended to be placed on Yeomans Street near Bridge Street and also on George Street north of the C.P.R. crossing.

Alderman William Harvey was congratulated by Mayor Follwell on the observance of his 37th wedding anniversary celebrated on Sunday, and also on his having had over 25 years' public service with the city.

SNAKE PRICES DROP

Chicago, April 29 —(AP)— A new price cut was announced today, but it wasn't likely to benefit many households.

Director Robert Bean of the Brookfield zoo said the price of live snakes had dropped from 30 to 17½ cents a pound because of a price war between two reptile dealers competing for the zoo's business.

Truman Requests United Effort To Bring Prices Down

New York, April 21 (AP) — President Truman, cautioning that the economic situation in the United States is "acute", appealed today for a united effort to bring prices down and prevent a depression.

Addressing the annual luncheon of members of the Associated Press, the chief executive said there must be:

1. "Moderation on the part of business."
2. "Forbearance on the part of labor," plus greater productivity.
3. "All-out effort on the part of the farmer."
4. "Wise guidance and action on the part of the government." Here he reiterated his plea against cutting taxes now and called for extension of rent, export and credit controls.

The address was the highlight of Newspaper Concention Week here.

Truman tied in his proposals for bolstering the economy at home with his program of helping free peoples abroad maintain their freedom.

Comparing conditions now with those of 1929, the peak pre-war year of economic activity, he listed:

A 71 per cent rise in physical volume, distinct from dollar value, of industrial output; a 32 per cent increase in agricultural production;

10,000,000 more employed;

The national income at a rate of $176,000,000,000 as against $83,000,000,000;

Buying Power Rises.

And average income, after taxes, up from $654 to $1,090. Converting the 1929 income average into terms of the 1947 dollar, Mr. Truman said the gain in actual buying power still shows a rise from $825 to $1,090.

"But," the president went on, "I must say in all frankness that the economic skies are not entirely clear. One cloud is shadowing our economic future.

"That cloud is the sharp and rapid rise in prices.

"Some day this cloud is certain to burst. They are sure of a recession or a depression. I believe that we as a nation can prevent this economic cloudburst. But it requires prompt, preventive steps."

Recalling his efforts last year to have Congress extend price control, the President said private enterprise now has the responsibility for prices because:

"A group saw fit to sabotage price control and represented to the public that prices would come down in a free market.

"This has not taken place."

Parish Honors Msgr. Nicholson On Appointment

Parishioners of the parish of St. Michael the Archangle assembled in the auditorium of St. Michael's Academy on Sunday evening, after vespers, to mark the rank of Protonatory Apostolic recently bestowed on the pastor, Monsignor J. F. Nicholson, V.G., by his Holiness Pope Pius XII.

A delightful program was presented, including vocal solos by Robert Lucy, "A Little Grey Home in the West," by Carolyn Forhan, "Little Old Church in the Valley", by Edward Brown, singing "Thora" and "Sands of the Desert" and a duet by Robert and Sharon Lucy, "Pray to Me Gypsy", all accompanied by Sister Bibianna. Piano solos were rendered by Barbara Forhan, "In My Garden," and by Mary Duelly, "Caprice Viennoise."

Mr. Harold Barrett contributed "Friends of Yester Years" and "O, What a Beautiful Morning" with Mrs. Barrett as accompanist.

On behalf of the parishioners, Mrs. Geo. Wilson, president of the Catholic Women's League read an address paying tribute to Monsignor Nicholson, and Miss Mary McDougall, president of the Children of Mary, made a presentation.

Expresses Appreciation

Monsignor Nicholson expressed appreciation for the address and for the beautiful gifts so kindly presented. He said it was a gracious gesture of the fine flower of faith, which has always blossomed so visibly in this parish. For this tangible taken of devotion and kindness he thanked them with all his heart. He referred to Mr. Mikel's "History of Belleville" in which is told that the two first white residens of Belleville were the Sulpician Missionaries, Father Trouve and Father Fenalon in the year 1668. If they could revisit the scene of their labors, what a transformation they would behold! He expressed gratitude to the Ontario Intelligencer for the full account of the Investure Ceremonies, and expressed pleasure at the presence of guests of other faiths on that occasion. It manifested the cordial attitude prevailing among all in this city.

Attachment Renewed

Devoted attachment to the See of Peter was renewed on the occassion of the Holy Father graciously deigning to confer the honor of Protonotary Apostolic on the pastor. Like his predecessor Leo, who faced Atilla the Hun at the gates of Rome, Pope Pius XII has stood like a pillar of bronze in the path of Hitelr, who sought to ride rough shod over the rights of the human soul, which was created in the image and likeness of God.

Dea Leacy of Napaee ir his own entertaining way, recalled the coming of Monsignor to Belleville in 1930, and the work he has since accomplished.

Mr. Maurice Callaghan, Grand Knight of Columbus, acted as chairman for the occasion in his usual capable manner. At the close of the program Monsignor Nicholson received the congratulations of the parishioners.

Health Teaching in Schools

Is the teaching of health in our schools receiving the attention it deserves? Daily appraisal of individual health and cleanliness is given in only 66.6% of all elementary schools, health experiments or health excursions are conducted in less than 10% of these schools. Health libraries are to be found in only 15% of all elementary schools and in less than 1/3 of all secondary schools. The use of films as a teaching aid affects only ½ of all secondary schools and less than 20% of all elementary schools.

Facts and recommendations of this kind on the teaching of health in the schools fill the pages of the second section of a report issued by the National Committee for School Health Research. The report is based on a comprehensive, nation-wide survey of health factors in Canadian schools — the first such survey ever made in Canada and, as far as is known, in any country.

Class records of growth in height and weight are second in point of usage, 50.9 of all class rooms of elementary schools employing this measure.

It is pointed out that perhaps the greatest single factor which has affected the health teaching in the schools is the organization of the Junior Red Cross branches. Members of this body are instructed in healthful living habits and are concerned with health problems and their solutions. On numerous occasions they have been able to assist in community health enterprizes.

There is no province in which fifty per cent of the elementary schools have a health library, which means a separate library or a separate section of the main library.

35.4 per cent of elementary schools in Canada have co-ordination of health services and health teaching.

The report states that there is a definite need in each province for teachers especially trained.

In secondary schools the most popular motivating measure in all schools is the use of wall charts and posters, 75.2 per cent reporting that this measure is in use.

After Moscow

The Council of Foreign Ministers' Moscow session having lasted six and a half weeks ended on April 2t4h without agreement on any major question. Six months are to elapse before the Foreign Ministers meet in London to try again. During that interval the situation in Germany will not have remained static and the disadvantages of the absence of an Austrian treaty will have been accentuated.

The fact that the Foreign Ministers have set themselves so long an interval, in the course of which the difficulty of the problems to be settled can hardly conceivably diminish and in the case notably of Germany are likely to be augmented, may be taken as a measure of their recognition of how wide is the gulf separating them from agreement today.

The most serious cause of disappointment is the Foreign Ministers' inability to conclude a treaty with Austria, both on account of the urgency of its need and because it was or should have been a circumscribed problem within the Foreign Ministers' grasp to settle there and then.

The most serious cause of disagreement was found in the Russian insistence on reparations from Germany out of current German production as a condition to economic unity. Reduced to its lowest terms, this would mean the payment of German reparations to Russia out of the pocket of United Kingdom and American taxpayers.

This Russian insistence ignored the fact that the Potsdam Agreement ordained the treatment of Germany as a single economic unit and did not provide for the payment of reparations out of current German production. This proved the crux of the whole conference.

The alternative to the economic unity of all Germany is the economic unity of the largest possible part of Germany, which is what the United Kingdom and U.S.A. Governments have established in their zones. Now in the face of Russian opposition to economic unity for all Germany on any acceptable terms, the United Kingdom and U.S.A. Governments may be expected to continue to develop the organization of their zones on a joint basis and to pursue their efforts to make their zones self-supporting.

Willa Cather

Willa Sibert Cather did not tailor her writing to passing tastes. Her works were, like herself, sturdy, simple and charged with the vitality of the pioneer days of Nebraska, where she grew from childhood to womanhood. "A painter or writer," she once said, "must learn to distinguish what is his own from what he admires." Thus she forsook the tea party atmosphere of her first novel, "Alexander's Bridge," for the Nebraska prairies of "O Pioneers!" Thereafter she concentrated, for the most part, on the Midwest and Southwest. She did not submerge her story beneath a welter of detail, but permitted the environment to emerge through the tale.

Though "One of Ours" may not be her best novel, it is fitting that it won for her the Pulitzer Prize in 1922. For with that book she refuted the lingering assertion that she was only an imitator of Edith Wharton. Later books—"A Lost Lady" and "Death Comes for the Archbiship"—made her wish only to keep free lands free and to preserve the peace by giving all men opportunity to know the truth. We believe that the Voice of America and the kindred activities now endangered by imprudent economy may help achieve these aims in a critical moment of world affairs. Congress should consider well before it stills this voice.—New York Times.

Speak Up!

We fully concur in what Lieutenant-Governor Ray Lawson has to say about the necessity for good speaking and the obligation that rests upon the schools to see that children speak properly. Speaking in Toronto before the Ontario Educational Association, Mr. Lawson said:—"Surely all children can be taught the importance of speaking slowly, clearly and distinctly. How many teachers or parents enunciate clearly? Is this carelessness, laziness or ignorance? Generation after generation have inherited carelessness in indistinct enunciation." It is the experience of most observers that this is an age of mumbled, blurred and unaccented diction almost unintelligible to the listener.

However, the radio may come to our aid. Young people who earn their living over the airways must perforce speak slowly and clearly if they are to win an audience. Thank heavens the days of the rapid-fire radio commentator, such as the late Floyd Gibbons who was wont to boast of the number of words he could shoot out in sixty seconds, are over, and we have come to a saner habit with the mike. Few things are so offensive as sloppy speech and few gifts are worth more to a young man than a pleasing and convincing way of speaking. —London Free Press.

Cars in Bad Shape

When only 177 of the 587 cars examined here during the recent Traffic Safety Campaign turned out to be in perfect mechanical condition, it did not necessarily suggest that the majoriey of the vehicles on the street are menaces to life. A large proportion of those not passed probably have only minor defects, which do not make them dangerous.

The result of the check, however, should teach a valuable lesson. It demonstrates the importance of frequent inspections of cars, particularly those which are some years old, as many are today. Only this expert attention will reveal defects which, undetected, may grow into conditions that may cause fatal accidents.—Windsor Star.

Little is the immortality of speech.—Schlegel.

Newspaper Facts

The irreplaceable part that daily newspapers play in everyday lives was amply illustrated during a newspaper strike in one centre when 50,000 telephone calls, representing 50% of the families in the city, flooded the newspaper office within 12 hours of the commencement of the strike.

JUST FOLKS

(Copyright, 1947, Edgar A. Guest)

NO ONE HAS EVERYTHING

Given things are treasured more
Than are trinkets bargained for,
Gifts are weighted down with thought
Which with money can't be bought.

"He has everything!" Ah, no,
In this life that's never so.
All have needs, as time goes by,
Only friendships can supply.

Rich men know it's vain to try
Every want to gratify.
All wish something while they live
Others care enough to give.

Purchased stuff is tossed aside.
Kept are proofs of love and pride,
Treasured till the day we die.
Things our money couldn't buy.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

April 29th., 1927.

Mr. William L. Doyle, Income Tax Collector, stated today that the returns from the whole district, which comprises the counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Northumberland and Peterborough, have been pouring into the local office and that they are up to any previous year. The mounted police have been stationed at the office for several days and will remain on guard until the time for making payment has expired.

Miss Ruth Vincent spent a few days recently with her sister, Mrs. Frank Zufelt, Consecon Lake.

There is an epidemic of influenza in the city.

The little stone school house in the rear of the present high school was closed today and the children will occupy space in the main building.

30 YEARS AGO

April 29th., 1917.

At a regular meeting of the West Belleville Women's Institute an excellent talk on "Child Training" was given by Mrs. Morrice. A detailed report on the Red Cross work done by the Institute during the winter months was made by Mrs. Lucas. The Red Cross workers in connection with the Institute have amalgamated with the West Belleville War Workers and in future will work with that society.

The flying dust on Victoria Avenue is very disagreeable. It penetrates into the houses, into one's eyes, over one's clothes, and sets one's temper afire. Can't something be done to stop the nuisance.

A recommendation will be presented at the next meeting of the city council authorizing the expenditure of $100 towards assisting in ploughing vacant lots in the city in order that the land may be worked for food production.

40 YEARS AGO

April 29th., 1907.

Mr. Charles Wilmot of Avondale will exhibit his two ponies and two saddle and harness horses at the Toronto Horse Show. He has won for two years the championship cup for saddle horses and ponies and if he is successful this year, the cup will become his permanent property.

Mr. Robert McCoy of this city will exhibit his cob, which is a valuable and handsome horse, at the Toronto Horse Show.

The D. & D. Institute football team defeated the Marsh and Henthorn team in a match on the Institute grounds yesterday. The score was 6 to 0.

Dr. G. A. Whitman of Picton has been appointed Associate Coroner for Prince Edward County.

The Oddfellows of Belleville celebrated the 88th. anniversary of the founding of the Order by attending service at Emmanuel Church. They made a gallant show as they marched to the church headed by the band and the Canton Militant. The Rev. A. M. Hubly preached an excellent sermon.

50 YEARS AGO

April 29th., 1897.

Messrs. W. H. Biggar, M.P.P., and D. R. Leavens of this city were in Toronto yesterday to interview the government with regards to the opening of an assay office in Belleville. They presented a letter from the Mayor in which the offer is made to provide a building free of charge; the government to grant $2,000 towards outfitting the office and taking care of the maintenance of the same. The government promised to give the matter early attention.

Mr. Morden Bird of Stirling was in town today.

Dr. Jones of Marmora was a visitor in town today.

Mr. Andrew Denike left today for Copperville, Mich.

Mr. William Matheson left today for Boston and New York.

Mr. Henry Tammadge of Montreal, formerly of Belleville, is renewing acquaintances in town.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Is cannibalism still practiced anywhere?

In one form or other cannibalism probably was once practiced by nearly all peoples in some stage of their history. It survived in parts of Africa, the interior of Australia, many parts of Polynesia and perhaps a few other isolated regions until the end of the last century.

Traces of it still exist in New Guinea. What vestiges of cannibalism remain are restricted almost entirely to the tropical regions within 10 degrees north and south of the Equator.

The eating of human flesh by human beings as an ordinary article of food is and probably always has been rare, and most of the early explorers exaggerated the extent to which cannibalism was practiced by savage peoples. Among most so-called cannibalistic savages the practice was a religious or sacramental rite. As a rule cannibals ate only enemies captured in war and many tribes permitted only warriors and chiefs to partake of human flesh. The practice was based on a notion that the eater of human flesh acquired the soul and powers of the person eaten.

Formerly the Maoris of New Zealand, like the Fiji Islanders and many other Pacific tribes, practiced cannibalism, but the last known case of cannibalism among them occurred in 1842. In 1923 the last "man eating" native of Samoa was captured on Tutuila. He was one of three cannibals who had escaped 33 years earlier. Traces of cannibalism were still found a generation or two ago among several native tribes in the interior of Australia, where old people were occasionally killed and eaten by relatives.

Sporadic cannibalism may still occur in parts of Africa. In 1923 the French authorities executed six natives of Guinea for eating 11 persons. A 70-year-old native woman told the judges she preferred the flesh of children "in the hope of becoming young again."

Of course, cannibalism may be practiced by human beings, as well as the higher animals, in cases of starvation.

"Cannibal" is from Spanish "canibal," a corruption of the name of a South American and West Indian "man-eating" tribe. Natives of Guanahani told Columbus that the "Kalinas" or "Caripunas," a people to the southeast, made a practice of eating human beings. A cacique in Hispaniola said the man-eating tribesmen were called "Caribes" and lived in the opposite side of that island. Columbus wrote in his journal that the natives of the Antilles lived in continual fear of the "Caribales" or "people of Cariba."

Some authorities suppose the root word was Arawakan Indian and signified "strong men" or "brave men." "Cannibal" and "Carib," whatever their original meaning, appear to be from the same Indian source.

The English quickly adopted "cannibal" in the sense of savages who make a practice of eating human flesh. In Shakespeare's III Henry VI York says of his murdered son Rutland, "That face of his the hungry cannibals would not have touch'd, would not have stain'd with blood," and Othello told Desdemona "of the cannibals that each other eat, the anthropiphagi," the last word being the Greek equivalent and meaning literally "man-eaters."

Canadian Nails Crossing Border Member Claims

Ottawa, April 29 — (CP) — Thomas Reid (L — New Westminster) contended in the Commons last night that a black market was spiriting Canadian nails across the United States border in the British Columbia region.

Joining one segment of a continuation of debate on the government's omnibus control bill, he asked George McIlraith, parliamentary assistant to Reconstruction Minister Howe, to do something about this situation.

Mr. Reid said farmers living within 12 miles of the border had satisfied their need for nails by going to nearby American towns and buying Canadian nails at 2½ times the normal price.

J. H. Ferguson (PC — Simcoe) said nails bought in the United States were being bootlegged in Canada, due to the "negligence" of the government.

"The people of Canada are being hoodwinked about a shortage of nails," he said, while the government was doing nothing to improve conditions.

The government was asking for an extension of "the power to procrastinate," he declared.

Garfield Case (PC — North Grey) said he had been informed nails were being "bottled up" by wholesalers and passed out to large interests.

He did not think nails should go for building places of amusement. Controls were not the solution, as they were driving legitimate buyers to patronize the black market.

C. E. Stephenson (PC—Huron,) urged immediate government action to provide nails, particularly for farmers. Hardware stores should be able to provide them.

Judge Disagrees With Lawyer Of Toronto Star

Toronto, April 29. (CP)—Mr. Justice W. T. Henderson disagreed in Ontario Court of Appeal yesterday with T. N. Phelan an interpretation of "qualified privilege" and remarked he could not follow the lawyer's argument.

Counsel for The Toronto Daily Star, Mr. Phelan contended that on a qualified occasion "you are entitled to make a defamatory statement."

"I don't agree with you," remarked Mr. Justice Henderson.

The exchange arose during hearing of the appeal of Premier George Drew, who is asking for a reversal of judgment and a new trial in his unsuccessful libel suit against the Star. The Premier claimed he was libelled personally in editorials published in the Star in 1945 in connection with "gestapo" charges made by E. B. Jolliffe, then Ontario C.C.F. leader.

After a special jury brought in a verdict of "no libel" in March, Mr. Justice D. P. J. Kelly, dismissed the action with costs.

Mr. Phelan, who completed his argument today, said the newspaper had repeated a statement made by Mr. Jollife over the radio, in order to comment on it. He added: "If it is in the public interest, the statement can be published whether it is true or not."

Mr. Justice Henderson: "If the address was wrong, what becomes of your right."

Mr. Phelan: "I have the right to repeat the address. . ."

Mr. Justice Henderson: "I don't think so. This was a radio address. The right does not go beyond the House of Commons or Legislature."

RUSSIA BLAMED

Stalin, he said, thought that compromises are possible eventually of "all the main questions, including demilitarization, political structure of German reparations and economic unity."

Operate Zone in Own Way

Putting aside diplomatic niceties in his criticism of Russia's course, the secretary noted that the Soviet Union has operated its occupation zone in Germany "practically without regard to the other zones."

Summarizing the Foreign Ministers' Conference, Marshall said bluntly:

"Agreement was made impossible at Moscow because, in our view, the Soviet Union insisted upon proposals which would have established in Germany a centralized government, adapted to the seizure of absolute control of a country which would be doomed economically through inadequate area and excessive population, and would be mortgaged to turn over a large part of its production as reparations, principally to the Soviet Union."

REST AND EXERCISE VERSUS NARCOTICS

Too many elderly persons resort to sedatives, hypnotics or narcotics for insomnia (writes a reader approaching 80). If they remain in bed 10 hours—as most of them can—five hours of sleep will be enough. (G.L.P.)

I'm just a one-horse-and buggy doctor but I do think there is good sense in what the man says. I even thought I should point out the differences between sedatives and narcotics, but with your permission we'll skip that—after all, medicine that purports to calm, quiet or benumb the nerves generally makes you dull-witted, drowsy or sleepy too. So far as health and safety may be concerned, I think, such drugs, remedies or medicines are all "dope" no matter what obscure practitioner or eminet specialist may have prescribed them originally—if at all. Dope says Webster, is any preparation used to stupefy. For example says Brady: opium, laudanum (tincture of opium), paregoric (camphorated tincture of opium), codeine, morphine, heroin, bromides, chloral hydrate, the numerous modifications or brands of barbiturates such as barbital phenobarital, veronal, luminal, amytal, dial, ipral,neonal, pentobarbital, and alcohol (beer, ale, wine, liquor).

Whether you choose to regard any of these as "dope" (that is stupefying) or not there's no evading the fact that the drug dulls, benumbs or blunts sensibility, consciousness, judgment, alertness, conscience.

A few other drugs not usually classified as stupefying are freely available to children or adults without serious restrictions by the government in Yankeeland, cheap as dirt and recklessly used by the thirty million morons in the country just as the vendors urge the morons to use the drugs —say "when you have that ache all over" or that "tired" feeling or "when you have had too good a time" or "when you have over-indulged" or when you have ache, pain, anxiety or worry"—in such circumstances all you have to do, you dimwit, is take a few doses of acetanilid (phenylacetamidide), phenacetin (acetophenetidin) or aspirin (acetysalsilic acid), more or less disguised in one ostrum or another, and if the stuff doesn't end all of your sufferings it will at least benumb your sensibility of your trouble for an hour or two.

Of all the dope mentioned aspirin is in my opinion the least dangerous to use to benumb pain or ache sensibility, and if you ever do resort to aspirin for this purpose I advise you to remain in bed or lying down or at least completely at rest for not less than two hours after the dose. I believe it is dangerous to take aspirin, even a single dose, and remain up and about during the two hours the drug is working.

In Little Lesson No. 2 CVD (cardiovascular degeneration, heart and artery disease)—there is a chapter on the effects of popular abuse of these analgesic (ache or pain killing) drugs. If your heart or your arteries give you any anxiety at all it will do you no harm to read CVD—for a copy send twenty-five cents and stamped envelope bearing your address.

Aside from the danger of untoward effects from these stupefying drugs another deterrent which should weigh with any one whose I.Q. is above the moronic level is the fact that no such drug ever cures anything. The only effect one can get from the drug is temporary blunting or blotting out of sense of ache pain, fatigue.

Too many persons who are or should be still young resort to sedatives, hypnotics or narcotics in lieu of the correctives they really need—rest or exercise.

The young man or young woman who, being a little weak in intellect is susceptible to the propaganda so extensively maintained through movies, radio, stage, magazines, newspapers books of fiction billboards first tries a cocktail because the poor sap imagines it is the smart thing to do, and presently finds he or she "needs a lift" at 4 or 5 o'clock if there is a cocktail bar handy. The alcohol temporarily makes the poor goof less aware of his or her need. What the young person really needs is just some brisk work, play or exercise—physical, muscular activity. But once the damn fool has experienced the abeyance of higher consciousness which he or she calls a "lift" it is difficult to interest him or her in anything so honest as physical activity.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

(By the Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, April 28 (CP)— The federal government's policy of paying the cost of transporting unemployed men to places where jobs are available will be discontinued shortly.

While there are areas where unemployment is concentrated—notably in Nova Scotia—the government is known to feel that the long-term solution for these spots is not to yank out a few hundred men.

In the labor-scarce areas, the government feels, employers looking for help can afford to transport workers to their plants if they cannot find any in their own vicinity.

The shift in policy, it is indicated, will not apply in cases where commitments already have been made.

Promotions: The federal government still is searching for a successor to Mr. Justice A. B. Hudson of the Supreme Court of Canada, who died last January, it was learned here today. Meantime, the seven-man court has been carrying on with six justices. Quorum for the court is five.

According to Supreme Court tradition, Alberta or British Columbia should have the next appointment. However, if candidates in those two provinces decline it is likely the government will look elsewhere.

Judicial: The Supreme Court of Canada is expected to give judgment this week on the validity of the Saskatchewan Farm Loans Act of 1944, contested before the court last October.

The Federal Government and the Dominion Mortgage and Investment Company argued that the legislation was unconstitutional because it trespassed on fields which ordinarily fell within federal jurisdicition.

Under the act Saskatchewan farmers could delay payments on the principal of their mortgages for one year in any year in which there was a crop failure. In addition the date of the final payment of the mortgage would be put back a year.

The federal government argued that the act interfered with the matter of interest, and interest comes within federal and not provincial jurisdiction. Saskatchewan's counter argument, supported by Alberta, was that the bill did not mention interest and affected nothing more than the principal payments of mortgages or loans.

Former Fire Chief Takes Rap at Council Members

Windsor, Ont., April 29—(CP)—Former Fire Chief Clarence J. DeFields, who retired recently after 47 years with the fire department, said last night some elected municipal representatives seek political advantage at the expense of appointed city employees.

"Some people serve 23 months of their 24 (a two-year term in office) and then find things are rotten in some departments," he said at a testimonial banquet in his honor. "What were they doing the other 23 months?"

Members of city council and Board of Control and city officials attended the banquet, in honor of Mr. DeFields and A. L. Moor, former parks manager, who resigned last month to enter private business. He was a city employee for 16 years.

Mr. Moor said it was not without emotion that he decided to leave the city's employ. But he had once been subjected to considerable criticism when he felt he was doing a good job for the city and he did not wish to subject himself to such further criticism.

Ask Inquiry Into Reports of Impotence Cases

London, April 29 (AP)—Britain's Chemical Workers' Union demanded today a "most thorough-going inquiry" into cases of sexual impotence reported among workers at a secret atomic research station operated by the government in Northern Ireland.

The Union also called for government investigation of what it termed "all kinds of baffling sicknesses which are today plaguing the lives of our members employed in plants using new solvents."

The demands were put forth in the Union's monthly magazine "The Chemical Worker" by Bob Edwards, acting general secretary.

A spokesman for the Health Ministry said investigations of reported atomic illness in Northern England already were under way. Inquiries started, he said, after the Union reported the sicknesses several weeks ago.

Edwards told reporters, however, that the investigations were "inadequate" unless a "more comprehensive inquiry" is begun, he said, the Union will be compelled to disclose publicly "some of the things we already know." He would not amplify the remark.

Bevin Requests British People To Have Patience

London, April 29 (AP)—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin returned today from the Foreign Ministers conference in Moscow and told newsmen that "I am not unduly pessimistic, neither am I optimistic" about international affairs.

"I ask the British people to have patience," he said. "We shall reconcile our differences."

Bevin returned to London by way of Berlin, where he conferred yesterday with British Control Commission officials and discussed the German problem."

Bevin said it remained to be seen whether the ministers' London meeting in November would be more successful than the Moscow meeting.

"When the time comes for a settlement to be resolved on Germany," he added, "the British Government will be very proud of their work" at Moscow.

Bevin Disappointed

The Foreign Secretary obviously was disappointed that Moscow had failed to produce an Austrian treaty, one of the few accomplishments that Britain actually had expected from the meeting, which the British Government has always regarded as largely of a preliminary nature.

"With regard to Germany, on behalf of the government I brought forward on March 31 a set of principles as the next stage in the recreation of Germany.

"I still think," he added, "that they were the most constructive, comprehensive and best statements put before the conference, and when the time comes for a settlement to be resolved the British government will be very proud of their work.

"I ask the British people to have patience as we have had to exhibit," he said. "We shall reconcile our differences.

"But in framing the peace we must remember that we are not working for a day, but for the generations to come."

Why Laird Had So Many Gophers

Saskatoon, April 29—(CP)—The reason why Laird municipality in central Saskatchewan used to have so many gophers never was in the top secret class but only now has it been revealed by Mayor E. St. George Hodson of Rosthern.

The 40-mile strip from Borden to Marcelin, on the west side of the North Saskatchewan River, was settled by Doukhobors who are vegetarians and whose religion bids them be kind to all animals. So, the gophers thrived until the prairie pests were too much for even the Doukhobors' tolerance.

They quickly solved the problem — by staging bring-then-back-alive drives, ferrying the captives across the river and setting them loose in Laird.

NO CONNECTION WITH CASE

Port Arthur, April 29 (CP)—A suspect picked up by Kapuskasing police during the weekend in connection with the slaying of Albert Riche, 22-year-old Geraldton taxi driver a week ago, is believed to have no connection with the case, acting inspector Tom Corsie of the Ontario Provincial Police said yesterday.

The body of the taxi driver was found lying off the side of the trans-Canada highway several miles east of Geraldton by a Department of Highways grader operator.

Search of the slayer continued today throughout Hearst, Cochrane and Haileybury districts into Quebec Province by both Provincial and local police officers.

Spring Seeding Delayed by Weeks

Toronto, April 29. (CP)—Spring seeding, delayed by weeks of cool weather, has started in some parts of Southern Ontario, the Ontario Department of Agriculture announced today in its weekly crop report.

Seed drills busy on high fields of light land in Brant, Perth, Haldimand, Middlesex, Northumberland, Lennox and Addington, Norfolk and Durham. Carleton County farmers expect that with good weather seeding may start next week but those in Glengarry on the east and Algoma in the north predicted it would be ten days at least before they could sow grain.

Practically everywhere, Fall wheat came through the Winter well but lack of warm sunshine has held back Spring growth. In several areas, notably in Lincoln, green grass in pasture lands has pushed up past the stubble. Young cattle roam Frontenac County pastures during the day. A seasonal feed grain shortage has developed in some sections.

WEDDINGS

RYAN—RASHOTTE

Rawdon. (Special) — Lovely Spring blooms adorned the altar of St. Carthagh's church in Tweed, on the morning of April 24, for the wedding of Vivian Teresa Rashotte, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Rashotte, of Tweed, and John Vincent Ryan, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Ryan, of the 4th Concession of Rawdon township.

Rev. Father Garvin performed the ceremony and celebrated the Nuptial Mass, with wedding music played by Sister E. Cinas and Mr. Jack Marchon as soloist.

The bride was charmingly gowned in a floor length model of white satin, featuring a sweetheart neckline, a row of deep frills across the bodice, long pointed sleeves and a bouffant skirt. Her floor length veil of embroidered Swiss net fell in graceful folds from a coronet of orange blossoms, and she carried an arm bouquet of Talisman roses.

Miss Barbara Ryan, sister of the groom, was the bride's only attendant, wearing a floor length gown of pale blue sheer, with tucked bodice and lace insertions. Her matching shoulder length veil was draped from a flower hat and she wore white mitts and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations.

Mr. Edward Rashotte, brother of the bride, assisted the groom and the ushers were Messrs. Martin Rivers and Edward Allore.

Following the ceremony a reception for more than sixty guests was held at Cournyea's Hotel, where the bride's mother received in a gown of turquoise blue crepe with a corsage of red roses. The groom's mother assisted wearing a cocoa brown tailored suit, with a corsage of pink and white carnations.

The bride's table was centred with a beautifully decorated wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold locket and chain; to the bridesmaid, a gold cross and chain, while the groomsman and ushers received leather billfolds.

For travelling to Detroit, Mich., the bride chose a tailored suit of Elizabeth blue, with grey accessories, and a matching topcoat.

Out-of-town guests were present from Norwood, Brockville, Belleville, Detroit and Stirling.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Ryan will reside in Tweed, Ont.

Prior to her marriage Mrs. Ryan was the recipient of many useful gifts at a "Kitchen Shower" in her honor, and was presented with a trilight lamp from the staff of the bank where she was employed.

WADDINGHAM—CONLIN

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the United Church parsonage, Selby, the Rev. W. R. Merrick officiating, when Mrs. Ella Conlin, Belleville, was united in marriage to Mr. Arthur Waddingham, of Marysville.

The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Roy Stapley, son-in-law and daughter of the groom.

Friends Honor Bridal Pair

On the evening of Friday, April twenty-fifth a large gathering of friends met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Emerson, 2nd. Thurlow.

The occasion was in honor of their younger daughter, Barbara, who was recently married to Roscoe Sine of Holloway.

During the evening the bridal pair were invited to the living room where they were presented with an address, read by Miss Lily Craig, also a large and varied assortment of gifts. The bride and groom after thanking all for the gifts invited their guests to visit them at their home.

At the conclusion of the refreshment hour the guests departed, wishing the bridal couple many years of happiness and prosperity.

Good Companions Group Entertains Guest Clubs

The Mr. and Mrs. Club of Bridge Street Church and the Energetic Club of Holloway Street Church were the guests of the Good Companions Club at the Y.M.C.A. last Friday evening.

In the reception hall, Rev. and Mrs. F. Harback and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Douglas welcomed the guests.

In the absence of the president, Mr. A. Mulvey, Mr. Morley Hancock welcomed the guests.

Mr. Hancock introduced Miss Nellie Lewis recreational leader of the United Church, who was the leader for the night.

Miss Lewis, accompanied by Mr. Alec Gordon, led in community singing, followed by a recreational period in the gymnasium of the "Y".

Refreshments were served at tables in the auditorium by the Good Companions Club.

A vote of thanks to Miss Lewis Mr. Gordon and the Good Companions was moved by Mr. G. Hatton of the Mr. and Mrs. Club, seconded by Mr. L. Buck of the Energetic Club.

Mr. Arnold Campbell, convener of the Young Adults Clubs of the Belleville Presbytery, brought greetings. He also invited the clubs present to give their support to the new Young People's Camp being built at Moira Lake.

Tweed

Rebekah Lodge Celebrates 25th Anniversary

Tweed (Special) — On Friday evening April 25th. Tweed Rebekah Lodge No. 236 celebrated their twenty-fifth anniversary when visitors were present from Madoc, Belleville Stirling and Thomasburg.

Degree Captain Sister Blanche Countryman and her degree team exemplified the mysteries of the Initiatory Degree on three candidates in a very capable manner.

One of the highlights of the evening was the official visit of "The Assembly President of the Grand Rebekah Lodge of Ontario" Mrs. Elizabeth Fletcher, of Guelph.

Sister Fletcher in her remarks complimented the officers and members of Tweed Lodge on the work they were doing in securing new members.

District Deputy Sister Mildred McCarey made this occasion for her official visit to the Lodge after visiting all other lodges in her district No. 3.

Veterans Jewels were presented to six charter members who have reached the twenty-fifth anniversary. Beautiful gifts were presented to Mrs. Fletcher and Mrs. McCarey. Refreshments were served and a very pleasant evening was brought to a close.

These three children of Robert Poitras, one of the 11 men trapped in the East Malartic mine, Quebec, have been told that "Daddy has gone far, far away" as they wait patiently for his return. They are, left to right, Laine, 19 months; Gisele, five months, and Lucile, 30 months. Wife of the entombed miner, who would have celebrated his 30th birthday this Wednesday, is reported near collapse.

Women's Activities

ALBURY W.I.

Albury — The monthly meeting of the Rednersville Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Earl Onderdonk on Thursday evening with an attendance of thirty-five.

Mrs. Earl Fox presented a report of the year's work, and the social conveyer, Mrs. Beuford Peck, thanked everyone who had helped her during the past seven years. Response to the roll call was very interesting with suggestions of "How May We Improve Our Institute?"

Election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Hugh Weese; First Vice President, Mrs. Allan Weese; Second Vice President, Mrs. Kenneth Green; Secretary, Mrs. Earl Fox.

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants, and appreciation was expressed to Mrs. Onderdonk for the use of her home.

MELROSE W.I.

The annual meeting of the Melrose W.I. was held on April 24, at the home of the President, Mrs. Grant McLaren, who conducted the opening exercises.

Burr's

Mrs. W. Huycke Awarded M.B.E.

Burr's — Local friends of Mrs. Wellington Huycke, (nee Mabel Jinks) of Strome, Alberta, (but formerly of Crofton) have been thrilled to hear recent news telling of the M.B.E. having been awarded to her. Mrs. Huycke is well known in this district, as prior to her marriage and before making her home in Alberta, she was a teacher of worth here, and held in high regard by all who came under her tuition.

During her thirty-seven years as a resident of Alberta she has taken an active part as an organizer and in promoting improved farming conditions there, where for several years she served as president of a Poultry Association. Mrs. Huycke has also been prominent as a worker and organizer of Women's Institutes; and on several occasions has been sent as a delegate to represent her province in Ottawa and other parts of Ontario, in Nova Scotia, Saskatchewan and throughout Alberta.

It is in recognition of these services that she has been thus signally honored.

Her many friends and former associates of Prince Edward County, extend congratulations and best wishes.

Burr's

Burr's — Mr. Eric Waite and family who have been residents on the Elgazer Williams farm, 4th Ameliasburg during the past year, moved to the farm of Mr. Harold Bonter, 1st concession Ameliasburg, on Monday.

Mr. P. Palmer and family of Stirling Road, moved to the farm of Mr. Wellington Howell, Centre, on Thursday.

Work on the land got under way during the past week with some early sowing being completed. A warm rain is needed following which growth would be rapid. A pair of wild ducks have made their appearance on the pond near the house.

Several from this locality attended the services at Belleville and Picton United Churches where the Moderator, Rt. Rev. T. W. Jones, D.D., was guest preacher.

Mrs. Kenneth Wood recently entertained at a birthday dinner for her husband when Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Werden, Mr. Robert Werden, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Burr and Mr. Ronald Burr were their guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Morley Moran entertained a weekend guest from Atlin, B.C.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Osterhout were weekend guests in Toronto, Mrs. A. Adams returning to her home in Ameliasburg with them following several weeks' sojourn at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Gordon Wise and Mr. Wise.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Burr called on Mr. and Mrs. Jack Parrett Sunday afternoon. Mrs. E. Anderson, Mrs. P. Vandewater and Mrs. W. Osborne were supper hour guests at the same home.

Mr. and Mrs. Norris Gibson, Miss Merle Gibson were recent Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Robinson, Massassaga.

Mr. and Mrs. Ewart Harns, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Harns were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Blake Harns, Belleville.

T. C. A. Increased Services, Routes but Suffered Deficit Of $1,115,256 in Past Year

Ottawa, April 29 —(CP)— Gearing itself for increased peacetime services, Trans-Canada Air Lines in 1946 increased its routes and services, enlarged and improved its fleet and suffered a deficit of $1,115,256, it was shown in the annual report tabled in the Commons by Reconstruction Minister Howe.

The report, presented by H. J. Symington, T.C.A. president, said the air lines are "now more than ever in the process of intensive development common to all growing transport enterprises."

Daily scheduled miles increased 39 per cent during the year to 45,021, while route miles increased from 5,299 to 6,511, not including the new Trans-Atlantic route. Total miles flown during 1946 were 15,864,670, compared with 11,546,227.

The service carried an unprecedented number of passengers during the year, but mail, which produces about 30 per cent of the company's revenue, fell off 32 per cent, and air express poundage increased by 10 per cent.

Total passengers carried were 305,442, an increase of 122,321 or 67 per cent, with air mail 1,103,255 pounds and air express 1,043,713 pounds.

At the end of the year, T.C.A. had 27 Douglas DC-3 aircraft, with three more on order, 14 Lockheed Lodestars and nine Lockheed 14-08 aircraft.

Plays Important Part.

"Through a continuous participation in the councils of the world air authorities," the report added, "the company played an important part in the standardization and nationalization of international air practices. The interdependence of world air transport was seen in T.C.A.'s growing service to other lines.

At Goose Bay, Labrador, T.C.A. agreed to organize and operate in 1947 an international hotel for the use of all trans-Atlantic travellers.

The trans-Atlantic service was increased from twice weekly to a daily round-flight in each direction, and the route was extended to London.

"By the end of the year, the Canadian Atlantic service had come to rank in performance with any of the other international air lines," said the report. "Almose 600 crossings were made without incident in 1946 and there were no scheduled flights cancelled."

The report quoted operating revenues at $12,810,805, a 22 per cent increase over 1945. Passenger revenues increased $2,602,537 or 48 per cent, mail revenues dropped by $470,420 or 11 per cent, express revenues decreased $2,148 or one per cent, and revenue from sales and service increased $77,841 or 26 per cent, other revenue increased $90,417.

Spicy Chatter Club Meets

teen members of the Spicy Chatter Club attended the Cereal Shelf-Achievement Day Exercises in Stirling Community Hall on Saturday, joining with eleven other Girls' Clubs in this program. Miss Elsie Irvine, Home Economist for the district presided and was assisted by Miss Florence P. Eadie of the Women's Institute Branch, Department of Agriculture. Record books and two Graham muffins were on exhibit from each club member. Five clubs exhibited the Cereal Shelf. Seven clubs put on a skit on the theme "Around the clock with cereals". That by the Spicy Chatter Club was composed of Verna Black and Virginia Robertson, assisted by Mrs. J. Black. In the program planning for 1947-48 the choice went to "Cottons may be smart and summer clothes for girls."

Three members of the Club, namely Verna and Audrey Black and Patricia Lynch were presented by Miss Irvine with certificates from the Home Economics Department for finished projects. Accompanying the girls were the three Club leaders, Mesdames E. C. Prentice, M. Kouri and W. Chrysler.

Lumber Shortage Threatens Housing Program in Britain

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 28 — (CP) — Another supply crisis is blowing up in Britain — a shortage of timber which threatens to put a crimp in the all-important housing program and make more difficult the rehabilitation of industry.

"The situation is the blacket in our experience," said a lumber merchant after the Board of Trade had issued figures showing that stocks of softwood at the end of January amount to 173,000 standards (560,520,000 board feet).

Earlier the Board of Trade Journal referred to the "dangerously low" stocks of 214,000 standards held at Dec. 31, 1946, and said that "experience gained during the war suggested that a breakdown of distribution might follow in the late Spring if stocks at Dec. 31 fell much below 500,000-550,000 standards."

Few Houses Built

Only 399 houses were completed in February, compared with the monthly average of 1,360 which has prevailed since last August. The drop was blamed on bad weather, but now mild days have returned builders are hard put to lay their hands on lumber.

Further restrictions are in view, with the government preparing an order forbidding the use of lumber on certain jobs, and setting limitations on the sizes in which it may be cut on others.

Since every other trade and in-
Sinve every other trade and industry which requires wood must draw it from the national stockpile, the government has also worked out a system of allocations giving priority to coal mining, the gas and electricity industries, coal-to-oil conversion and construction and repair of transport industries.

Look Far Afield

In addition, efforts are being made to increase imports, and Britain is showing an active interest as far afield as Chile, where the government has decided to exploit 15,000,000 acres of forest. Production from that source is far off, however, and the Board of Trade admits:

"It is now certain that no relief may be expected in the first half of 1947, and — in the absence of favorable developments—unlikely that the turn of the year will show a marked improvement in the general supply."

Canada Main Source

Home production is almost negligible, and Canada is looked to once more as the source of about 50 per cent of imported supplies in 1947.

War production absorbed virtually all the timber available in 1939-45 and it's estimated the wood used for packing ammunition and crating military stores would have been enough to provide timber for 1,500,000 houses.

Hardwood stocks are in almost as serious a plight as softwood, and further restrictions are expected in furniture production.

Trout Season Opens Thursday

Toronto, April 29 (CP)—Singing reels and appetizing creels should accompany the opening next Thursday, May 1, of the trout season in Ontario this year. Officials of the Fish and Wild-Life Division of the Department of Lands and Forests predict the busiest season in some time. And they used "busiest" in the same sense as it applied to big-city-rush-hour-traffic.

"There's trout aplenty, they say and anglers "aplenty more." "We get more inquiries of where to go for good trout fishing than for any other information;; and the cals have been more numerous this year than I can ever remember," said one official.

Streams and lakes in the far north are still bogged down with ice and snow. But the brooks in the Sault Ste. Marie and Algoma bushland districts are figuratively "trout-bound." That is also the situation on Manitoulin Island and Grey, Bruce and Huron counties.

Last year 3,000,000 speckled trout yearlings were planted in Ontario streams. These and the countless number of "naturals" ranging from seven inches (minimum size) to 14 inches (the tell-about size) are right now quivering under shaded banks awaiting their spring delicacy, the dew-worm.

Ammonium Nitrate To Be Treated As Explosive

Galveston, Tex., April 28. (AP) —A coast guard official said today that he has stationed men at Galveston docks to supervise loading of ammonium nitrate "and to see that it is treated as an explosive". The announcement came from Cmdr. H. F. Cobb, officer in charge of marine inspection at Galveston as a United States Coast Guard Board went into its eighth day of session here to determine the cause of explosions of ammonium nitrate laden ships in the Texas City disaster.

Truman Requests United Effort To Bring Prices Down

New York, April 21 (AP) — President Truman, cautioning that the economic situation in the United States is "acute", appealed today for a united effort to bring prices down and prevent a depression.

Addressing the annual luncheon of members of the Associated Press, the chief executive said there must be:

1. "Moderation on the part of business."
2. "Forbearance on the part of labor," plus greater productivity.
3. "All-out effort on the part of the farmer."
4. "Wise guidance and action on the part of the government." Here he reiterated his plea against cutting taxes now and called for extension of rent, export and credit controls.

The address was the highlight of Newspaper Concention Week here.

Truman tied in his proposals for bolstering the economy at home with his program of helping free peoples abroad maintain their freedom.

Comparing conditions now with those of 1929, the peak pre-war year of economic activity, he listed:

A 71 per cent rise in physical volume, distinct from dollar value, of industrial output; a 32 per cent increase in agricultural production;

10,000,000 more employed;

The national income at a rate of $176,000,000,000 as against $83,000,000,000;

Buying Power Rises.

And average income, after taxes, up from $654 to $1,090. Converting the 1929 income average into terms of the 1947 dollar, Mr. Truman said the gain in actual buying power still shows a rise from $825 to $1,090.

"But," the president went on, "I must say in all frankness that the economic skies are not entirely clear. One cloud is shadowing our economic future.

"That cloud is the sharp and rapid rise in prices.

"Some day this cloud is certain to burst. They are sure of a recession or a depression. I believe that we as a nation can prevent this economic cloudburst. But it requires prompt, preventive steps."

Recalling his efforts last year to have Congress extend price control, the President said private enterprise now has the responsibility for prices because:

"A group saw fit to sabotage price control and represented to the public that prices would come down in a free market.

"This has not taken place."

Odds 100-1 Against Devastating Air Assault on N. American Continent Within Next 10 Years

By DOUGLAS HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 29 (CP)—After consulting various factors with unemotional logic of the military analyst, one of the higher officers involved in Canada's defence planning estimated today that the odds were 100-1 against and devastating air assault on high priority targets on the North American Continent within the next 10 years.

Setting out his own personal conclusions, Col. W. W. Goforth, retiring Deputy Director of Defence Research, said he felt that odds against a major war would start at 200-1 against in 1947, decline steadily until 1961-62 and would give away to "a steady lessening of tension and risk after 1962."

Col. Goforth is returning to private business in Toronto after being the right hand man of Dr. O.M. Salandt Director-General of Department of Research who sanctioned his statements.

Col. Goforth noted that, entirely aside from the threats of the atomic bomb, "it is conservative to assume that Toronto, for instance, could be as easily attacked by conventional air weapons any time after 1957 as Warsaw was by the Luftwaffe in 1939 and as Rotterdam was in 1940."

With the latest type of high explosive bombs as much damage could be done to a major Canadian city by some 200 enemy heavy bombers, fully loaded, as by a single atomic bomb.

But it would require probably not less than 500 giant bombers to achieve the same casualty result as could be expected with a single atom bomb.

Atom Bomb Looms Largest

Col. Gorforth saw "a sudden, unprovoked and devastating attack from the air" as "the real threat—if one may be said to exist at all—to the lives, property and peace of all civilized peoples for the next few decades at least." Because the atom bomb was "one of the cheapest to use—even though the most expensive to produce—it looms largest on the horizon of danger."

"Moreover the all important element of surprise could be achieved through a series of synchronized sneak raids by single planes with atomic bombs over a selection of priority targets, whereas the assembly and flights of great fleets of bombers would certainly be detected."

Attack Not Imminent

He hastened to say that he did "not mean that air attack on the North American continent is imminent or that it is the only possibility of danger that we may have to face in the next decade ....in my personal view any such devastating attack against high priority targets on this continent during the next 10 years could be reasonably assessed at odds of at least 100-1 against."

On the technical grounds alone, there was "no risk whatsoever of, say, Toronto being attacked during the next three years by any of the modern weapons of war or by a fleet of enemy bombers in an equivalent raid by high explosive, fire or toxic agents." Further the risk would be "exceedingly small at least until 1955."

Col. Goforth, using his betting odds as a likely way to put across a point clearly, said he felt:—

Progressive Recovery

1. The odds against a first class war occurring or prevailing in any one year start at 200-1 against in 1947 and tend to decline steadily thereafter until 1961-62.

This assumed a progressive recovery of the world from the devastation and dislocation of the recent war and also a steady advance in science and technology both here and in other great nations.

These declinig odds against war could be checked and reversed at any time if really effective great power unity was achieved, if the international trade discussions at Geneva were sufficiently successful to warrant a belief in steadily expanding world commerce, if the international bank and monetary fund realized all or most of the high hopes invested in them, and "if we find and apply some formula for industrial peace which achieves mutual incentives, reasonable social equity and, above all, productivity." He added: "Since these 'ifs' together imply our attainment of a substantial measure of utopia in the next 10-15 years, we should be very cautious indeed in accepting them as firm elements in our equation."

Lessening of Tension

2. There would be a steady lessening of tension and risk after 1962, based on the predictions of leading scientists that nuclear energy may, by that time, begin to exercise a far-reaching and beneficient influence on the whole cost-output ratio of world production and transportations.

3. However, if a first class war did occur, or prevail in any given year, the technical probability of a major air and atomic attack being directed at Toronto or Montreal by a hostile power had a nil risk in the years 1947, 48 and 49.

"Our assumptions are that no great power, other than the United States, will have atomic weapons ready to use until after that time; or if they have such weapons, they will be too few for these cities to be included in the priority target group. Moreover, it assumes that the range and bomb loads of aeroplanes, other [illegible] the United States, will not be such as to warrant large scale H.E., fire or toxic raids which would give results comparable to atomic weapons."

Col. Goforth said any cities of more than 50,000 population were potential atomic targets under current technical prospects. among other logical Canadian targets were the Chippewa power plant of Ontario hydro, the International Nickle Mine and smelter at Copper Cliff, Ont., and the Sault canals in the Great Lakes.

Collie Walks 10 Miles To Find Owners Gone

Clones, Northern Ireland, April 28—(CP)—The old home at Scotshouse, Clones, is empty now, its former occupants in Canada, but a faithful collie dog walked 60 miles to find that out. Left in Belfast when his owner, Mrs. D. Agnew, moved to Canada, destination unknown here, the dog vanished and was found later howling at the door of Scotshouse.

The Day in Parliament

(By The Canadian Press)

Today:

The Commons will hear the budget delivered by Finance Minister Abbott about 8 p.m. E.D.T.

Monday:

The Commons heard Prime Minister Mackenzie King welcomed back to parliament after a three-week Virginia holiday; heard Health Minister Martin introduce a resolution to a bill to increase Old Age Pensions; heard George McIlraith, Parliamentary Assistant to Reconstruction Minister Howe, say Federal and Municipal authorities are working on a program for emergency shelter in British Columbia; heard Thomas Reid (L—New Westminster) charge a black market was taking Canadian nails across the border; heard some opposition members try unsuccessfully to obtain a statement of government policy on immigration of displaced persons.

The Senate did not sit.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Who was that good bridge partner I saw you playing with last night? He was no good bridge partner. He was an expert who used super-scientific bids that were way over my head.

Even the greatest bridge expert in the world could be a poor partner. He could use the most brilliant bids. But if the meanings of such bids were confusing to partner, they would be bad.

Come again to this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH	NORTH
♠K 9 5	♠A
♥None	♥Q J 7 5 3
♦A Q 6 5 3	♦K 9 7
♣A 7 5 4 3	♣K J 10 6

Bids in this pair went like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 D	1 H
2 C	4 C
4 NT	5 S
6 C	Pass

The north four club jump assist reveals five of the six tricks in that hand. With his own seven, south sees 12 tricks in their pair. How big a slam depends on how many aces and kings they have.

The south four no-trump bid is the ace-and-king teller-asker. It is an arbitrary convention signal used by many bridge players.

The five spade reply thereto is Kibitzer convention signal for showing only one ace and two kings. Some players use other convention signal replies.

With a grand slam thus known to be uncertain, south is content to stop at a small slam in the agreed suit. The signal comes in handy.

Should you employ this or any other ace-shower with partners who do not know it? Of course not. You learn it only for use with any partners who know its meaning and responses.

What if partner knew not the convention? South should ignore four no-trump, hop to six clubs, and hope for the best.

Give partner the dope with which he can cope.

FRENCH DELEGATES RETURN

Paris, April 29 — (Reuters) — Foreign Minister Bidault and members of the French delegation to the Moscow conference arrived back to Paris today on the minister's special train.

Bidault told reporters: "We have done our best, and we have worked hard. The hope and the will to succeed remain. But we must work fast."

The Movie Column

By RON GADSBY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 29 —(CP)— No matter what you may have thought about early efforts of English film producers, there is no denying the battle waged for perfection by top-ranking cinematic companies is paying off with a multiplicity of dividends. That they have advanced so far during a period when, to say the least, there was nothing conducive to making movies, is another tribute to the old bull-dog spirit.

Not only have they pressed onward under the fetters of short-supply, bombed studios and rationing; they have turned a neat hand to making documentaries that are on a par with anything Hollywood ever did.

As a fair example, we hope you caught what we think is one of the most impartial, honest and completely fair pieces of documentation to flit over any screen. Entitled "Palestine," it was produced by Rank Studios, and gives a complete picture of the contentious problem of the Middle East hot-bed.

With some historic flash-backs to the Palestine scene after the First World War down through the troubled years prior to the last international upheaval, it showed objectively, the path Britain plotted.

Included in the film was the hitherto unreleased pictures showing the love of the Grand Mufti and of his consorting with Hitler in Germany.

"Palestine," as you might expect, was treated with British calm and moves unhurried to its conclusion. The camera work was excellent, the story neatly shaped and scissored. Hollywood, notoriously quick on the up-take, will blink at "Palestine" because of its excellence.

BRIGHTON and MURRAY DISTRICT

Brighton and Murray Dist.—Congratulations to Mr. Geo. Bullis for having attained his ninetieth birthday on April 22nd. A number of his friends and neighbors met at his home that evening and spent a social time with him and his daughter-in-law Mrs. J.F. Bullis. His daughter Mrs. Chas. Ireland of Mona Road was home for the occasion

The Mt. Carmel W.A. met at the home Mrs. Harold Alexander on April 22nd. There were nine members present. It was inconvenient for some to attend owing to the canal bridge being out.

Mrs. Kilpatrick, Kingston, spent few days with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Seward, Mr. Ken. Seward and children.

Mr. F. K. Denyes attended the W.M.S. convention at Port Hope recently.

The York Road Women's Institute were entertained at the home of Mrs. F. K. Denyes on Friday afternoon. It was election of officers. Mrs. F. George was elected president for the coming year. A vote of appreciation was tendered Mrs. Denyes for her skillful leadership during the years she has been president.

Mrs. H. Henderson is still in Belleville Hospital, having had a third operation.

Get two ounces of peroxine powder from your druggist. Sprinkle on a hot, wet cloth and apply to the face gently. Every blackhead will be dissolved. The one safe, sure and simple way to remove blackheads.

Sandy O'Donnell Meets Mike Sharpe Here Fri.

One of the most case-hardened heavyweights in wrestling history "Black-Jack" Sandy O'Donnell of Missouri will come in to wrestle in the Memorial Arena next Friday night. O'Donnell meets Mike "The Body" Sharpe in the main bout and the fans are thereby guaranteed a rousing evening of all that makes wrestling matches exciting for the faithful.

O'Donnell got his nickname out of a bout several years ago in which he ruthlessly used a small black-jack on an opponent. Since his suspension over that rugged incident Sandy has been careful not to resort to such a method of winning a bout but there is no telling just when such an impulse will occur to him again.

However in Mike Sharpe, O'Donnell is meeting the cream of the crop of young heavyweights who have come up since the war. Big Mike, (he stands over six feet six inches) and his brother Ben who wrestled here last week, are two outstanding prospects in wrestling circles. Mike in particular seems destined for very close to the top in the near future. Last Friday Mike Sharpe wrestled the semi-final in St. Louis where he beat Jo La Paski in remarkably quick time. On that same card Whipper Billy Watson lost his world championship against Lou Thesz a native St. Louis heavy. Phil Lawson is carrying his protest over the hometown refereeing to Col. Harry J. Landry the president of the National Wrestling Association. Whipper was, according to reliable newspapermen, pinned while both legs were over the ropes. Lawson says it is unthinkable that any decent governing association would let such a decision stand.

On Friday's semi-final Tear Morgan hooks up with Fighting Dick Bishop and Bulldog Drummond meets Jim Bennett. Matches start at 8:45 p.m.

Stage and Radio Stars to Feature Kinsmen Broadcast

A galaxy of well over thirty Belleville and district stage and radio stars will feature the Kinsmen Radio broadcast scheduled for Sunday evening, May 4th., at the McCarthy Theatre in aid of the new community swimming pool fund.

Vocal and instrumental artists heard many times on Belleville stage, will be heard while in addition there will be comedy and novelty numbers to add variety to the entertainment. Gregory Clarke, feature writer with the Montreal Standard and formerly with the Toronto Star, and Barry Woods, well known radio personality, will share duties as masters of ceremony for the program.

Entire proceeds for the program will go into the fund for the community swimming pool, the construction of which will be a joint project for all service clubs in the city. The show will be broadcast over CJBQ for two hours commencing at 8.30 Sunday evening.

Following are the artists who are expected to appear on the program:

Rhythm Ranch Riders, orchestra; Hamie McDonald, piano; Barbara Diment, dancer; Sharon and Robert Lucy (singers); Frank Hockaday, Trenton, ventriloquist; Stan Hagerman, piano; Barbara Joan Houston, singer; Quinte Quartet, Trenton, singers; Lenna Alexander, Brighton, piano; Commodores, orchestra; Ed. Fraser, singer Jimmie Bankier, singer; Alec Gordon, piano; Bill Navin, organ; Ronald Kimy, singer; Jim Doucett, clarinet; Dr. Locke, violin; Boys' Choir, (Ed Shortt); Barbara Forham, classical: piano; Carolyn Forhan, singer; Kenneth Ryan, tenor; Rosemarie Hamilton, singer; Weston girls, twin pianos; Percy Marcus, Elsbeth Wishart, duet; Mary Dooley, piano; Doug Whalen, comedy; Bill Reynolds, Stirling, baritone; Art Woods, Batawa, harmonica; Sherwood Reid, Batawa, piano and harmonica; Art Duncan, Batawa, comedy.

AT THE BELLE

"The Time, The Place And The Girl"

Warner Bros' lavish Technicolor musical production, "The Time, The Place And The Girl" closes a highly successful engagement tonight at the Belle Theatre, features a cast of favorite stars, Dennis Morgan, Jack Carson, Janis Paige and Martha Vickers, with S.Z. (Cuddles) Saskall, Alan Hale, Angela Greene, Donald Wood, and Carmen Cavallaro, poet of the keyboard and his orchestra.

Arthur Schwartz's and Leo Robin's melodic tunes, all of which are rapidly becoming national favorites, are sung by Morgan, Carson, Martha Vickers and Janis Paige. They are also rendered by Carmen Cavallaro, and danced to by Chandra Kaly and his unusual troupe of dancers and the popular tap dancers, The Condos Brothers. All of the musical numbers are created and staged by LeRoy Prinz. The film was directed by David Butler.

The Belle Film Highlights of World News, and a Technicolor Fun Cartoon, "Gopher Goofies," precede the feature attraction.

AT THE CAPITOL — Hollywood's latest love team is Barry Sullivan and Dorothy Lamour currently appearing in Paramount's "Rainbow Island," at the Capitol Theatre. Dottie co-stars with that zany pair of comedians, Eddie Bracken and Gil Lamb. On the same program "The Face of Marble," a first run hit, stars John Carradine.

Little Benny's Note Book

The Sudden Suds program was just over on the radio last night, finishing with the Sudden Suds songs like it always does, being, "Sudden Suds, Sudden Suds, So fluffy puffy pure, There's nothing quite like Sudden Suds, Your washing ills to cure."

Yee gods, those singing commercials are putting us all back into kindergarden, pop said, and ma said, Why William, I think they're cute.

If they're cute, then so's a tooth ake, pop said. Would you injoy heering a singing commercial about a tooth ake? he said.

Well hardly, ma said, and pop said, Then I'll sing you one.

Wich he did, being, "Dainty little tooth ake, Stabbing in the nite, Feed it ice and sugar, And it'll treet you rite."

Now dont get started on a lot of meeningless nonsense for land sakes, ma said. And please dont overlook the fact that you've got 2 ask trays within easy reach, she said.

Meening to be careful with his cigar ashes, and pop said, That's cute too, I'll sing you a commercial about it.

Which he did, being, "Ashes on the table, Ashes on the chair, I'll put some on the carpit too, I think it's only fair."

Now William I can make up silly songs too, and beleeve me mine have a point to them, ma said.

And she proved it by singing one herself, being, "Another silly song from you, I swear it up and down, You'll take me to a movie show, All the way down town."

You win, my dear, you're the cutest of all, pop said.

Which she is, and pop took her to a movie without even singing another commercial, but not all the ways down town.

ASSUMPTION BACK IN RUNNING IN CAGE SERIES

Score 69-60 Win in Fourth Game for the Dominion Championship

Vancouver, April 29 —(CP)— They threw the form chart away today as Windsor Assumption College and Vancouver Meralomas prepared for tonight's fifth and deciding Canadian Senior Basketball final tilt. The last of the form players went away talking to themselves last night after Assumption's Purple Raiders tied up the series for the second time with a neat 69-60 win.

The rest of the series went the same way. Vancouver were installed as probable favorites after their 74-49 victory in the first game of the best-of-five series. They promptly blew a 51-47 decision in the second game last Friday as Raiders' defences tightened. Lomas came back Saturday night to whip the visitors 63-52 and were heavily favored to take the title last night.

Unworried by the odds, the Raiders ran up a 22-8 lead in the first quarted of last night's tilt, withstood a withering Vancouver drive that sliced their margin to five points at half time and sewed up the game with their margin to five points at half-time and sewed up the game with a third-quarter burst that left them free to coast home in the final.

Erratic shooting and absence of veteran Jack Pomfret,—out of town — hurt Vancouver's chances but it was Big Bill Coulthard who decided the issue as he potted 11 baskets and a foul shot to lead Assumption to victory.

ON NEW CAREER

Orange, N. J., April 29 (AP)— Two-ton Tony Galento leered from behind the bar of his tavern, scraped the suds off a tall one, and muttered in characteristic fashion: "I'll molder da bum."

Then he broke into a grin.

"Those 'Bum' days are over," said 275-pound Tony, who embarks on a new career tonight when he tackles his first wrestling opponent, Dutch Rhode, in Baltimore. "I'm in this new racket to make a business out of it, not to clown."

HOW TO CUT REPAIR BILLS ON FARM EQUIPMENT

It's always easier and less expensive to keep farm machinery in good condition, than to rebuild it after it has been neglected.

Here are a few hints, worth dollars to any farmer.

1. Make a thorough check of each machine at least twice a year.
2. When you find a worn or broken part, phone us immediately. Parts are still scarce.
3. Don't take a machine into the field until you know it is in tip top condition.
4. Let us check your tractor now for compression, adjustment and general efficiency.
5. House machinery when it is not in use.

We are equipped to do any repair job from simple welding to major overhaul and rebuilding. Our modern equipment and expert mechanics assure first class service. The spring work season is almost here. Better phone us right away.

FOUR OFFICIALS ONLY MAKING COURTESY CALL

Members of International Ice Hockey Association Will Attend C.A.H.A. Meeting

By JOHN D. HAMILTON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, April 29. (CP)— Bland as a May breeze, four top International hockey officials said here last night that their visit this week at the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's annual meeting in Quebec will be only a "courtesy call".

"We have nothing on our minds —and no particular business to discuss in Quebec," said Jack Ahearne, secretary of the British Ice Hockey Association and International secretary of the Ligue Internationale de Hockey Sur Glace.

Dr. Fritz Kraatz of Zurich, Switzerland, president of the L.I.H.G., said he was interested in locating a few Canadian coaches to pilot European clubs next year.

The other two officials are Walter Brown, vice-president of the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States and North American secretary of L.I.H.G., and Tom Lockhart, president of the A.H.A.

All four neatly sidestepped questions on recent international hockey squabbles which resulted in a reorganization of the L.I.H.G. at its annual meeting last February in Prague. At that meeting, the A.H.A. of the United States won the right to become sole United States representative on the L.I.H.G.—supreme governing body of world amateur hockey. After a bitter struggle in which Canada supported the A.H.A., the United States Amateur Athletic Union was dropped as hockey representative on the L.I.H.G.

(The A.A.U. claimed after the meeting that it had been "railroaded" out of the L.I.H.G.)

No Settlement

Ahearne indicated that there had been no settlement of the dispute between his B.I.H.A. and the Scottish Ice Hockey Association.

"The British Ice Hockey Association represents all of Britain," he said. "I presume Scotland can be called part of Britain."

The Scottish body in 1941 joined the newly-formed International Ice Hockey Association, a North American body set up as a rival to the L.I.H.G. and presided over by Dr. Hardy. The C.A.H.A. and the A.H.A. were the other prominent members of the I.I.H.A.

When the L.I.H.G. was reorganized in Prague, the I.I.H.A. was dissolved and Dr. Hardy and the A.H.A. entered the older body. The C.A.H.A., which had never allowed its membership with the L.I.H.G. to lapse dropped its affiliation with the I.I.H.A.

With the reorganization, the Scottish Association—which like the British group employs many Canadian players—found itself an "orphan" and Ahearne said last night that no arrangements between it and the British Association, or with the L.I.H.G., had been made.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

Final wrinkles in the Belleville Baseball Association will likely be ironed out tonight when the new executive goes in conclave at Memorial Arena. Curtain rises at 7:30 and all actors in the cast are urged to be present for the dress rehearsal. It is quite likely that something of a definite nature regarding the number of teams which will cavort in the league this year will be aired although the deadline for entries was set for May 3.

• • •

Mancuso had to spend 23 years in O.B., and had to become a manager, before seeing a catcher retire a batter at first base, but it finally happened as Tulsa was defeating Oklahoma City, 6-4 on April 21.

• • •

Rookie Oiler Catcher Dick Aylward accomplished the feat against Len Gilmore, Indians' hurler. Gilmore sent a slow bounder past Pitcher Tom Warren and as Second Baseman Jim Shilling and First Sacker Jack Richards came in to cover the play, first base was left unprotected.

• • •

Aylward, however, was making his usual trip down the base path to back up the threw and sprinted ahead of Gilmore to take Richards' threw.

• • •

• • •

Speaking of Oklahoma City, big Ralph McCabe of this city, is reportedly going great guns for the Indians' squad of the Texas League in that town. The Indians, last year's cellar-dwellers, have been on a victory rampage during the past three weeks and right now are nestled in second slot. McCabe has won his last two starts and is rated as one of the team's outstanding hurlers.

• • •

Montreal Royals were a happy, grinning bunch as they set sail for Montreal and the Forum with the first game of the Allan Cup finals safely tucked away. Observers at the Saturday night tilt in which the youthful Canucks ripped the Stampeders apart to the tune of 7-3, were much impressed with the speed and ice wizardry of the second edition of Les Canadiens. The Calgarians will face the Montreal home town crowd tonight in the second game and again on Thursday. The squads play back in Toronto on Saturday gloaming.

• • •

The Stewart-Warner-Alemite diamond has been undergoing an extensive face-lifting operation during the past few days and according to Mr. Arthur Young, will be ready for practice or games either tomorrow or Thursday. Several large stones which appeared after the snow disappeared have been removed. The infield has been rolled and raked and scraped and the pitching mound raised to the proper elevation.

• • •

The outfield has been rolled and put into shape and will be ready for the outer gardeners to gambol on in the immediate future. The entire field is as "hard as nails" and will be in excellent shape by the time the umps shrill "Play Ball."

• • •

Incidentally, Mr. Young told this desk today that the field and its facilities will be available to anyone who wants to use it for practice or games. Organized teams may secure the grounds by merely applying to Mr. Young. "I want to see the young men of this city enjoy sport, and anything we can do to further it will be done willingly. If the softball league want to use it, it is there. The same goes for baseball. The grounds were built to be used, and that is what we want."

• • •

This city can do with a few more community - minded men like Mr. Young, who has not spared time nor expense for furnishing city baseball and softball teams with playing ground facilities. A lot of man hours and labor has been put on the grounds this year already, and all in the interests of the community.

• • •

Tommy Carruthers, who slaps a mean golf ball around the links, is also a kegler of the first grade if his performance the other night can be judged a criterion. It appears the local Junior Board of Trade who were hosts to their compadres of the district at a weekend regional session, threw a bowling party for the visiting firemen and Tommy grabbed nearly all the victory thunder.

• • •

• • •

Not only did the local golf star captain the winning squad of the eight-team bowling tournament the Belleville "Jay Cees" arranged for their pals, but he grabbed off the prize for high single, 295 and high 2-string 518. C. Crosbie and J. Wells were given consolation prizes for low scores which were kept a deep, dark secret. The boys held forth at the Bowl-O-Drome where it is reported a good time was bowled by all.

• • •

Dr. George Faulkner, of this city, has been appointed the new chairman of the Physical Department Committee of the Y.M.C.A. and was inducted over the weekend. He will assume his new duties immediately. The amiable "doc" brings plenty of experience to the new post and the athletic functions of the "Y" should do well under his guidance.

• • •

Another new member of the "Y" Board is Larry Buck who has taken over the chairmanship of the Boys Work Division. Larry is a former basketball, hockey and volleyball star and represented Canada in the last British Empire games in the running high jump. He is a former superintendent of the Holloway Street United Church Sunday School; a member of the Y's Men's Club and the mentor of the Phalanx Society.

Scotland Bids For Tourists To Attend Festival

Edinburgh, April 28 — (CP) — In its first big bid for a share of the post-war tourist trade, Scotland is inviting visitors to Edinburgh for an international festival of music and drama Aug. 24 to Sept. 13, which will run simultaneously with a Scottish national exhibition.

Orchestras to be heard include the Vienna Philharmonic, the Halle Orchestra and the Liverpool Philharmonic. The Sadler's Wells Ballet will present a two weeks' session and the old Vic Theatre Company will share the Royal Lyceum Theatre with Louis Jouvet's company from Paris.

Sports Roundup

By AL COLLETTI
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, April 29 —(CP)— There was only one Ruth and they threw away the mold when he was made . . . This toast from Arthur (N. Y. Times) Daley couldn't have been more fitting than to come on "Babe Ruth Day" when thousands of baseball fans in big and little ball parks throughout the continent took time out to pay tribute to the greatest home run hitter of them all . . . Now he is only a shadow of the Ruth that clouted 60 home runs in a season, or gulped down a dozen hot dogs and consumed a gallon of soda pop at one sitting, or stayed out all night and showed up at the ball park still able to hit a game-winning homer in the ninth inning . . .

But as he faced 58,000-odd at Yankee Stadium Sunday he was a better Ruth than the old impetuous one . . . Worn and broken-voiced he was a knight in armor to the millions of youngsters who grew up with him and a shining light strong enough to brighten the eyes of the thousands of kids who still adore him . . . Ruth never forgot he once was a penniless orphan boy . . . Perhaps that's why his love of the underprivileged and his frequent unannounced trips to hospitals to restore the will-to-live to bedridden lads stamped him as the greatest figure baseball ever produced.

Ruth on Williams.

The Babe believes that if he was playing baseball today he could better his all-time home run record and "beat it good" . . . "I haven't seen more than three games this season," he said, "but I know the game has slowed because the kid's aren't starting young enough . . . You can't wait until a kid is 15—you've got to start him at five or six" . . . When a lad is 15 his muscles are already developed and he might learn "fear." That's death to a young player's chances. At six a boy isn't old enough to know its meaning . . . Ruth pointed out that Ted Williams, the Boston Red Sox great hitter, doesn't know the meaning of "fear," is young and strong and fully capable of "breaking my home run record and should do it before he's through."

NHL STARS TAKING EXHIBITION TOUR QUITE SERIOUSLY

Have Played to 25,000 Customers and Are Strictly Obeying Training Rules

By JIM KEARNEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Edmonton, April 29 (CP)— If the presence of more than 25,000 customers at five games and the strict observance of all training rules on the part of Montreal Canadiens and Jack Adams' N.H.L. all-stars count for anything, you might safely say that both the Prairies and the two hockey clubs in question are taking this current post-season exhibition tour seriously.

At all five games played to date Regina, Calgary and Edmonton spectators have failed to give an audible display of their vocal talent. Instead they have been content to sit back in silence admiring the ability that has put these players into puckdom's bigtime.

They have been sitting back, that is, at the times have not been clambering down to the boards to have their programs autographed by the touring stars. Body checks have been few in the five games but any bruises the performers have missed have been compensated for by writers' cramp.

As for the teams, they're taking it all as seriously as the customers.

"The teams aren't bodychecking or backchecking—' hard as they do in league play, but they're skating fast and scoring lots of goals," said Montreal coach Dick Irvin. "And every hockey crowd likes that."

Canadiens picked up some added strength last night as rearguard Butch Bouchard joined the club. The big defenceman married Marie Clare McBeth of Montreal in that city Saturday night and then flew to Edmonton.

CANADIAN SPORT SNAPSHOTS

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, April 29 — (CP) — Jack Robinson's promotion to the Brooklyn Dodgers has done more than anything else to link this city with Flatbush whose National League Dodgers are the parent team of Montreal's International League Royals.

Few players have left here with more local goodwill behind them than the fleet Negro infielder, a second baseman with Royals last season and now holding down first base with Brooklyn. First Negro to crash the major leagues, Jackie led the International circuit in batting last year.

With interest in Robinson's progress so high, Montreal sport writers have devoted as much space to him this season as they have to the new Royals, defending International League champions and winners last year of the Little World Series.

Larry O'Brien, writing to the Standard from New York, reported that although Robinson misses Royals he feels he will stick with the Dodgers "for keeps."

"I can honestly say that they are treating me just as fairly at Ebbets Field as Montreal fans did last year," Jackie told O'Brien in an interview. And the same goes for his team-mates.

"All those stories about these fellows being down on me are just lies," Robinson said. "The players have been wonderful to me. In fact, they have done much to ease off this pressure in my first try in the big leagues."

Montreal, incidentally, has another tie with Brooklyn—although in a more round-about way.

A citizen from Dem Bums' home home town, visiting here last week, looked over a map of Montreal, whistled and exclaimed:

"I wonder if Lippy knows about this? They've named a street after him here."

But even the most pro-Brooklyn Montrealer wouldn't admit that our west-end Durocher Street was named in honor of the erstwhile Dodgers.

British Goalie Wants to Play In Toronto

Toronto, April 29 —(CP)— George Foxcroft, former goalie of the Burnley, Eng., soccer team has provided a headache of major proportions to local football officials.

Foxcroft arrived in Chicago recently to play for Chicago Maroons of the North American professional league. They gave him a lucrative contract and the largest burst of publicity ever accorded a soccer player in the United States.

But Foxcroft decided he didn't like western civilization, Chicago style, and came to Toronto, contract notwithstanding.

Several local teams would welcome George with open arms but the small detail of getting him released from the Maroons is a large problem.

TORONTO TEAM IN THE LEAD

Toronto April 29 (CP)—Herb Donaldson and Billy Strong of Toronto combined to pile up a 1,618 count last night and take over the doubles lead in the annual Canadian Bowling Association five-pin tournament.

Scores

Doubles: Strong, Donaldson, Toronto 1,618; Desormeaux, Dufocher, Ottawa 1,572; Reynolds, Abraham, Peterborough, 1,565.

Singles: D. Lisson, Hamilton 889; R. Murie, Toronto 884; R. Miller, Toronto 868; J. Mastin Kingston 851.

Dizzy Trout Hurls and Bats Detroit Tigers to 3-0 Win Over the Cleveland Indians

Supine National League Suddenly Becomes "Homer-Happy"

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Should the suddenly home run-conscious National League continue anywhere near its present pace, Ford Frick's circuit easily will set a major-league record for four baggers in a single season.

Not since the early '30s has the senior circuit been so "homer happy." In 41 games to date, National League players have walloped 69 for the distance, a far better average than their record-breaking season in 1930 when 892 homers were hit. At this rate, the old league should top 1,000 when the campaign shuts its doors Sept. 28.

In sharp contrast, the American League, for years regarded as the haven for heavy hitters, owns only 39 round trippers in as many games. It's best output was in 1940 when 883 were hammered.

Thirty players have produced the National League homers with New York's Johnny Mize accounting for six in nine games. At this rate, which of course no one expects him to continue, the sturdy Giant first baseman could easily better Babe Ruth's standard of 60 home runs.

Eddie Miller of Cincinnati Reds, who until a week before the start of the season was undecided about playing this year, has hit five.

Only five players including Teddy Williams and Rudy York of the Boston Red Sox have hit as many as three home runs in the American League this season

With such a dearth of home runs in the junior circuit, naturally the pitchers have had a holiday. Ten pitchers have held their opponents scoreless in the American League. National League pitchers, on the other hand, have hurled only five shutouts.

In yesterday's only scheduled game in the big league's, Detroit's Dizzy Trout joined the growing list of shutout flingers by blanking the Indians in Cleveland 3-0. The Tigers righthander retired the side in order in five of the nine innings and drove in two of the three Bengal runs.

HORSEMEN GIVEN UNTIL MAY 2ND TO ACCEPT BOOK

If Conditions Not Accepted There Will be No Racing at Woodbine This Spring

Toronto, April 29 (CP)—Ontario horse owners, were told yesterday that unless they agreed to accept purses offered in the condition book, there would be no racing under auspices of the Greenwood Racing Club or the Ontario Jockey Club scheduled to start at Woodbine Park here May 9.

Directors of the Ontario Jockey Club gave owners until May 2 to accept the book following a meeting of the O.J.C. yesterday.

The Horsemen's Benevolent Protective Association, for many weeks campaigning for higher purses, have demanded a minimum of $1,500 on Toronto tracks and $1,200 on other Ontario tracks. The O.J.C. have announced minimum purses would be $1,200 in Toronto and $1,100 elsewhere.

W. E. MacDonald legal adviser of the H.B.P.A. said that negotiations would be entered with the Quebec racing circuit, to accommodate Ontario horse owners if terms could not be reached with jockey clubs in this province.

If Woodbine track did not operate the 88th renewal of the historic King's Plate might be abandoned. It was scheduled to take place May 24. There has been some suggestion that without scheduled racing the historic race would be run by itself. Without a supporting card.

PHALANX 'BIG' HORSE IN RUN FOR THE ROSES

Experts Believe Faultless Will Provide the Greatest Opposition

By SID FEDER

Louisville, Ky., April 29. (AP)—Practically everyone in Derbytown today was telling you that Phalanx was the "big" horse in Saturday's Kentucky Derby and Faultless was the horse to bet to win the pot.

But Sylvester Veitch, trainer of the Derby favorite, has thrown in his vote against Faultless as the horse his "Gentleman from Virginia" has to worry about. He is scared, he admits, of Jet Pilot, from the barn of Elizabeth (Arden) Graham.

But while Phalanx is the favorite in this 73rd running of the Derby Saturday at Churchill Downs, Faultless is virtually unanimously regarded as the one who will give Phalanx the most trouble.

If Faultless starts in the trial mile today, he'll have a man-sized chore chopped out for him. He's slated to tangle with such certain Derby starters as Bill Helis' Cosmic Bomb, Harry Warner's Stepfather, Ridgewood Stable's Double Jay and Charlie Fisher's Star Reward, and with the doubtful Derby starter, John's Pride.

HARVEY IS KEY TO ROYALS HOPES FOR ALLAN CUP

Rushing Defenceman One of the Best in Amateur Ranks

Montreal, April 29 — (CP) — Around rushing, rugged Doug Harvey — Montreal's big hope to ensure an Allan Cup victory — coach Frank Carlin will rotate his favored Royals tonight against Calgary Stampeders in the second game of their best-of-seven series for the Canadian senior hockey championship.

Harvey, a 22-year-old youngster well known to Montrealers for his football, baseball and hockey abilities, also made himself known to Jack Arbour's Stampeders Saturday night in Toronto when he streaked down the ice on two occasions to earn a goal and an assist and figure largely in the Montrealers' 7-3 victory over the western champions.

Royals go into tonight's game with a one game edge and the advantage of two home games in succession — tonight and Thursday — besides having gained the confidence that goes with a victory over an unknown team.

Cagey Frank Carlin, a sharp judge of hockey talent declined to predict any results of the series, admitting that "these Calgary boys are going to be tough."

As an afterthough he said:

"Remember it's this same team that won the Allan Cup last year —they can play much better than they did in Toronto Saturday."

Arbour predicted better results too.

"I think we'll ice the same team as the other night. The boys should go better on Montreal ice. They told me they found the ice sticky in Toronto."

"We'll dress the same team and take our chances," he said.

FORMER NAZI PILOTS CAN PACK UP HOPES

Montreal, April 29 —(CP)— Former Nazi pilots, banned from flying in their own Germany, can pack up any hopes they hold of flying for Trans-Canada Air Lines.

T.C.A. officials said today that the answer given to applications from flying personnel in Germany was that the preference is given R.C.A.F. men, not the Luftwaffe.

Fractured Arm Of Bob Goldham Healing Nicely

(By The Canadian Press)

Canadian swimming championships will be held in Victoria, B. C., next Aug. 11-12 officials of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association said yesterday at Winnipeg. A full range of senior events and eight junior events will be included on the program.

The Illinois Athletic Commission has announced that a middleweight title fight between champion Tony Zale and Rocky Graziano will be held July 16 at Wrigley Field, Chicago. The 15-round contest between Zale and Graziano, who is banned from fighting in New York State, was approved by the Commission last week.

Bob Goldham, Maple Leaf defence star is reported progressing favorably following a grafting operation on his fractured right arm performed by Dr. Bob Galloway, team doctor. Goldham was injured in a game against Boston early in the season and the arm, fractured in two places, failed to knit properly. It will be some weeks before the player can leave hospital.

Manager Frank Boucher of the New York Rangers told the New York Hockey Writers Association at a dinner in New York last night that the Rangers, who have trained at Winnipeg for 13 years, would break tradition and train this fall at Lake Placid, N. Y. He added that the National Hockey League team would continue its hockey school in Winnipeg, but that the new site was chosen for its proximity to the team's home town.

At Chicago yesterday, Raymond Gorczynski, 15, was awarded $35,000 for injuries allegedly suffered July 28, 1945, when he was kicked by a racehorse at Washington Park. The youth who had sued for $100,000 named as defendants Mr. and Mrs. Frank Nugent, owners of the horse, Play Grier, and the Arlington and Washington Park Jockey Clubs.

A world swimming record was broken at Arnhem, Holland Monday night when the Netherlands women swimmers Irene Van Fegglen, Nel Van Vliet and Hannie Termeulen surpassed their own world record for the 300 - metre medley relay with a time of three minutes 42.4 seconds. Their former record, three minutes, 46.3 seconds, was set in Amsterdam last December.

N. H. L. all-stars sung up a 7-4 victory over Montreal Canadiens in an exhibition game at Edmonton last night. McNabb led all-star goalgetters with two while others for all-stars went to Doug and Max Bentley, Carveth, Lindsay and Stewart. Toe Blake scored a pair for Canadiens with Richard and Carse getting the others

JACK GRAHAM HITS 5 HOMERS IN ELEVEN DAYS

Not even the oldest Jersey City rooter can remember when the Little Giants ever boasted the International League's home run king but unless all signs fail, they will have one in big Jack Graham who has smashed five home runs in 11 games.

Graham helped himself to a single, double and home run in three official trips to the plate for a perfect day yesterday as the Little Giants defeated Toronto Maple Leafs 7-2 behind six-hit pitching by rookie southpaw Jim Goodwin.

A seventh-inning home run by Dick West gave the Chiefs a 1-0 win over Buffalo in a brilliant mound duel between the Bison's Lou Kretlow and Syracuse's Jim Prendergast.

At Baltimore, Vernon Benson's three-hit homer in the ninth inning gave Rochester a 5-4 victory over the Orioles in the final game of their series.

Truman Requests United Effort To Bring Prices Down

New York, April 21 (AP) — President Truman, cautioning that the economic situation in the United States is "acute", appealed today for a united effort to bring prices down and prevent a depression.

Addressing the annual luncheon of members of the Associated Press, the chief executive said there must be:

1. "Moderation on the part of business."
2. "Forbearance on the part of labor," plus greater productivity.
3. "All-out effort on the part of the farmer."
4. "Wise guidance and action on the part of the government." Here he reiterated his plea against cutting taxes now and called for extension of rent, export and credit controls.

The address was the highlight of Newspaper Concention Week here.

Truman tied in his proposals for bolstering the economy at home with his program of helping free peoples abroad maintain their freedom.

Comparing conditions now with those of 1929, the peak pre-war year of economic activity, he listed:

A 71 per cent rise in physical volume, distinct from dollar value, of industrial output; a 32 per cent increase in agricultural production;

10,000,000 more employed;

The national income at a rate of $176,000,000,000 as against $83,000,000,000;

Buying Power Rises.

And average income, after taxes, up from $654 to $1,090. Converting the 1929 income average into terms of the 1947 dollar, Mr. Truman said the gain in actual buying power still shows a rise from $825 to $1,090.

"But," the president went on, "I must say in all frankness that the economic skies are not entirely clear. One cloud is shadowing our economic future.

"That cloud is the sharp and rapid rise in prices.

"Some day this cloud is certain to burst. They are sure of a recession or a depression. I believe that we as a nation can prevent this economic cloudburst. But it requires prompt, preventive steps."

Recalling his efforts last year to have Congress extend price control, the President said private enterprise now has the responsibility for prices because:

"A group saw fit to sabotage price control and represented to the public that prices would come down in a free market.

"This has not taken place."

Love Will Come Again

By Alma Sioux Scarberry

CHAPTER 2

"My Daddy—isn't going to live with us any more?" he asked, his chin trembling.

April shook her head, unable to speak. He said in an awed voice:

"Then I haven't got a daddy any more. Have I?"

"Oh, yes, darling," April choked, turning her face to her pillow. "Of course you have a daddy."

Kenny said solemnly: "Not if we deevorced him."

It was fortunate that Hyacinthe, the colored maid, came in at that time to get Kenny and dress him and give him his breakfast. Hyacinthe had been a family servant of the Lind's in Virginia and had been sent to New York by April's mother before Kenny was born. She was utterly devoted and when she saw April's grief her black face wrinkled with sympathy:

"There, there, honey," she patted April's head. "You jes res' for a little while and Hyacinthe take her big boy an' show him de li'l robin dats nestin' in de back ya'd, after he done et his breakfas'."

The old colored woman had a genius for handling children, and Kenny kissed his mother and allowed Hyacinthe to pick him up and carry him out of the room without a protest. A little later he told the maid solemnly:

"Did you know, Hyacinthe, I have no daddy any more? We deevorced him."

Everyone Kenny met for days afterward was given the same information in an awed, solemn voice:

"I have no Daddy. Ye deevorced him."

April wept bitterly for awhile after Hyacinthe had taken Kenny fro mthe room, finally falling into an exhausted slumber. It was noon when she awakened, surprised that she had slept more than four hours. Gay knocked when she heard April walking about, and went in to tell her the news.

"Brace yourself for a shock," Gay threw herself down in a chair by the window. "The problem child is in town."

April looked puzzled. "I mean," Gay sighed, "Cherry has come to New York to carve out a career. And incidentally to carve up a few millionaires, I guess. She wants to live here. I gave her my other twin bed."

April said blankly: "Oh! I wonder if mother knows where she is."

"I guess not," Gay said. "She has given up college atnd broken her engagement to Pat. She went out this morning to look for a job a sa model. I didn't tell you when you came because I thought you'd better get some sleep first."

April loved her younger sister dearly. But her heart sank at the thought of the added responsibility of trying to manage Cherry in New York. Tall, lovely golden Cherry with the face of an angel and the wild, untamed heart of a gypsy.

"She's in a mad mood," Gay warned. "It all seems to have been brought about by your divorce. She says she'll never marry a struggling young lawyer like Pat. That if she's ever left holding the bag by a man like you were, it's be full of everything in the world she wants. I think you should ship her right back home."

April sighed: "That wuoldn't help any. She wouldn't go. If she doesn't stay here she'll get into some kind of trouble. You know Cherry when she gets in a mood We'd better humor her."

"Darling!" Gay protested, "You can't mother the whole world! Why don't you think of yourself for a change? Haven't you got your hands full enough as it is, with Kenny to raise and educate?

Don't take on any more parasites."

Gay and April had been born and brought up in the same small town in Virginia, and they had been close friends all their lives. April felt she could not have gone through her marital break without the loyal friendship of the tall, red headed Gay. She was cheerful and full of good humor, but could speak her mind in no uncertain terms when the occasion arose.

Gay was more than attractive with her green eyes and white skin, and very popular with men. But at twenty six had never married. It was simply, she said, because she had never met a man she trusted enough to fall in love with. April felt it was because Gay had seen the marriages of so many of her friends end in disaster.

April was trying to eat an afternoon breakfast and Gay was having her lunch when Hyacinthe came in with the paper and laid it beside April's plate.

"Yo' all bettah eat ever' thing honey," the old darky patted her cheek, "or Hyacinthe goin' spank you."

April smiled at her affectionately and opened the paper. It was then the second big blow of the day fell. For there on the front page was a picture of Hill sitting at a table in a night club with a woman, and the headline read:

"Drusilla Bayne, Wealthy, Thrice-Divorced 'Blond Bombshell' to Wed Kent Hillyer, Ex Golf Champ."

"What's the matter?" Gay asked, alarmed, seeing April's face blanch.

"It—can't be true," April gasped. "Look! A picture of Dru Bayne and Hill. It—says they're going to be married."

"Wh—what? Oh, it must be a publicity stunt. You know how Dru loves the headlines. Let me see?"

April handed the paper to Gay, tears filling her eyes.

"I—it's all my fault," she said unhappily. "If I hadn't done what I did last night at the airport, driving away with Curt De Witt—"

"Stop it!" Gay said almost crossly. "Don't blame yourself for him damn foolishness. He's on his own now."

"But it is my fault," April persisted. "You know how jealous he is. He probably called Dru right afterward, and he was tight enough to do almost anything. You know she's alwyas been crazy about him."

"Well let her have him!" Gay threw down the paper. "It would serve them both right! They'd be a fine pair!"

"But she'll ruin his life," April wailed. You know how selfish and unscrupulous she is! And Hill is such a child."

"Rot!" Gay exploded. "If he gets mixed up with a few gals like Dru Bayne he'll realize soon enough what a fool he was to lose you."

"Oh, what shall I do?" April asked desperately. "I've got to do something to stop him from marrying her."

"You'll stay out of this and let Hill work out his own salvation," Gay said firmly. "If you don't you'll be a great deal more sorry than you are now."

The door bell rang and Hyacinthe came into the dinette with a box. It was orchids from Curt De Witt. Gay was delighted that they had arrived at what she considered the psychological moment.

"They're lovely," April wiped her tears. "He's a grand person, isn't he?"

"He's got good taste in women—and orchids," Gay looked at the flowers half enviously. "Isn't it marvelous you met him?"

"I suppose so," April took the card from it's envelope. "But I can't see it makes much difference."

Keep that chin up, lovely lady," the card read in De Witt's hand writing. "I'll call you about three to se elf you would like to dine and go to the opening of 'Sister Susie' tonight. Don't disappoint me. Curt."

April handed the card to Gay, sighing:

"I couldn't bear to go now, after seeing the paper."

Gay got up: "You'll go if I have to chloroform you! How can you be such a nitwit? Sit here and bawl when you've got a chance to go out and have dinner and go to one of the biggest openings Broadway has ever seen. Don't talk like a martyr!"

In spite of April's protests Gay took matters into her own hands. She got out a new lip stick red chiffon evening gown of her own and insisted that April wear it.

"You'll look like a huzzy and no one will suspect you've got anything on your mind but how to land a millionaire," Gay grinned. "Here try it on," she took April by the shoulders. "It'll be longer on you, more formal."

April had a quiet taste in clothes. She wore plain tailored things always, with a distinguished air that made her look like a quaint little quaker. This was in keeping with her personality; the quiet charm of her voice and manner. She was so feminine and lady-like that it was always a surprise to people who did not know her well to find out she could accomplish almost any difficult task she set her hand to.

When she slipped into Gay's backless red gown it was so different from her own wardrobe that she could scarcely believe she was looking at herself. She laughed shakily:

"Oh, Gay! I can't go out in this."

"You look marvelous!" Gay enthused. "Don't be silly. It gives you color, and the lord knows you can use a little of it. You've looked like a drooping lily. I'll do your hair up off your ears and you can wear my emerald set. You'll wow 'em."

In spite of the heaviness of her heart, April allowed Gay to have her own way. When Curt phoned at three she told him she would be ready at six.

Kenny was too excited with the idea of having his mother home to spend the entire afternoon playing in the back yard, and he was underfoot most of the time chattering or climbing into her arms to kiss her every few minutes.

Gay was relieved that Cherry hadn't got back before it was time for April to leave for he evening. Hyacinhe's eyes almost popped out of her kinky head when Gay paraded April into the kitchen after she had dressed her and done her black hair high on top of her head.

The lip stick red of the gown brought out the gardenia white of her lovely face, and the emeralds in her ears and at her throat gave sparkle to the wide gray eyes that had been filled with pain so long. Hyacinthe almost dropped the dish she was washing, exclaiming with a broad grin:

"Well, bless mah soul, honey! Yo' all ought to be in de movies. Ain't she de pretties' thing yo' evah laid eyes on Miss Gay?"

She stood back admiring her while April turned around for inspection.

"Honey," Hyacinthe beamed, "I'se so proud yo' ain't goin' let nobody see how you feels! You done get yo' self a nice rich husman' and show dat no good Mistah Hillyah where he git off. Dat's de smaht gal. Ain' no man worf sheddin' no tears ovah. Dey is all alike."

Hycinthe had supported three husbands in her day, and had long since decided she was through with romance.

"Boy!" Hyacinthe laughed until her fat bosom shook, "don' I wish dat husban' of yours could see you look like dat! He'd sho 'nough drop daid!"

Curt De Witt could not hide his surprise when he saw the changed April. She did not look like the same girl who had worn the simply close fitting blue taffeta suit with white collar and cuffs the day before. But she looked very stunning. He caught his breath.

"You're quite a surprise," he grinned, standing back to admire her. "There must be two of you."

Gay watching from behind the curtains as they walked to the De Witt limousine decided they were a perfect couple. Curt wore his evening attire with distinction, and although he was not a large man gave the appearance of being tall because of the dignified way he carried himself. He had a clean cut wholesomeness that Gay admried very much in men, and she thought April was very lucky to have met him.

When Cherry arrived in a taxi a couple of hours later, Gay knew the instant she opened the door that Cherry had been drinking. She was glad April was not home.

"Hello, hello, hello!" Cherry swayed as she crossed the living room and threw herself on the divan. "But have I been on a cocktail party? But have I? I guess they kind of snuck up on me after the first six. But you know how it is. I'm going 'round in circles. But am I?"

Gay was too wise to wax material because she knew that was the last method to use with Cherry. She said calmly:

"Lie down and maybe you'll stop the merry-go-round. I'll have Hyacinthe make some coffee. Have you had anything to eat?"

"Didn't have room for it," Cherry stretched out kicikng off her pumps.

"You'd better have some soup," Gay went to the kitchen door to speak with Hyacinthe.

The old colored woman looked in at the girl on the divan, shaking her head with disapproval. Gay gave her a warning glance not to say anything. Cherry was babbling thickly:

"What a party! You remember Lola Hitchcock who came to New York to be a model. She threw it for me. I dropped into her hotel to say hello and she started calling up her friends to celebrate."

Gay remembered that Lola did not enjoy a very good reputation in college, but kept silent while Cherry talked on:

"Lola introduced me to a gorgeous man with piles of money and he gave me his card to take to a friend of his who backs a shop. He says he'll tell his friend to give me a job modeling. Isn't that priceless luck? I can't believe it! Lola's got a big drag. She says I'm all set. She knows all the ropes, and loads of gorgeous men with millions of dollars."

Suddenly Cherry's voice trailed off, and from her heavy breathing Gay knew she had fallen asleep. She went to the kitchen to tell Hyacinthe not to bother about the soup and the colored woman said darkly:

"Dat young debbil goin' get herself into some kind awful trouble. And she done goin' break poor li'l Miss April's haht. I got a notion to set right down and write her mammy a lettah and tell her de whole thing."

"You will not," Gay said firmly. "There's no use worrying Mrs. Lind to death. You know she isn't very strong."

Hyacinthe sighed heavily: "I guess you all is right, Miss Gay. But dat gal goin' right to de dogs heah in de big city. You mahk my words."

April and Curt dined at the Steel Club, and arrived at the Hamilton Theatre just before curtain time. It was during intermission when they walked to the lobby for a cigarette that April sawy Drusilla and Hill, with a party of friends.

Must Break Down Restraints in Trading World

Washington, April 29 (CP)—Unless the North American continent is prepared to accept goods manufactured elsewhere and is prepared to lead in breaking down restraints in the trading world, the prosperity of the world is jeopardized, C. Gordon Cockshutt of Brantford, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, said today.

In an address prepared for delivery to the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce, he said that Canadian business men think the peace of the world will depend largely on its economic security and believe the world must trade on a freer basis.

"We know that Canada must trade one-third of her production if we are to continue at our present level," he said. "This trading at present is financed by our lending money abroad but this condition cannot continue indefinitely. Eventually we must in large take goods in payment for goods....

"If we do not adjust our economy to the rest of the world, there is no future for us in Canada or you in the United States. Therefore we must make the world economy work. Sacrifices are necessary, yes, sacrifices for world salvation. The eyes of the world are fixed on you in this country. It is a question of economic isolation or world unity."

Baby Pushed From Ledge Suffers Skull Fracture

Ottawa, April 29. (CP)—Kathleen Ann Foley, eight months, was in hospital today suffering skull fracture and shock after she was pushed from a high cement ledge yesterday by an unidentified eight-year-old boy.

The child had been left sleeping in her carriage in front of the downtown Medical Arts Building while her mother, Mrs. Tom Foley, of Ottawa, was inside on business. It was then a passerby saw a young boy pull the baby from her carriage and shove her down the four-foot ledge on to the pavement below.

Say Zeiss Works Set Up Outside Moscow

Berlin, April 29 (AP)—German workers taken to Russia have revealed that the famed Zeiss Camera Works, seized at Jena by Soviet authorities as reparations, is being set up again on the outskirts of Moscow.

Not all of the Zeiss plant taken from Jena is concluded in the Moscow setup which the workmen say is confined to the camera division. They said that they understood other sections of the plant are being set up in the Leningrad area.

Morris Button Reviews Scout Work to Rotarians

The tremendous importance of boys' work in combatting juvenile delinquincy, and the outstanding job being done by the Boy Scouts Association in bringing to boys the proper training both in outdoor as well as community life, was the theme of an interesting address given the Rotary Club on Monday by Mr. Morris Button, of the Canadian National Railways staff here.

Mr. Button, who is the president of the Belleville Association of Boy Scouts, told the clubmen that the Boy Scout movement was the greatest contribution to the reduction of juvenile delinquency in the world.

He reviewed the origin of the movement and its gradual progress throughout the world during the period since its inception. It was started, he said, by the late General Baden Powell, who conceived the idea while he was in action during the Boer War. There, he trained native boys to act as scouts while under fire, and the success of the idea and the popularity it attained, was such that he carried it into times of peace.

Started Experimental Camp.

In 1907, he started an experimental camp and later published a book on scouts. He originated the scout slogans "Be Prepared" and "Do a good deed every day." He gave the boys a set of laws which included honor, courage, discipline, and guidance of religion.

The Wolf Cubs were started in 1916, and international jamborees were held in 1920, 1924 and 1925.

Mr. Button outlined the organization of the Scouts, Cubs, and their various groups, pointing out the various phases of training which they undergo.

"It is our job to keep the light of good clean life in a boy's eyes. It is by this that you know their individuality," Mr. Button said.

Four Troops in City.

At present there are four troops in the city, he said, those of St. Thomas' Church, Christ Church, Kiwanis Club and the Queen Mary Home and School Club. He hoped to see more started in the future and expressed the wish that the Rotary Club would see its way clear to take over a troop.

"There is no boy alive who is sufficiently bad to throw into the discard," the speaker said, after relating a personal experience which occurred when he was a boy. "If these so-called bad boys are given a chance, in the proper surroundings they will come through and show that they are made of good stuff. There is a great need for organization of boys in these days, and you will get your reward when you get a happy smile from a boy."

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Newt. Thompson, with club apreciation expressed by Bill Leslie. President Bert Howard was in the chair.

HE'LL QUACK ABOUT THE ZOO

A duck-billed platypus, called the "most wonderful of all living animals," arrives in Boston en route to the Bronx zoo in New York. The little fellow and two others, natives of Australia, are furred, web-footed, duck-billed, poison-spurred and egg-laying. They will live in a special "Platypusary" in the zoo.

WARTIME HOUSES TO REMAIN

St. Catharines, April 29 —(CP) —Wartime houses are to remain in St. Catharines. This was told council last night by a representative of Wartime Housing, who offered two plans to the city. The houses will either remain for rental or be sold to the public, the latter with provision that a cellar must be provided. Council is to give further consideration to the plans.

DANGEROUS TO BELIEVE T B IS UNDER CONTROL

St. Catharines, April 29—(CP)—"There is no better tuberculosis control in Ontario than in Lincoln and Welland counties," Dr. G. C. Brink, director of tuberculosis prevention for the Ontario Department of Health, said last night. He spoke at the 16th annual meeting of the Niagara Peninsula Sanitorium. Dr. Brink added that while great progress had been made, it would be dangerous to create the idea in the public mind that tuberculosis is under control.

Hope Diamond Owner, Mrs. McLean, Dies at 60

Washington, April 29 —(AP)— Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, fabulous social figure who wore the evil-omened Hope diamond for a luck charm, is dead at the age of 60.

She spent her first years in a two-room log cabin and spent a good part of her later years in a mansion designed to entertain royalty. Death came prosaically at 8:15 p.m. EST from pneumonia, at her Georgetown residence, where she had been ill for several days.

Hers was a life of contrasts.

She collected gems by the handful and pawned them often.

She had the great 44½-karat Hope diamond blessed by a priest and claimed it brought her good fortune, but never would let her children touch it.

Lavish Parties.

She entertained the world's notables at lavish parties at the family's "Friendship" estate and bought sandwiches for bonus marchers after the First Great War.

She spent $104,000 and travelled half way across the country in an effort to ransome the kidnapped Lindbergh baby, only to learn she had been the victim of a hoax.

She recovered twice from narcotics addiction.

At the bedside when Mrs. McLean died were Dr. Bernard J. Walsh, the attending physician; Father Edmund A. Walsh, vice-president of Georgetown University, a long-time friend who administered the last rites; Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, publisher of the Washington Times-Herald; Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy and his secretary, Miss Eleanor Baumgartner; Thurmond Arnold, her lawyer; Frank C. Waldrop, Times Herald editorial writer; former Senator Robert R. Reynolds of North Carolina, Mrs. McLean's son-in-law; and her secretary, Miss Nannie Chase.

Dr. Walsh said pneumonia was the only cause of her death, with no complications.

In recent years the house in Georgetown where Mrs. McLean died has carried the name of "Friendship," but the original estate of that name, scene of fabulous parties, was several miles further northwest near the District of Columbia line. The site has been converted into a big apartment development.

To Entertain King.

Another storied McLean home, the mansion on Massachusetts Ave., where a special suite was built to entertain the King of Belgium, was disposed of in 1938 and an office building was erected on the ground.

The value of the Hope diamond has been estimated unofficially all the way from $300,000 to $2,000,000. Mrs. McLean wore it on any and all occasions when the fancy struck her.

She was the widow of Edward Beale McLean, heir to the Washington Post and the Cincinnati Enquirer, and the daughter of Thomas Walsh, who founded a huge fortune on the free-milling gold of the Camp Bird mine in Colorado.

Surviving are two sons, John, who lives in Texas, and Edward Jr., who makes headquarters in Colorado Springs, Colo., to manage his mother's mining interests.

Another survivor is Mamie Spears Reynolds, 4, daughter of Reynolds and the late Mrs. Evalyn McLean Reynolds. The mother, daughter of Mrs. McLean, died last Sept. 20 from an overdose of sleeping medicine.

The question now arises: What is to become of the diamond?

A reading of her will, probably soon after the private funeral service Tuesday, will give the answer. And if Mrs. McLean meant what she told friends before her death from pneumonia Saturday night, the superb but jinxed gem of 44½ karats will go to none of her family.

Born in Cabin.

Mrs. McLean, born in the two-room log cabin of a miner who "struck it rich" and then reared her like a princess, loved to wear the diamond, for which she is said to have refused offers up to $2,000,000.

It was exquisitely set, surrounded by diamonds whose brilliant white lights accented the weird blueness of the main stone. It hung from a diamond and platinum chain around her neck.

It was almost Mrs. McLean's trade mark. She had her portrait painted wearing it. Her home was closely guarded that she might keep it with her. She wore it with evening gowns and with daytime frocks.

She realized that it fascinated friends and strangers. She delighted to show it to her guests.

But the story is that she never would permit it to be touched by her children.

While declaring that she would not leave the diamond to them, Mrs. McLean did not say precisely what her intentions were. Her declaration appeared to rule out her 4-year-old granddaughter, Mamie Spears Reynolds, as well.

The indications are that it will go to her estate—both in view of her own attitude toward it and the more prosaic matter of taxes—to be sold to some new owner willing to brave the superstition of its ill luck.

Mrs. McLean acquired it on a trip abroad a few years after her marriage in 1908 to the late Ned McLean, son of the wealthy former owner of the Cincinnati Enquirer and Washington Post.

She was hesitant about it. But finally she bought it for $40,000 and took it to a priest to have it blessed.

According to the story, a French traveller named Tavernier had wrenched a diamond of great beauty and strange blue lights from the forehead of a Hindu idol. He thereby brought upon himself a curse.

Tavernier took the diamond to Paris and sold it to Louis XIV.

The curse of the ravished idol began its work. Tavernier was torn to death by dogs. Mme. de Montespan desired the diamond, got it—and fell out of Royal favor as the King's mistress.

Louis XV kept the diamond locked up—and history records his luck as fair.

Louis XVI gave it to his Queen, Marie Antoinette. They were guillotined. The French Revolution swept the land. The stone disappeared.

Then in 1830 a curious blue diamond came on the French market. It weighed 44 carats and jewelers and historians figured it was the missing Hindu stone cut down from its original 68 carats to conceal its identity.

A London broker, Thomas Hope, bought it.

Hope gave it to his daughter, the Duchess of Newcastle. She left it to her son, Lord Clinton. He gave it to his music-hall bride May Yohe.

How the "curse" affected Thomas Hope and the Duchess is not recorded, but Lord Clinton's wife eloped. She left behind the diamond—and ended up scrubbing floors.

Jan Bata Being Tried in Absentia

Prague, April 29 —(Reuters)— The trial of Jan Bata, millionaire former owner of the now nationalized vast Bata Shoe Works at Zlin who is charged with collaborating with the Germans and supporting Fascism, started before the Czechoslovak National Court here Monday.

Bata, now in Brazil and being tried in his absence, is a stepbrohter of the founder of the Bata concern. Jan Bata took over the Zlin works in 1932 after his brother Tomas died in an air crash.

Bata's counsel protested against the trial being held in Bata's absence, saying that he is a Brazilian citizen and has only just received a copy of the indictment.

Bata has sent telegrams to the court protesting against the trial, it was stated.

After the indictment had been read the court adjourned to consider defence objections.

37 Passengers Injured When Train Derailed

Ontario, Calif., April 28. (AP) —Sixteen cars of the Southern Pacific's New Orleans-bound Argonaut passenger train were derailed last night an hour and 25 minutes after it left the Los Angeles station. Thirty-seven passengers were reported injured, seven or eight of them seriously. There was no report of fatalities.

The locomotive and two baggage cars of the 18-car train remained on the rails but the first chair car left the track and the next car ripped its side away. The first car contained only three passengers, trainmen said.

Some 300 yards of track were torn up but H. E. Lindblom of Los Angeles, pullman conductor, said there was no panic among the passengers as the rails were ripped from the ties with a terrific noise.

Ambulances rushed from nearby communities took the injured to hospitals in the vicinity. There were no Canadians among the injured.

The wreck occurred as the train was speeding at an estimated 65 miles an hour on a straight, level stretch of track. There was no immediate explanation of the cause.

Vicar Apologizes For Unmarried Mothers Statement

London, April 28. (AP)—A vicar apologized publicly today for saying that Britain's spinsters, deprived of husbands by the war, should be permitted to have babies without marrying.

Rev. W. G. Hargrave Thomas, 58, issued this statement:

"At the last meeting of the East Suffolk City Education committee, during the discussion of my motion of equal pay for equal work for women teachers, in winding up the debate, I made a remark to the effect that those thousands of women whom the wars deprived of the possibility of a husband should be able to assert their rights to have a family if they wanted one.

"This statement, together with its sequel in the press, has caused many people considerable distress, which I deeply regret. I am sorry that I said it and I desire to withdraw it unreservedly."

Thomas' original statement ten days ago brought a flood of indignant letters. The press reported the statement as follows:

"Perhaps I should not say this now—and no doubt some of you will be very shocked—but I think it is high time that those thousands of women for whom there is no possible chance of a husband should be able to assert their right to have a family if they want one."

GIRL'S NOSE RESTORED

Los Angeles, April 28 (AP)— Plastic surgery has restored 15-year-old Esther Brooks' nose, sliced off at the base in an automobile accident Tuesday, but her doctor said today it is still too early to tell if the grafting operation is successful. The girl's nose was not replaced for four hours after the accident and was found only after a frantic search by Sheriff's Deputies.

Chrysler Corp. Follows Example Of General Motors

Detroit April 28 (AP)—Chrysler Corporation Saturday night followed the example of General Motors by granting an 11 1-2 cent hourly wage increase, tied in with six paid holidays.

As the second of the automotive industry's "Big Three" signed this approximate 15-cent pattern with the United Automobile Workers, (C.I.O.), only the Ford Motor Company remained to come to an understanding with the Union on 1947 pay scales.

The Chrysler raise, in addition to going to 70,000 production workers and 3,000 union salaried employees, also was extended to 12,000 non-union workers, the Corporation said. Thus it covered Chrysler's complete 85,000-man force.

The Chrysler-U. A. W. agreement virtually assured peace in the huge United States automobile industry this year in contrast to the strike turmoil of 1946 and the latter part of 1945 during postwar reconversion.

Bargaining between the U.A.W. C.I.O. and Ford, where 100,000 to 120,000 workers will be affected, is expected to start at an early date

President Walter Reuther of the U. A. W. hailed the Chrysler agreement saying it "proves free collective bargaining can be made to work."

Chrysler estimated its pay boost would total about $27,000,000 annually. The General Motors increase was estimated unofficially at from $65,000,000 to $85,000,000 for 220,000 workers.

The Chrysler raise will extend through all the Corporation's divisions, including Plymouth, Dodge and Desoto as well as Chrysler.

Wolf Cub Training Saves Boy's Leg As Foot Severed

St. Catharines, April 29 — (CP) —By placing the lower part of his body in icy water of a pond after a freight train sliced off his left foot, nine-year-old Jackie Obee of nearby Merritton probably saved the rest of his leg from amputation, doctors said Monday.

They said his action, based on first aid training gained through Wolf Cub activities, congealed the blood and stopped sever bleeding. It also lessened shock and averted danger of tetanus or gangrene.

Jackie told the story Monday of the accident which happened Friday afternoon as he walked back to school with a chum. His foot caught in a track junction as a freight car moved down the track. After the foot was severed. Jackie sent his companion, Eugene Lamother, for help while he made for the pond.

Bell Employees Offered a $2.50 Weekly Wage Hike

Washington, April 28 — (AP)— An offer of a flat pay increase—the first proposed by any Bell system company — spurred new optimism among United States government and union officials today that the three-week old country-wide telephone strike may be near an end.

The offer, a $2.50 weekly wage hike for 17,500 workers in five mid-western states, was made by the Northwestern Bell Telephone Company.

The prospect of ending the strike there — and possibly elsewhere as well — hinged on acceptance or rejection of the firm's proposal in a union reply this afternoon. The workers are in Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa and North and South Dakota.

The Northwestern negotiations are among the more than 20 involving Bell Company subsidiaries throughout the country. All the companies have offered to arbitrate the wage issues in dispute.

But until the Northwestern proposal, none had agreed to even a token wage raise.

The strikers cut their wage demand from $12 to $6 a week last Friday, to match the 15-cent hourly boosts granted in steel, automobile and other American industries.

Greatest Aerial Search in Canadian History for Plane

Missing Plane's Radio May Have Failed Say Pilots

By BRUCE LEVETT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Vancouver, April 30 (CP) — Vancouver's Civic Airport, said to be the busiest in the Dominion, was a hive of activity today as search planes took off for the second day in the hunt for the missing Trans-Canada airliner.

The Locheed Lodestar, carrying 15 persons, was reported missing early Tuesday after it disappeared following range clearance into the field.

Grim-faced maintenance crews, some of them working a double shift, are servicing search planes as fast as they land. Pilots are stopping only for coffee and quick bites between flights and the relentless hunt goes on.

A tiny group of relatives moved restlessly through corridors of the administration building waiting word and looking toward harried TCA flight clerks with questioning eyes.

Meanwhile, over northern Vancouver Island, the air is congested with aircraft of all types, prying with powerful glasses into the densely-wooded and mountainous region where reports say a plane was heard in the early hours of Tuesday.

"It looks like an operational raid," said Squadron-Leader R. A. Kipp, in charge of an air-sea rescue group.

No Statement Issued

Neither airlines officials nor R.C.A.F. personnel would issue a statement as to what they believe happed. However, pilots say that the missing airliner's radio may have failed, causing it to go off the beam and making it impossible to call the field. If this is so, they say, the pilot probably went off course while swinging into the circuit to come into the wind for a landing.

Airline officials were busy checking reports from residents of Cedar, B. C., near Nanaimo of a "red glow" seen in the sky shortly before 1 a.m. PDT (4 a.m. EDT) Tuesday — about one hour after the plane vanished. It was believed that the glow might have been signal flares in the night sky set off by Captain W. G. Pike of Vancouver, pilot of the missing aircraft, as he tried desperately to locate the flying field at Nanaimo.

May Have Overshot Field

Experienced pilots here said that he might have overshot the field and that the grim, cloud-cloaked mountains 20 to 25 miles northwest of Nanaimo are shrouding the fate of the plane.

At the first sign of daybreak R. C. A. F. and Airline planes streaked across the Georgian Straits and began scouring the cloud-cloaked mountains north and west of Nanaimo.

To the south United States Coast Guard planes began an intensive sweep of the rugged coastal area and a helicopter stood ready at Seattle. At Nanaimo planes from the Nanaimo Flying Club joined in the search.

At the airport here three husky civilian paratroopers waited impatiently for word that the missing aircraft had been sighted. The dare-devil jumpers, all former R.C.A.F. air rescue specialists — one a doctor — announced their willingness to jump anywhere and under any conditions should the aircraft be found.

COMMEMORATE BURIAL OF KING CHRISTIAN X

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, April 30—(CP)—Synopsis at 4:30 a.m.: Mild showery weather is general throughout Southern Ontario this morning. In Northern Ontario rain and snow have ended and the weather is cloudy and cool. Snow is now falling in the Maritimes due to a disturbance over Western Quebec. Clearing weather and somewhat higher temperatures are forecast for Southern Ontario on Thursday.

COL. J.W. DURANT SENTENCED TO 15 YEARS IN PRISON

Found Guilty by Army Court-Martial for His Part in Theft of Hesse Crown Jewels

Frankfurt, April 30. (Reuters) —Col. Jack W. Durant of the United States Army was found guilty today by an army court martial and sentenced to 15 years hard labor for his part in the theft of the Hesse crown jewels valued at $1,500,000 from Kronberg Castle near Frankfurt in the Autumn of 1945 .

After deliberating for two days, the United States military court of eight colonels convicted the 37-year-old Chicago Air Force officers on eight counts. These included theft, smuggling jewels into the United States without payment of customs, and signing another officer's name without authority in an attempt to hasten a discharge from the army.

Specifically, the court found Durant guilty of stealing only $10,000 worth of the jewel collection, which the army prosecution valued at $1,500,000.

Durant's wife, former W.A.C. Capt. Kathleen B. Nash, was sentenced to five years at hard labor last Sept. 27 for her part in the embezzlement. She had been manager of the castle, the estate of the Countess of Hesse—a descendant of Queen Victoria. The United States army had requisitioned the castle for an officers' club.

She and Durant were arrested in Chicago last June 7 while on their honeymoon. Most of the jewels, which had been hidden in the castle, were recovered in Chicago.

Maj. David S. Watson of Burlingame, Calif., was sentenced to three years in the same case at a trial which ended last October.

ACTION POSTPONED

St. Catharines, April 30 (CP)— Grantham Township Council took action last night to ask the Ontario Municipal Board to postpone a scheduled hearing on annexation until such time as matters of mutual interest between Grantham and St. Catharines, now under negotiation, are concluded. These matters include adjusting charges for services provided to the township in regard to water, fire and sewage.

Industrial Heads Approve Budget But Union Leaders Disappointed

(By The Canadian Press)

A Canadian Press survey of Canada-wide reaction to the new Federal budget today revealed, in a nutshell, qualified approval by industrial heads; disappointment by trades union leaders that income tax cuts were not greater.

Financial and industrial spokesmen cheered the announcement that the excess profits tax of 15 per cent will be dropped next Dec. 31, although some thought it might have been dropped immediately.

Labor spokesmen were bitter in linking the removal of the excess profits tax with the reductions in personal income tax. They said the reductions would not halt the campaign for higher wages. They complained that the exemptions in the lower income brackets had not been changed.

Among Labor critics, C. S. Jackson, Canadian director of the United Electrical Workers (CIO), said at Toronto that the income tax exemptions should have been raised to $2,500 for married men, $1,500 for single men. The rates, as before, start at $1,500 for married persons, $750 for single.

"It is ridiculous to expect a married man with two children, making $1,800 a year, to pay any tax at all," said Don Dunlop, president of the Ontario Provincial Federation of Labor (AFL).

Dave Archer, secretary of the Toronto Labor Council (CCL) saw the budget as an incentive for wage demands to give workers a greater share of the profits accru-

Foreign Relief Bill Passed

Washington, April 30 (AP)— The House of Representatives passed a $200,000,000 Foreign Relief Bill today after cutting $150,000,000 off the sum asked by the administration and clamping tight conditions on aid going to countries under Russian domination. The vote was 33 to 66.

Restrictions placed on distribution of relief in countries under Russian domination would deny relief assistance to "those countries whose governments are dominated by the "Union of Soviet Socialist Republics" unless they agree to American control of the supplies.

Justice Issues Bench Warrant For Man's Arrest

Montreal, April 30 — (CP) —A bench warrant for the arrest of Conrad Sauras, an official of the Canadian Seamen's Union, was issued by Mr. Justice Wilfrid Lazure of the Superior Court when Sauras failed to appear in court today following rejection yesterday of his appeal from a six-month jail sentence.

The six-month sentence was imposed by Judge C. E. Guerin of the sessions court on Sauras after the latter was convicted of a charge of boarding a vessel without permission of the captain during the seamen's strike last summer.

COST OF HOSPITAL CARE

Toronto, Apr. 30 (CP).—Cost of hospital care has risen to the point where many people cannot afford it, Clifton H. Carlisle, president of the board of directors of Wellesley Hospital, said at the annual meeting yesterday.

"We are reaching the point where people can't afford to go to the hospital for medical care," he said. "There will have to be an adjustment backward. The patient has his physician, hospital bills, X-rays—and it gets beyond him."

FINED $75 OR 30 DAYS

Toronto, Apr. 30 (CP).—Because he faked a robbery story, Allan Carruthers, 32, was today fined $75 or 30 days in jail for "causing a public mischief". Carruthers had told police he was robbed of $133 by a man with a revolver.

OMNIBUS CONTROL BILL HEADING TOWARD PASSAGE

Comfortable Margin Of Time Looms Before May 15 Deadline When All Controls Expire

By JOHN LEBLANC
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 30 — (CP) —The controversy-laden omnibus bill continuing 57 Federal controls was on the way toward passage well within its May 15 deadline today after its multitude of orders-in-council extensions had obtained approval of the Commons.

As a pallid anti-climax to Finance Minister Abbott's budget, a thinly-populated Commons in committee of the whole late last night pushed the last of the orders past stage of its progress through the House.

Still to be debated were a number of clauses in the body of the bill itself — to which opposition amendments were pending — and there were prospects of further debate on third reading. But the laborious committee study was out of the way, well ahead of schedule.

A comfortable margin of time loomed before the May 15 deadline, when the controls all would automatically expire unless extended.

One of the latest orders to gain committee approval — and one of the most provocative contention —was the section dealing with timber control extension, which finally went through late last night after two days of hot debate.

New Price Policy

During the closing stages of the debate yesterday, Reconstruction Minister Howe announced the government is negotiating a new price policy with western timber operators with a view to improving the supply of top grade lumber on the home market.

Prices are to be increased, he told the House, to provide producers with returns on Canadian-consumed wood comparable to those obtained in export.

The House received also an announcement from Transport Minister Chevrier that the Canada Shipping Act would be amended at the next session of parliament. The 800 clauses of the act—which regulates merchant shipping — were being overhauled, he declared.

Earlier, House discussion had centred on the lumber control extension measure in the omnibus bill, which was under debate for two days before it obtained committee passage. Some Liberal and opposition members claimed controls were encouraging black markets in lumber and keeping wood off the domestic market.

Asuncion Streets Echo With Shots Of Insurgents

Buenos Aires, April 30. (Reuters) — Gen. Higinio Morinigo, dictator-president of Paraguay for seven years, today was a refugee in the Spanish Embassy at Asuncion while streets of the Paraguayan capital echoed with shots as insurgent forces drove out his remaining supporters, according to reports received here from Clorinda, just across the Argentine-Paraguay border from Asuncion.

The reports, quoting "refugees from Paraguay", said Morinigo had resigned.

All communications with Asuncion had been cut since the Morinigo government announced Sunday it had quelled a rising of the marine garrison in the capital but reports reaching here yesterday said that fighting was still going on and "decisive developments" were expected within 24 hours.

The insurrection began early in March when Concepcion, 125 miles north of the capital, was seized and established as insurgent headquarters.

Canada's Budget Designed To Encourage Initiative; Red Light Flashed on Prices

INDIA MAKES PLEA JEWS BE GIVEN VOICE IN DEBATE

Asaf Ali Also Demands Representation for Arabs of Palestine at Assembly

New York, April 30—(AP) — India reopened the Palestine debate here today with a plea to give the Jews a voice in the proceedings of the Special Assembly of the United Nations.

Noting that the Assembly's 14-member steering committee had heard the spokesmen of five Arab states present their views yesterday, Indian delegate Asaf Ali asked:

"Where are the representatives of the Jewish people who will be affected? Where is Palestine?"

Ali referred briefly to statements in the press that he had "taunted" British delegate Sir Alexander Cadogan yesterday by pressing for an explanation of Britain's intentions toward carrying out U. N. recommendations on Palestine and said "nothing was further from my thoughts."

Ali also demanded representation for the Arabs of Palestine.

Both the British and American delegations were reported opposed to Jewish participation with a vote-less voice in the Special Assembly debate as long is it is solely concerned with the procedural step of setting up an inquiry committee.

Both western powers intimated that their present position against non-member representation in the Assembly might be altered if the substance of the Palestine question is forced onto the Assembly floor by the Arab states' insistence on debating their demand for immediate independence of the Holy Land.

An informed source said the American delegation felt the United Nations was made up of states and that states alone could be heard on the floor of the Assembly in debate. The Jewish organizations which have asked to participate on a non-voting basis do not represent states and thus are barred by U. N. law from taking a vocal part, it was said.

They could submit their views to the U.N. or appear before any commission of inquiry, however, this source added.

The United States thus tipped its hand on a troublesome question which the general (steering) committee of the assembly must solve after it disposes of a vigorous Arab demand for a floor debate on the whole Palestine issue.

It was explained authoritatively that if the Arab demand were included on the assembly calendar over the objections of the United States and Great Britain, the American delegation would have to examine the situation again. The United States was said to feel that if the Arabs get the

Not Good Business to Charge All Traffic Will Bear--Abbott

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 30 —(CP)— In a budget designed to encourage initiative, to bring on a full-working effort — while at the same time he flashed business the red light on rising prices — Finance Minister Douglas Abbott sliced generally the personal income tax by 29 per cent, effective July 1.

His was a straight "taxation" budget.

It took him only one hour and 45 minutes to deliver the budget speech to a gallery-packed House of Commons last night.

And it was his answer to the taxpayers, the people whom the lean, sharp-talking Montreal corporation lawyer said would no longer support high taxation.

It was his answer to the grumbled mutterings of the people, complaining now of their personal ante to Canadian upkeep and it came under immediate fire of the opposition when J. M. McDonnell (PC-Muskoka-Ontario) financial critic, charged the budget was not soundly drawn.

In short Mr. Abbott's maiden budget did this:

Installed, effective July 1, income tax cuts ranging from six or seven per cent in the top brackets to 54 per cent for Canada's little men.

Repealed the excess profits tax of 15 per cent — but not until Dec. 31, 1947.

Big Reduction From '42

While for 1947 the budget changes meant personal income tax was reduced only by one-half of 29 per cent — still generally speaking—Mr. Abbott stressed that this meant a reduction of 51 per cent from the wartime peak of 1942.

He called it a "relatively simple budget" and was frank when he said:

"I am sure that were our present levels of personal income tax to be continued they would constitute a serious impediment to a full working effort and a brake on the drive and initiative of men and women."

To business he said this:

"I emphasize this...it is neither proper nor good business to charge all the traffic will bear... Canadian business enterprise is in a most favorable position. We all expect it to show its mettle, both in production and in marketing. We expect it to show its ability to keep down costs and prices.

"In its own long-run interest, as well as in the national interest, business must keep its prices down and its profits within reason."

Mr. Abbott, who works in his shirt sleeves, fingered his heavy-black-rimmed glasses as he spoke. He took advantage of applause from his side of the House to sip water.

PROBE CARETAKER'S DEATH

Toronto, Apr. 30 (CP). — An inquest has been ordered into the death of William Logan, 41-year-old caretaker who suffered fatal burns while stoking an incinerator in the Bank of Commerce building four days ago. A blast of flame from the incinerator enveloped the upper portion of the workman's body and he suffered first, second and third degree burns.

Mosquito Abandoned as Active Aircraft in Post-War R. A. F.

By DOUGLAS HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Apr. 30 (CP). — The Mosquito, the once spectacular, all wooden jack-of-all-trades of the wartime Empire air forces, has been abandoned as an active aircraft in the post-war R.C.A.F.

A victim of maintenance problems of the Canadian climate and of its own trickiness in handling, the "Mossie" thus joins the equally celebrated Spitfire as a Canadian has-been in the face of aeronautical advances that will make the jet-propeled Vampire the basic fighter plane of the R.C.A.F.

Their great bombing counterpart, the Lancaster carries on as a peaceful operational aircraft. The Spitfire had not been counted on in post-war planning but the Mosquito had, for auxiliary if not for active squadrons.

R.C.A.F. officials reported various reasons for disposal of nearly all their Mosquitos.

For one thing, their trickiness probably caused more wartime fatalities in take-offs and landings than in actual combat for their two-man crews. This would probably have extended into peace-time.

The few Mossies still owned by the R.C.A.F. are being given long-range tests at Trenton, with the so-called Cocoon plastics preservation methods and will be kept there in case they are ever needed for emergency training in fast, twin-engined planes.

Once the Empire's fastest plane, the Mosquito served in virtually every aerial war role, including night fighter and intruder, coastal command, fighter-bomber and reconnaissance.

Labor Troubles In Australia Cause Concern

By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Melbourne, April 30. (CP)— Concern is growing in Australia over labor troubles in Victoria, second-largest state, where transportation has been drastically curtailed and the state capital threatened with disruption of power and lighting.

The trouble grew out of a long-standing dispute between Victoria foundry owners and workers and was extended by withdrawal of members of the Australian engineers union from the Melbourne Metropolitan railway shops as well as the country shops of the Australian state railways.

Since extension two weeks ago of a strike for a wage increase of $3.20 a week it is estimated 75,000 men and women have been thrown out of work:

In Melbourne the result of the engineers' walkout has been idleness of suburban railways which carry thousands of people in and out of the city daily. Elsewhere in the state, railway service has been cut 75 per cent.

Melbourne tram service has been reduced, delivery of food hampered, and gasoline needed for operation of motor transport performing emergency services is becoming scarce.

The threatened withdrawal of engineers' union members from power stations would cut off electricity supplies.

The strike is the subject of vigorous debate at Canberra, where opposition members of the federal house are supporting a measure to establish penalties for lock-outs and strikes.

MANLY MacDONALD'S PAINTINGS WILL BE EXHIBITED

An exhibition of Manly MacDonald paintings will be the highlight on Saturday afternoon at a "Spring Fair" in the Y.M.C.A. under the auspices of the University Women's Club. Tea will be served, and home baked confections will be offered for sale. A picture now on display in the window of John Lewis Co., will be presented to the holder of the lucky ticket. Proceeds from this venture will be used for scholarships for Belleville students.

LOCAL RESIDENT LOSES OWN COAT AND TEN DOLLARS

The old adage that it does not pay to deal with strangers was appreciated to the full by a Sinclair Street resident on Tuesday when he fell victim to a "deal" which costs him ten dollars in cash and his Spring topcoat.

According to the police report the Sinclair Street resident had been approached by two strangers, purportedly from Nova Scotia who offered to sell him two topcoats for ten dollars. He agreed to the deal, paid over the money, and the three went to a cafe.

But while the Belleville man was absent for a few moments the two strangers disappeared and took with them the two overcoats they had sold and also the local resident's own coat.

No Official Report Yet of Rescue

Paris, April 30 — (Reuters) — The Canadian Embassy here has received no official report from French police about 24-year-old William Devane who was rescued from a raft near Brest after a 3-day attempt to reach his English fiancee, an Embassy official said today.

Devane told police at Brest that he came from Montmorency, Que., and had served with the R.C.A.F.

He had been trying for some time to rejoin his fiancee, Gloria Scinnow of Leeds, Yorkshire, and when the United States freighter Benjamin H. Hill, in which he said he was a stowaway left Le Havre for the United States Saturday, he jumped overboard onto a hastily-built raft.

The Embassy official added that if Devane could prove he was a Canadian citizen he would probably be repatriated.

Higher-Priced Cottage 40-Feet Nearer Lake

Toronto, Apr. 30 (CP).—A Lake Simcoe cottage owner today advertised two cottages for rent at $300 and $250 for the season. Asked what etras accompanied the higher priced cottage, he said it was located nearer the lake than the one commanding $250. Examination revealed the $300 cottage was 40 feet nearer the lake.

Since last fall, ceilings have been listed and rentals being asked for a number of cottages are considered beyond the pocketbook of the average wage owner. Another cottage was offered at $700 for the season. According to a local inhabitant "it didn't cost $500 to build it in the first place".

V.O.N. Honors Miss E. Smellie Before Retirement

By KAY REX

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Apr. 30 (CP). — Tall, gracious Elizabeth Smellie, who guided the destinies of Canada's Victorian Order of Nurses since 1924, has stepped down from her post as chief superintendent but never will she forget the ovation she received at the V.O.N. annual meeting from Canadians in all walks of life, and from the nurses she has led through the years.

From distant British Columbia to rugged Nova Scotia have come more than 300 representatives of the 103 V.O.N. branches to swell the order's two-day meeting into one of the largest conventions in its history.

There has been plenty of business to discuss for the coming year, but more than anything else delegates just wanted to shake in farewell the hand of the woman who has long been known as "the Canadian lady of the lamp".

"We shall all miss her as a good friend and wise counsellor," was the tribute which Viscountess Alexander, honorary president of the order, paid during yesterday's meeting.

And on behalf of Prime Minister King, Welfare Minister Martin spoke of Miss Smellie's "monumental work" as an inspiration to every true Canadian.

Closely Linked

As Miss Smellie's career has been so closely linked with the growth of the V.O.N., it was a fitting time for Beatrice Belcourt, Ottawa, chairman of the Education and Publicity Committee ,to announce yesterday that a history of the V.O.N., by the Canadian author John Murray Gibbon, will be published before the end of the year.

Delegates heard Dr. G. E. Hall of London, Ont., say that chronic illness is becoming a major health problem in Canada.

"I am not for a moment saying . . . that we should not provide hospital beds for ill people over 60 years of age," said the Dean of Medicine and president-elect of the University of Western Ontario. "But I do think . . . that chronic cases are using up an inordinarily high percentage of beds."

Dr. Hall advocated the building of rural hospitals for convalescents and chronics where "fresh air and sunshine would combine with good medical care to promote recovery, restore health, and provide some degree of happiness."

In her farewell message to the order Miss Smellie paid high tribute to Miss Maude Hall, Preston, Ont., who succeeds her as chief superintendent.

"I have never known her to forget anything she has undertaken to do, or say 'I can't' when asked to undertake some task," said Miss Smellie.

Governor-General And Lady Alexander Visit Toronto, Hamilton

Ottawa, April 30 (CP)— The Governor-General and Viscountess Alexander will leave here tonight for a two-day visit to Toronto and Hamilton.

Thursday evening, 150 guests will attend a reception given for their Excellencies by Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Ray Lawson at the legislative buildings.

On Friday, Viscountess Alexander will drive to Hamilton for a luncheon with the Women's Canadian Club there.

The vice-regal party will dine Friday evening with the Premier George Drew, departing later for Quebec.

Barbara Ann Wins Another Victory, Wins at Cribbage

Toronto, April 30. (CP)— At Christie Street Military Hospital yesterday, Barbara Ann Scott, world figure skating champion, chalked up another victory only this time the ice was replaced by a cribbage board. After presenting former R.C.A.F.-er Cal Pasternak, bed patient, with a mantel radio—phonograph combination, on behalf of the Bible Class of Grace United Church, she turned around and whipped "The Ward's Grand Champion" at cribbage.

Thurlow Council Donates $100 To Junior Farmers

Appreciative of the leading role which Thurlow Junior Farmers have taken in the community since their inauguration little more than one year ago, Thurlow township council will this year give a grant of $100 to the junior organization.

This was told members of the club at their April meeting which was attended by approximately 30 members. Feature attraction of the meeting was the showing of a film entitled "Planning for Prosperity," shown by Robt. Phillips of the Belleville Collegiate Institute.

Speakers for the evening were Walter Easton on fertilizers; Horace Casey on the care and repair of farm machinery and Gerald Eggleton on the treating and cleaning of seed.

Harry W. Burns, assistant agricultural representative, gave a talk on the Cream Producers' Association and suggested that all producers eligible to vote could do so. Seldon Homan, deputy reeve for the township gave an interesting talk on the place of the Junior Farmer in the community and congratulated the club on the role which the club had taken in the affairs of the community.

The Thurlow Calf Club was organized with the election of officers being as follows: Club Leader, Clayton Ritz, Corbyville; President, Harvey Homan, Corbyville; Vice President, Howard Elliott, Plainfield; Secretary, Ralph Swan, Corbyville.

Drill Operators Bore Hole Into Sealed Mine

By P. C. DUBOIS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Malartic, Que., Apr. 30 (CP).—Diamond drill operators today bored a hole into the sealed East Malartic gold mine at the 185-foot level but the mine's consulting engineer said it would be impossible to determine definitely until tomorrow night whether the fire that claimed 12 lives last week has been extinguished.

The engineer, Edward Futterer, said it was possible the fire, which began early last Thursday around the tenth level of No. 4 shaft, was out but that one test could tell nothing definite.

Thermometers were lowered into the hole to determine the temperature inside the mine shaft and a series of tests will be conducted before the mine is re-opened. Eleven of the 12 miners who perished are still inside the mine, about 2,000 feet underground.

The mine was sealed off during the weekend and No. 4 shaft was flooded in an attempt to extinguish the fire, burning in chemically treated timbers.

Mayor Armand Dumas of this northwestern Quebec town of 4,000 population announced today that Most Rev. Louis Rheaume, Bishop of the Timmins diocese, will officiate at the Requiem Mass for the ten mine victims of Roman Catholic faith. Malartic is in the Timmins diocese.

The town council, at a special meeting last night, adopted a resolution congratulating the rescue crews for their work and decided, too, to send letters of sympathy to the bereaved families.

A telegram from Sir Eugene Fiset, Quebec's lieutenant-governor, expressing the condolences of the governor-general and Sir Eugene was received during the meeting.

Falsely Confessed Murder of Persons Later Found Alive

Halifax, April 30 (CP)—Ralph J. Juteau, who confessed falsely he murdered his 16-year-old daughter, Marie, and her companion, Bernard Oakley, and thrown their bodies in a swamp, was fined $25 and costs in public court yesterday on a charge of committing a public nuisance. Juteau's daughter and Oakley, who had been missing from their homes since March 29 were later located by police in Montreal. They had been married.

Army's Operation "Spud" For Stricken Britain

Boston, April 30. (AP)—Operation spud—involving 821,000,000 potatoes—was completed yesterday as the United States Army's potato task force personnel returned to their normal duties after shipping 20 shiploads in 30 days to faminine stricken Europe. Thus, Army spokesmen said, Aroostock County, Maine, potatoes will help to keep alive thousands of European families until fall when the crop being planted now is harvested.

Sylvanus Apps Visits City And Mobbed by Group of Boys Clamoring for His Autograph

The tall dark good-looking stranger walked into the rotunda of the Belvedere Hotel here yesterday afternoon. He dropped his travelling bag by the desk and politely inquired if a room was available.

W. E. Fowler, on duty at the desk reached for the register.

"What is the name please?" he inquired.

The stranger spoke a word in a low voice.

At that moment a small boy entered the rotunda with parcels under his arm. He placed them on the desk, then cocked a quizzical eye at the potential guest. A look of amazement at first was replaced by one of puzzlement. He again turned his eyes on the pleasant face of the tall young man.

Fowler turned to the guest. "What did you say the name was?" he asked.

"Apps," replied the stranger.

Fowler looked up. Recognition dawned on him. "Oh yes, You're Syl Apps, of the Toronto Maple Leafs, I recognize you from newspaper pictures."

Gathers in His Chums

There came a shrill whoop from the small-boy who had stood goggle-eyed a short distance away. "Yippee, so do I," he yelled then darted like a streak of lightning for the door.

Apps, for that is who it was had stopped in Belleville on his way to Toronto from Kingston.

A few minutes later the hotel was invaded by a howling, shrieking mob of young boys. They stormed in the lobby armed with pencils and paper, looking for the famous Captain of the world's champion Maple Leafs. They found him.

Within a moment he was the centre of a happy shouting crowd of schoolboys clamoring for his autograph.

Flashing the famous Apps smile, the hockey star signed his name to pieces of paper of all descriptions. Then he sat down and gave the boys a thrilling story of some of his experiences.

Taken to Room

Then he realized that the hotel lobby was becoming crowded with the youthful admirers, so he retired to his room where he again held court to milling groups of boys. He talked with them again and finally promised that he would come to Belleville next week and see them all again.

And a few minutes later a grinning excited mob of schoolboys eyes shining with delight at seeing and hearing one of Canada's outstanding hockey heroes, left the hotel, racing to all parts of the city to inform their less fortunate chums of the experience they had had.

Ontario Provincial Police Office Moved to New Quarters

Headquarters for District Located in Building Formerly Used by Prices Board

After being located upstairs in the Chamber of Commerce building for more than two decades, the Belleville district headquarters of the Ontario Provincial Police moved into new and more commodious quarters today.

New offices of the Provincial Police are on Pinnacle Street directly across the street from the city police office and in the quarters formerly occupied by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. The address is 183 Pinnacle Street. The accommodation was rented as police offices when the Prices Board branch moved to Kingston one month ago and since alterations and renovations have been underway.

Ideally Suited

Having a floor area of 1,760 square feet, the new police quarters are ideally suited for the work of the department and for the accommodation of the staff. New partitions providing for private offices for Inspector W. A. Page, and the police sergeants, have been built in while the entire office space has received a fresh coat of paint.

In addition to private offices for the Inspector and police sergeants, the new accommodation will have a special room for the proposed police radio equipment which is expected to be installed in the near future. Also there is adequate storage space, while a consulting room has been provided. When police photography is adopted a special room for this equipment is available.

Reception Room

On entering the new provincial police office the visitor will enter a small reception room partitioned off from the constable's office by desk or counter with a swing door. There will be ample room in the main office for filing cabinets and constables' desks.

"Our biggest trouble for the first few weeks will be explaining that the Wartime Prices and Trades Board office has been moved to Kingston," laughed Inspector Page this morning as he supervised the moving of office furniture to the new quarters.

Even as the Inspector was talking a woman entered the new police office and enquired for rental forms. She was referred to the Kingston office.

TAKE OVER ADULT OCCUPATION

Toronto, April 30 (CP) — The Ontario Department of Education is to take over the Adult Education Program in the province tomorrow and during May will merge it with Community Programs in the Department's Physical and Health Education Branch, it was announced today. E. C. Cross, Acting Director of Adult Education, becomes assistant Director of Community Programs.

All Merchandise Reduced

To fight inflation the Percival Store in Belleville are cutting the prices of their entire stock by 15% with the exception of nationally advertised radios, washing machines and refrigerators, which are price-maintained by the manufacturer. Our opinion is that by stabilizing prices, and, if possible, lowering prices, workingmen will not be on strike continually for higher prices and as a consequence manufacturers' costs will not subsequently have to rise. It is a vicious circle and must be stopped. Many lines are being more drastically cut with reductions as high as 50%. On these pages are some of the more spectacular values. But remember the price of everything is reduced by at least 15%.

Body of Child Found by Boys Near Culvert

The newspaper-wrapped body of a fully-developed male child, believed to have been one day old was found lying in four inches of water by a culvert at West Moira and Cedar Streets at approximately 4.30 on Tuesday afternoon.

A group of small boys playing near the scene saw the feet of the infant protruding from a package lying on the rocks at the bottom of the culvert. They notified a nearby grocer who in turn notified police.

The body of the child, which was perfectly proportioned and weighed 7 1-2 pounds was found wrapped in a small blue blanket, then with a newspaper and then pushed into a paper bag.

Inspector Clare Hayes and Coroner Dr. Russell Scott went to the scene and after preliminary investigation, ordered the body removed to the hospital. Dr. Scott ordered a post mortem which was performed by Dr. J. J. MacKay, hospital pathologist last night.

A preliminary inquest was held at the hospital this Wednesday morning under Coroner Dr. Russell Scott, with Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan representing the Crown. Inspector Hayes, who is in charge of the investigation, was coroner's constable and the jury consisted of Messrs. George Wishart, foreman, L. A. Kells, Herbert Fox, Ralph Allison and Roy Hinchey.

After viewing the body of the infant by the jury, the inquest was adjourned until 8 p.m. Tuesday, May 20.

Police are conducting a rigid investigation in an effort to ascertain the identity of the person or persons responsible.

Moscow Decked Out For May Day Fete, Stalin to Attend

By EDDY GILMORE

Moscow, April 30 (AP)—The Soviet capital was decked out in holiday regalia today in readiness for tomorrow's May Day celebration—expected to be the biggest since the war.

Prime Minister Stalin, who was away on vacation during last year's May Day celebration, is expected to be on hand in Red Square to review the parade from Lenin's tomb.

Marshal Semeon Budyenny will formally receive the parade in the square.

All the public buildings in Moscow have huge portraits of Lenin and Stalin, and many display a full set of pictures of members and alternates of the Politburo.

It was announced this year that in the arrangements of the Politburo pictures, Stalin is the centre as usual with foreign Minister Molotov and Lavrenti P. Beria on either side. This elevation Beria to a position alongside Stalin is unquestionably no accident, and indicates Beria's steady climb in taking on more duties and more authority.

Beria, 47, was named a vice-president of the powerful council of ministers last February. From 1938 until early in 1946 he headed the Russian Secret Police.

The Soviet people will have a three-day holiday because of May Day and will not be required to go to work Thursday, Friday or Saturday. They will work next Sunday, however.

Tomorrow's parade will follow the pattern of many previous ones—military demonstrations of troops, cavalry, tanks, artillery, motorcycles and airplanes—followed by civilians.

OBITUARY

FRANK HIGH SR.

In failing health for the past five - and - a - half-months, Mr. Frank High, Sr., 39 Yeomans Street, died at his home on Wednesday morning. He was in his 59th year.

Born in London, England, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John High, the deceased came to Canada 26 years ago and of recent years had been employed as a clerk at Loblaws in Belleville. He was a member of Christ Church, and was a veteran of World War 1. In 1914 he enlisted with the A.S.C. Imperial Motor Transport and was wounded in 1916, returning to England in 1919. A few years later he came to Canada.

Surviving are his wife, the former Ellen Grinham and five sons; Frank High, Jr., of Belleville; Albert High of Trenton; George High of Long Branch, and Sidney and Walter High of Kingston. Three sisters and four brothers residing in London, England, also survive.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this newspaper.

ing to industry when the excess profits tax is removed.

Another typical labor comment was that of Cleve Kidd, research director of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO) at Toronto: The companies could well afford to continue paying excess profits taxes and cut prices at the same time.

And George Burt, Canadian director of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) said that welcome as the income tax cuts are, they would not eliminate the need for substantial wage increases, because of the mounting cost of living.

On the other hand, C. H. Carlisle of Toronto, treasurer of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, said that while repeal of the excess profits tax was good for industry it should have been made effective immediately. He said of the income tax reductions that the cuts were sufficient to ease the burden substantially "and yet retain the interest of the citizen in the government".

At Montreal Blair Gordon, former president of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, said the personal income tax cuts should help keep up purchasing power in face of higher prices.

The budget was "what the people were looking for," said Maurice Trudeau, president of Montreal Chamber of Commerce.

One feature of the budget that met with unqualified approval of mining officials was announcement that tax benefits in connection with exploratory work will be continued through 1948.

At Winnipeg the secretary of the Manitoba Chamber of Mines, J. P. de Wet, said "the ability to deduct sums spent on financing prospecting has been a valuable inducement in the past and I am glad the Minister of Finance has decided to continue it, since the need to prospect for mineral developments was never greater."

IN MEMORIAM

CULBERTSON — In proud and loving memory of a dear husband and father, Sapper John Culbertson, who was killed in action in Germany, April 30, 1945; resting in Holten, Holland.

Beside your picture we often stand,
With heart both crushed and sore,
But in the gloom the sweet words come,
"Not lost, but gone before."
God knows how much we miss you,
He counts the tears we shed,
And whispers, "He only sleeps,
Your loved one is not dead."
So we'll be brave, dear John,
And pray to God each day,
And when He calls us home to you,
Your smile will guide the way.

—Sadly missed and ever remembered by his wife, Mabel, and son, John.

CULBERTSON — In loving memory of a dear son and brother, Sapper John Culbertson, killed in action April 30th., 1945.

We do not need a special day
To bring you to our mind;
For the days we do not think of you
Are very hard to find.
If all the world were ours to give,
We'd give it, yet, and more,
To see the face of you, dear one,
Come smiling through our door.

—Sadly missed and ever remembered by Mother, Dad, Sisters and Brother.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Edwin Reid and family would like to take this opportunity of expressing their sincere thanks to friends, relatives and neighbors for the many acts of kindness, messages of sympathy, beautiful floral tributes and loan of cars, also to Grant Funeral Home, Dr. Branscombe; to Rev. Mr. Harback for his many acts of kindness and consoling words during their recent sad bereavement in the loss of a dear husband and father, the late Edwin Reid.

Mrs. J. Reynolds of Trenton, sister of the late Byron O. Lott, desires to convey her sincere thanks to his many friends and to her personal friends for the many acts of kindness and expressions of sympathy extended to her in the loss of her only brother; also for the many beautiful floral tributes.

How New Tax Works

Ottawa, April 30, (CP)—Announcing reductions in personal income taxes in his budget last night, Finance Minister Abbott gave the Commons three tables showing the percentage of reduction from the present rate taxpayers in each annual income bracket from $800 to $200,000 would enjoy.

They ranged from 54 per cent for a single taxpayer making $800 a year to seven per cent for a single taxpayer making $200,000 and from 54 per cent for a married taxpayer with no children making $1,600 a year to seven per cent for man in the same class earning $200,000.

Since the new tax rate is not effective until July 1 this year the actual reductions on 1947 taxes will range from 27 per cent for the lowest income bracket wage earners to four per cent for the highest.

In calculating the tables Mr. Abbott said it had been assumed that all incomes up to $30,000 were entirely earned incomes and that those over $30,000 included earned income of that amount and additional investment income to make up the total.

The minister said the taxpayer receiving Family Allowances must offset against his tax liability the amount of Family Allowance received for his children in order to arrive at his true net position. He gave this example:

Assuming a taxpayer receives the average Family Allowance payment of $72 a child, the taxpayer with an income of $2,500 and two children would find that under present rates his income tax exceeded his Family Allowance by $49 a year. But under the proposed new rates his Family Allowance payments would exceed his income tax liability by $14.00.

The tables: (Column headings: 1—Income; 2—1947 tax at present rate; 3—1948 tax at new rates; 4—Percentage reduction from present rates; 5—1947 tax six months at present rates and six months at new rates; 6—Percentage reduction from present rates.)

Basing his figures on the new Canadian income tax rate he proposed become effective July 1 compared with proposed new tax rates in the United Kingdom and the United States, Mr. Abbott presented the House three tables showing the relative positions of the single and married Canadian taxpayer with those across the border and in the U. K.

The tables:

SINGLE PERSONS

Income	$1,000	$2,000	$3,000	$5,000
Canada proposed tax	29	220	420	835
United Kingdom proposed	88	447	822	1,572

Canada proposed tax	70	270	670	1,990
United Kingdom proposed	231	696	1,446	3,821
United States proposed	106	258	55	1,619

MARRIED PERSONS TWO CHILDREN

Income	$2,000	$3,000	$5,000	$10,000
Canada proposed tax	36	230	630	1,930
United Kingdom proposed	125	500	1,250	3,634
United States proposed	—	93	388	1,376

Single persons, without dependents will continue paying taxes on annual incomes of $750 and over. Married persons, without dependents will continue paying on incomes of $1,500 and over. These rates were introduced in the 1946 budget and went into effect Jan. 1 of this year. The 1946 exemption rate was $660 for single persons and $1,200 for married persons.

The payroll deductions, aimed at taking 95 per cent of what a taxpayer should pay in a year, will, after July 1, have to conform with these new graduated rates of taxes:

"On the first $100 of income or any portion thereof, 10 per cent per annum; or $10 upon the income of $100; and 12 per cent upon the amount by which the income exceeds $100 and does not exceed $200; or, $22 upon the income of $200; and 14 per cent upon the amount by which the income exceeds $200 and does not exceed $300;

"Or, $36, upon the income of $300; and 16 per cent upon the amount by which the income exceeds $300 and does not exceed $400;

"Or $52 upon the income of $400; and 18 per cent upon the amount by which the income exceeds $400 and does not exceed $500;

"Or $70 upon the income of $500; and 20 per cent upon the amount by which the income exceeds $500 and does not exceed $3,500;

"Or $670 upon the income of $3,500; and 22 per cent upon the amount by which the income exceeds $3,500 and does not exceed $5,000;

"Or $1,000 upon the income of $5,000; and 26 per cent upon the amount by which the income exceeds $5,000 and does not exceed $6,500;

"Or $1,390 upon the income of $6,500; and 30 per cent upon the amount by which the income exceeds $6,500 and does not exceed $8,500;

"Or $1,990 upon the income of $8,500; and 35 per cent upon the amount by which the income exceeds $8,500 and does not exceed $11,500;

"Or $3,040 upon the income of $11,500; and 40 per cent upon the amount by which the income exceeds $11,500 and does not exceed $14,000;

"Or $4,040 upon the income of $14,000; and 45 per cent upon the amount by which the income exceeds $14,000 and does not exceed $17,000;

"Or $5,390 upon the income of $17,000; and 50 per cent upon the amount by which the income exceeds $17,000 and does not exceed $25,000;

"Or $9,390 upon the income of $25,000; and 55 per cent upon the amount by which the income exceeds $25,000 and does not exceed $50,000;

"Or $23,140 upon the income of $50,000; and 60 per cent upon the amount by which the income exceeds $50,000 and does not exceed $75,000;

"Or $38,140 upon the income of $75,000; and 65 per cent upon the amount by which the income exceeds $75,000 and does not exceed $100,000;

"Or $54,390 upon the income of $100,000; and 70 per cent upon the amount by which the income exceeds $100,000 and does not exceed $150,000;

"Or $89,390 upon the income of $150,000; and 75 per cent upon the amount by which the income exceeds $150,000 and does not exceed $250,000;

"Or $164,390 upon the income of $250,000 and 80 per cent upon the amount by which the income exceeds $250,000."

Butter Price Up Approximately 10 Cents Thursday

Ottawa, April 30—(CP) — An increase of approximately 10 cents a pound in the retail price ceiling on butter will be announced in the Commons this afternoon by Agriculture Minister Gardiner, it was learned authoritatively today.

The increase will become effective tomorrow.

It will replace the 8 1-2-cent producers' subsidy which has been paid to date on butter and which ends tomorrow.

By an increase of 10 cents, producers would be given approximately about 1 1-2 cents more a pound profit.

Mr. Gardiner also is expected to announce increases in the ceiling prices on cheese and possibly some other dairy products.

Stock Exchanges Not Affected By the Budget

(By The Canadian Press)

Steadiness on the nation's leading stock exchanges today seemed to indicate that financial men regarded the new Federal budget as neither a help nor a hindrance to Canadian industry.

There was little or no immediate effect of the budget indicated in trading on either the Montreal or Toronto exchanges and prices established no particular trends.

A Canadian Press survey of nation-wide reaction revealed qualified approval by industrial heads; disappointment of Trades Union leaders that income tax cuts were not greater.

Jewelers were "disappointed" that the budget did not altar the 25 per cent luxury tax on jewelry, Norman J. Leach, secretary of the Canadian Jewelers Association, said in Toronto. The last three months had shown a downward trend in jewelry sales.

The women had things to say about the budget and some of them didn't seem too pleased. Mrs. F. C. Burke, President of the Toronto Council of Women, protested lack of relief for working women.

Mrs. Burke said there were "many ways" to evade provisions which permit tax-free earnings of only $250 annually for married women. She thought "lack of relief actually encourages dishonesty."

full debate at this session which they are asking, some method must be found for the Jewish side to be presented.

The General Committee put on the agenda yesterday after a brief flurry of oratory a British proposal that a committee of inquiry be named to investigate Palestine and report to the regular assembly session in September.

Russia encouraged the Arabs by supporting their plea for the full assembly to debate the independence of the Holy Land. But the Russian approval was conditional, for the Soviet delegation said it was not taking a position on the issues involved. It said it merely recognized the right of the Arab states to be heard.

10 CARS OF LUMBER GIVEN ROYAL WELCOME

London, Ont., April 30 (CP)—A reception fit for a king almost will greet the arrival here late today of a 10-car shipment of 300,000 feet of lumber to relieve the shortage for housing in western Ontario. It is the first of 12,000,000 feet of lumber diverted to this territory from the export market by E. E. Johnston, lumber millionaire of Fort William.

The welcoming party for the lumber will include civic officials, the mayors of St. Thomas, Woodstock and Ingersoll, district legislators and Mr. Johnston himself. The first shipment was expected yesterday but was delayed in Toronto railway yards.

LAYS RESPONSIBILITY ON FAILURE TO REACH AGREEMENT

Toronto, April 30 — (CP) — R. E. G. Davis of Ottawa, executive director of the Canadian Welfare Council, in an address last night said a proposed nation-wide health insurance scheme remains inoperative "because of the failure of the Dominion and the provinces to reach agreement on their financial relations."

He told the graduating theology class at Trinity College:

"If the government re-introduces the plan, it will have to reckon with the increased opposition of many citizens whose chief interest in today's mood is a balanced budget and lower taxation."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto April 30 (CP)—Industrials made minor gains on a fairly wide front although moving in small lots in the early session of the Toronto Stock Exchange while western oils were more active for good gains in a handful of stocks. Golds and base metals weakened mildly. The action continued featureless, yesterday's budget release having little effect on the market.

Volume for the first three hours was 385,000 shares.

In the industrial lists good advances were posted by Brazilian 1 3-8 at 21 1-2, Canadian Breweries 1 at 25, Federal Grain PFD. 1 at 111, Gatineau PFD 3-4 at 110 1-2, Great Lakes Paper 1-2 at 27, National Steel Car 1-2 at 24 Steel of Canada 1-2 at 78 1-2, Canadian Industries "A" 7-8 at 23, Canadian Vickers 1-2 at 34 1-2, International Paper 1-2 at 45.

Mining issue losses predominated and the range widened.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, April 30—(AP) — The stock market reached for recovery today under the leadership of steels, motors and chemicals.

Industrials pushed ahead fractions to a point on early bidding only to settle into a narrow range as activity subsided. Another flurry of demand came after noon, bringing gains ranging to three points. Price changes were largely on the upside near the fourth hour

Showing the best advances were U. S. Steel, Republic Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Anaconda, Montgomery Ward, Du Pont, New York Central, U. S. Rubber, International Nickel, Eastman Kodak and American Telephone.

Canadian issues generally were on the upside but McIntyre was an exception, being off 5/8. Dome Mines was up 1/4 while C. P. R. and Distillers Seagrams each added 1/8. Hiram Walker was unchanged.

In the curb Lake Shore was up a fraction.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto April 30 (CP)—Cattle trade was dull on the livestock market here up to mid-session today with bids lower and too few to establish prices. Veal calves, hogs and sheep and lambs were steady. Receipts: Cattle 400, calves 700, hogs 500, sheep and lambs 50. Unsold from yesterday were 1,000 head of cattle.

A few butcher steers brought $13-$15, butcher cows $10-$12.25 with canners down to $6, fed yearlings were $14.25-$15.25.

Veal calves were $16.50-$17.25 with plain medium lights bringing $12-$15.50.

Hogs were dressed, grade A $22, grade B1 $21.60. Sows were $18.75 dressed.

Medium to good lambs brought $15-$15.50. Sheep ranged $7-$9.

HOGS

Toronto, April 30 —(CP)— Grade A, dressed bacon-hogs were unchanged at Brantford $21.85 delivered, at Stratford to farmers $21.85, to truckers $22 delivered and at Hull $22 delivered in markets reporting early today.

Percival's Fight Inflation

All Merchandise Reduced 15% or More

To fight inflation the Percival Store in Belleville are cutting the prices of their entire stock by 15% with the exception of nationally advertised radios, washing machines and refrigerators, which are price-maintained by the manufacturer. Our opinion is that by stabilizing prices, and, if possible, lowering prices, workingmen will not be on strike continually for higher prices and as a consequence manufacturers' costs will not subsequently have to rise. It is a vicious circle and must be stopped. Many lines are being more drastically cut with reductions as high as 50%. On these pages are some of the more spectacular values. But remember the price of everything is reduced by at least 15%.

JOINT AIR SCHOOL TO OPEN AT RIVERS, MAN.

REPORT TO "C" FLIGHT

The Canadian Army and R.C.A.F., together with Royal Canadian Navy personnel, are setting up a joint air school at Rivers, Man., which is expected to become operational some time in September. The highly complex problem of land-air defensive and offensive action will be studied and taught at one large school where navy, army and air force are to be completely intermingled. Shown above shaking hands are two of the first members of the school to arrive in Rivers: Lieut. A. W. Currie, of Edmonton, Alta., and Flight Lieut. C. D. Bricker, D.F.C., of Sudbury, Ont. Flight Lieut. Bricker was formerly commanding officer of No. 430 Fighter Squadron overseas.

SPECIAL U.N. SESSION ON PALESTINE UNDERWAY

Sen. Warren R. Austin, permanent representative to the United Nations for the United States, wishes Brazil's Dr. Oswald Aranha (RIGHT) luck, as he takes over his new position of president of the United Nations special assembly session on Palestine, at Flushing, N.Y. Dr. Aranha, former foreign minister of Brazil and a firm believer in the Pan-American Union, received 45 votes of the 54 cast. The special session will deal with the Arab countries' demand for immediate independence for Palestine.

Tardy Spring

Spring has lost considerable time owing to the cold weather which has hovered over the scene since the new season started. With May, the month of flowers, at hand, everyone realizes that spring is advanced already six weeks and has reached the time when there should be considerable sign of growth.

However as a Middlesex farmer, quoted by the London Free Press, who, when he was asked a couple of weeks ago if he thought winter would ever end, said "well, it always has," spring will shortly come along into its full stride. With the best of forecasting it is possible to tell the weather only a few days ahead and it is not possible to change the weather, whatever the wishes of man. Nature has her own moods, her own rotation of conditions may vary but "the succession of seedtime and harvest set down in the Book of Genesis generally continues."

All people believe this at heart, however much they may be annoyed by the persistence of cold weather when they think the season should be more advanced. Even in the long past spring was sometimes tardy. Oliver Goldsmith, the genial Irishman, wrote the line that has been true at times, "winter lingering chills the lap of May" and the myriad-minded Shakespeare in the glorious days of Queen Elizabeth had to write of one spring, "rough winds do shake the darling buds of May and summer's lease hath all too short a date."

But this is not always so. It is the exception and very often a retrograde season suddenly changes its attitude and the season is here in its full power.

May will bring the flowers which April has helped to call out of the earth. Milton says:

"Now the bright morning star, day's harbinger,
Comes dancing from the east and leads with her
The flowery May, who from her green lap throws
The yellow cowslip and the pale primrose.

Hail bounteous May, that doth inspire
Mirth and youth and warm desire;
Woods and groves are of thy dressing,
Hill and dale doth boast thy blessing,
Thus we salute thee with our early song
And welcome thee and wish thee long."

May will be welcome following the rather disappointing and laggard April. Earth's growth will be seen in garden, field, lawn and woods.

Agriculturists realize that the hesitant month of April having passed the spring season is considerably shortened and nature will have to go to work with might and main of all her forces to get in the growth that is necessary for crops on which mankind feeds. Summer has never failed yet nor has autumn and latter spring itself will no doubt help to make up for early April's lost hours.

The farmer is a great student of nature. He knows her moods and knows her well, takes the weather as it comes and sows and reaps his harvest.

On nature and the agriculturist we depend.

Passing of the Warspite

His Majesty's Ship Warspite, veteran of two worldwide wars, in which she helped to save humanity from German aggression, has gone to her long home in the deep. Her guns had been taken away and controlled by a small crew she started her last voyage to be broken up. But that was not to be. When her crew were on leave, a storm arose and in the rough cradling of nature she was swept upon the rocks near Penzance, Cornwall. There she will remain where the sea will sound her knell.

This is one of the ships that earned a name which will be remembered years hence. It was in Jutland Battle where she was damaged. She went to the Dardanelles. For two decades she was a ship of the fleet and when the World War II broke out, was found ready, having previously been refitted. In the second struggle against Hun imperialism and aggression this ship saw service of note. She led at Narvik, was at Crete and off Malta. This vessel took part in the first great step against the Hun, the first step that showed that the Allied Powers had made the beginning of the end of Hitlerism. She was engaged in North African waters and off the Normandy coast.

There is something about a ship that has immortality. Warspite had that quality to a supreme degree. In her the heroic sailors of Britain found a home and a powerful weapon of offence and defence. Those who were of her crew in her long service will never forget this ship which at the close of her life, seemed to have her own way to choose how she should pass out of the life of action. Nature befriended this doughty champion of liberty and sent the tempestuous waves which selected for her her last abode, not in the breaker yards of the Clyde, but where the waves will sing her requiem forever in that channel, which she helped to maintain free for all the world.

Saving Grace

Some people save string. Some people save costs. There's life-saving and face-saving — and this weekend there's daylight saving, says Christian Science Monitor.

Not for everyone ,of course. But millions of Americans will sacrifice one hour of sleep on Saturday night in order to win a dividend of a hundred golden hours through the summer. Then as autumn closes in, they'll even be given back the lost hour's sleep. There's a safe investment for you!

But our country-dwellers will have none of it. What looks crystal-clear to the city worker at the end of day looks lark and obscure when the farmer starts his chores. His is the seamy underside of these solar speculations.

So his system and the other system will exist side by side, and neither will declare atomic war on the other though each will cause some inconvenience to the other, and summer will muddle gaily through in the face of outraged logic. Praise be for the saving grace of common sense!

Discover New Blood Group

Two Sydney (Australia) doctors and one science graduate employed by the Red Cross Transfusion Service, discovered a new blood group while testing a woman's blood for classification in one of the four standard groups. The scientists prefer to remain anonymous for the present.

They say their discovery is only of scientific interest, but they are still examining it to see if it will be of pathological importance. The new group is said to be quite different from the four standard groups. Its value in blood transfusion cannot yet be assessed, but the practical use may be found for it at any moment. The discoverers believe that research will ultimately make it possible to identify a person as accurately by blood type as by finger-print.

Troubles With Language

A little knowledge of English is a dangerous thing, as is illustrated by a sign reported above the alms box of a church in Milan, Italy. The good clerics hoped to induce American soldiers to contribute but their prose would give any God-fearing GI a turn:

"Appele to Charitables — The Brothers (so-called of Mercy) ask some slender arms for their hospital. They harbor all kinds of diseases and have no respect for religion." —This Week Magazine.

The Snow-Clad Peaks

There is a benediction in the snow-clad peaks for those who contemplate them. A serenity, a sense of timelessness, seems to flow from them, laving the human spirit, washing away petty care. They give forth a cathedral calm, inviting restfulness and assuaging troubles. It is not alone the sensitiveness of hue they catch from a declining sun, nor the softening of line that comes with dusk, so much as an impression of strength rendered less rugged by the partial mists of distance, says Victoria Times.

JUST FOLKS

HOW TO PLEASE 'EM

The women long for pretty things,
For bracelets, necklaces and rings
And bonnets new.
But men their happiest smiles will wear
If they can get a beefsteak rare
Or Irish stew.

The women find their happiness
In various articles of dress
From stylish shops.
But men are different, as a group.
Best pleased are they with onion soup
Or thick lamb chops.

Oh, men, lest love may fade away,
Supply your wives with trinkets gay
And fashion's suits.
Oh, women, if their love you'd hold
Remember what your mothers told:
"Just feed the brutes."

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why do so many Chinese go into the laundry business?

Apparently Chinese immigrants in the United States and other Western countries originally went into the laundry business because that trade required practically no capital and very little if any formal education and they had an aptitude for that kind of work.

The violent clashes on the Pacific coast in the last half of the 19th century taught the Chinese lessons that they did not soon forget, and temperamental and language barriers led them, particularly the Cantonese, to restrict themselves largely to trades in which they could be their own masters and in which there would be few contacts with Westerners that might result in misunderstandings and ultimate deportation.

Some writers say that during the California gold rush of 1849 and the years immediately following some of the gold-miners, unable to hire persons to do menial work of any kind, sent their clothes all the way to Hawaii and even to China to be washed, and to this they attribute the predilection of the Chinese to the laundry business.

It seems improbable that this practice was very common and that it contributed materially toward influencing the Chinese to enter this particular trade. But washerwomen were scarce on the Coast in those days and they charged as high as $20 a dozen to wash clothes.

Many Chinese, barred from other occupations, found the laundry business an easy and profitable one to get into. Family and provincial ties are strong among them and those who arrived later naturally fell into the occupation of their kinsmen, friends and countrymen already established in America.

At one time so many Chinese in the United States were engaged in this occupation that some people presumed that this had been their business in their native country and that the Chinese there all made a living by taking in one another's washing!

TUDOR MINSTREL WINS AT NEWMARKET

Newmarket, England, April 30—(Reuters)—Tudor Minstrel won the 2,000 guineas, first of this season's British flat racing classics, here this afternoon.

Saravan was second. Sayajirao was third.

So close was the race for second and third positions that a photo-finish was called — first time the camera has been called in to decide a major British turf event.

EVEN JUDGE DIDN'T KNOW

Milwaukee, April 30 — (AP)— He didn't know it was illegal to put a "for sale" sign in the window of his truck parked on a city street, Carl Deusier told District Judge Harvey L. Neelen.

"Well," answered the judge, "I've been up here eight years and I didn't know it either. Sentence suspended."

HE PICKETS THE PICKET

Binghamton, N. Y., April 30 — (AP) — Two pickets walked side-by-side in front of a restaurant here, but the placards they bore were, in effect, back-to-work.

One man, whose sign declared "This is a free country," said he was picketing the picket whose sign charged "unfair" treatment of organized labor.

DISORDERLY CONDUCT CHARGES LAID

Newark, N. J., April 30—(AP)— City police didn't appreciate the efforts of Louis Urban, 51, who took it upon himself to direct traffic yesterday at Broad Street and Raymond Boulevard, one of the busiest intersections in Newark. Urban was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct.

Nabbed by Police.
Kenneth Simpson, 33, of Toronto, who was captured by Orillia police after smashing his way through three plate-glass doors while attempting to flee from Madden's jewelry store.

Greatest Aerial Search in Canadian History Under Way

Vancouver, April 30 — (CP) — The greatest aerial search yet organized on Canadian soil was scheduled to start at dawn today for a missing twin-engined Trans-Canada Air Lines transport which disappeared early Tuesday with its crew of three and 12 passengers.

Two United States Coast Guard aircraft will join planes from T.C.A., the R.C.A.F. and the Nanaimo, B. C., Flying Clug in a sweep over coastal mountains. A helicopter is standing by in Seattle and a group of civilian paratroopers, formerly R.C.A.F. air rescue personnel, arrived here last night from Edmonton.

Eliminating one false clue after another, searchers yesterday concentrated on the rugged ..anaimo Lake area between Mount Arrowsmith and Mount Moriarity.

It was here that residents told of a "noise like thunder" heard shortly after a plane, apparently in difficulties, was reported off the coast.

It was raining heavily at Vancouver as the plane, in-bound from Lethbridge and piloted by Capt. William G. Pike of Vancouver and Toronto, messaged the airfield at 11:33 p.m., but landing conditions were not considered difficult.

"It was a routine check. The pilot's voice was clear, his tone was normal. There was nothing to indicate trouble," Kenneth St. John, control tower operator said. The transport should have landed minutes later but instead it vanished without a trace—T.C.A.'s first serious mishap sinme 1941 when nine passengers and three crew members were killed in a crash at Armstrong, Ont.

600 Employees Of Massey-Harris Stage Sit-Down

Brantford, April 30 (CP)—Officials of the Massey-Harris farm implement factory said today that 600 foundry workers were on what the company termed a sit-down strike arising from the discharge of 24 pig-iron pourers who allegedly walked off the job and left foundry pots partly filled with molten iron.

An official said the pourers had demanded a change in the rate and method of pay, left their jobs without notice and had been discharged. He added it was "an unheard of thing" for a pourer to leave his job while there was molten metal in the foundry equipment.

"These men pour the moulten pig-iron from the cupola. As a result of their action, foremen and other men have had to work desperately to get the cupolas cleared of the molten metal. Otherwise it would "freeze" and cause great damage.

"The company has no other alternative than to discharge the men for their action. They were backed up by their union and as a result the income of nearly 600 men has been stopped.

"These men (pourers) are earning up to $1.20 an hour, a rate as high as that paid by other firms for similar work. The company has suffered from these sit-down strikes on other occasions and will not continue to do so. The plant will be closed until such time as the men agree to return to work without those who have been discharged.

INSURING THE BABY'S VITAMIN INTAKE.

Formerly infants or young children were immunized against diphtheria by one injection, against lockjaw (tetanus) by another injection and against whooping cough by still another injection. Now a single "shot" with triple toxoid, given preferably when the baby is six months old or not long thereafter, immunizes or protects the baby against all three diseases, at least for a year or two. It is advisable in most instances to give the child a "booster" shot of the same triple toxoid again at the age of two years and a third and final injection at the age of five years or before the child enters school.

Formerly, too, it was a comparatively complicated problem to insure the baby's vitamin intake—that is, to be certain that the baby received adequate daily rations (not doses, for vitamins are not medicine) of the vitamins that are essential for good nutrition, growth, functional efficiency, health and of course happiness—essential not only for health and happiness in youth and mature age as well.

Now it is a simple matter to provide the baby all of the essential vitamins by clipping the end from a capsule and squeezing the contests into milk, the baby's modified milk formula or any other liquid—orange juice or tomato juice, for instance.

In an earlier edition of the Brady Baby Book there were numerous suggestions of means of insuring the baby's vitamin intake —the complications in vitamin feeding when the earlier edition was prepared remind us now of the arithmetic, algebra and crossword puzzle work involved in the modification of milk for the baby twenty or thirty years ago. That fancy work seems amusing now—but what the doctors and baby specialists didn't know then about nutrition they had to conceal by prescribing all those "scientific" monkey-shines in measuring so much of this and so much of that, where today we just give the baby good pure milk with or without a little water or sugar or cereal gruel or fruit juice.

It is worthy of note that this simplification of the problem of providing vitamins for the baby has come about as a result of (1) more accurate knowledge of the nutritional requirements, (2) development of new solvents or dispersing agents—which make the fat-soluble vitamins A and mix readily with milk or other liquid instead of adhering to utensils or bottles and (3) new skill in the technical uses of gelatin and plastics.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Silvery Scale Disease

Some years ago we read in your column about vitamins for psoriasis, tried the suggestion and it helped. Now the trouble has developed again but can't remember what vitamins or how to take them.

(Mrs. G. F.)

Answer—Send stamped self addressed envelope and ask in writing (no clipping please) for pamphlet "The Silvery Scale Disease."

High Heels

Do high and spike heels tend to injure a person's feet or body?

(Louise W.)

Answer—Yes. They're all right for occasional wear, all wrong from everyday use. Wearing high heels tends to make you walk like a horse, develop swayback, rear projection, dowager belly, etc. The more times you play around in low heel shoes, moccasions, sneaks or barefoot the better for health and figure.

Orange

Does freshly opened canned orange juice contain less vitamin C than freshly squeezed orange juice?

(J. S. M.)

Answer—Yes. Canning process necessarily destroys some vitamin C. Freshly opened canned juice or freshly squeezed juice contains more vitamin C than the same juice will contain after it has stood in refrigerator for hours. In any case eating the orange is always better than just drinking the juice, mollycoddle. Eating the orange is good natural cleaning for the teeth, and gives you more vitamins than you can possibly get from drinking the juice.

CANADA'S BUDGET

Position Stronger

Leading to the tax changes, in a Commons obviously expecting pleasant news, the Finance Minister said; "In terms of basic economic fundamentals Canada's international position is stronger today than at any time in history."

The working force was greater, it was more highly skilled, more fully employed and the international debt since the beginning of the war had been reduced by 35 per cent. Never before had trade been more favorably on Canada's side than in the last year.

This, then, was the basis on which taxes could be reduced. Veterans were back. They now are getting taxable salaries—not tax-free pay and allowances.

Canada was not a country used to high taxation. It had reached that only through wartime needs. It would stand it not much longer. There now was an "acute tax consciousness."

"One must reach the conclusion that those who bear them are not ready to support income taxes on the present scale," said the Finance Minister.

"Moreover, I am proposing to ...concentrate this reduction almost entirely in the field of personal income tax...proving so unpopular and causing difficulty."

Quoted Figures

He called his steps "drastic reductions" then he quoted figures to show that from the wartime peak of 1942 taxes would be, under the new schedule, down 51 per cent, and quoted figures to show that a married taxpayer with no children under present rates would pay $663 on a $4,000 salary and under last night's budget would pay only $470 and in 1947 would pay $366.

The Finance Minister said he avoided reduction in exemptions. It would mean imposition of indirect taxes to get necessary revenue.

Eschewing tariff changes because of the current Geneva Trade Conference, Mr. Abbott declared Canada's trade position had never been better. Debt had been reduced by 35 per cent since the beginning of the war and in trade, productions and income things had been so well-maintained that returns exceeded forecasts.

Predicts Surplus

"We can afford tax reductions without creating a deficit in our accounts," he declared. "It will mean not an increase in our debt but rather a small prospective reduction in debt.

Then he spoke truly to Canadians.

They were a people, he said, who through the years had enjoyed low taxation, a situation changed by the war years. Now, in peacetime, they were not ready to support "income taxes on the present scale."

Under the tax program he outlined amid applause from the House and smiles from the gallery Mr. Abbott forecast revenues of $2,290,000,000 expenses of $2,100,000,000 and a prospective surplus of $190,000,000.

But the latter, he said, would only be, if no tax agreements were signed with Ontario, Quebec and Nova Scotia. Were those signed, his prospective surplus, he said, would be $80,000,000.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

.. TO KISS OR NOT TO KISS? ..

Two letters from teen-age girls take up the subject of casual kissing from two different angles.

One of the girls is giving the pros and cons of the matter a lot of serious thought. She writes:

"This is a matter that I hardly ever thought much about until I read a certain book on the subject of kissing. This book is very strong against it, and says that it is very wrong for a girl to kiss a boy, and that it would probably sooner or later ruin her reputation.

"I am a young teen-age girl, and try to keep my reputation as clean and nice as possible, and I have been wondering about this thing for quite a long while. I will very greatly appreciate your opinion about it. I am sure I will feel better then."

The other girl has quite a different point of view. No scruples worry her. In fact, she only mentioned kissing in passing, as a side issue of her main question, which was about how to give successful parties.

This is what she had to say:

"I would like your advice about a problem that is bothering the girls I go with. The majority of us are 16, and at the age when parties are frequent.

"A recent party I went to was a flop because of its poor beginning. I would like to know exactly how you should start and carry it on. Usually, they end in all kissing and then pairing off, which is O.K., but it usually makes the party dead." And this girl signs herself "Anxious".

Well, even if "Anxious" takes casual kissing as nonchalantly as she appears to do, she may be interested in what I have to say to the girl who is a little less certain of its advisability:

While promiscuous kissing may be out of the "morals" category in which public opinion automatically placed it a generation or so ago, it is certainly in just as dubious a place as it ever was, so far as good taste is concerned. The average person who sees a girl indulging in a little mild "petting" today does not immediately put that girl down as one whose reputation has necessarily gone to the dogs. But the chances are that she would be instinctively labeled "cheap", and what girl wants that kind of label?

If the book mentioned by the girl who wrote the first letter quoted actually did go so far as to say that it was very wrong for a girl to kiss a boy, and that it would ruin her reputation, then I think the writer of the book was putting things a little stronger than necessary. Plenty of nice girls occasionally give a boy who has taken them out for the evening a light-hearted friendly kiss when they say goodnight. That's one thing, and when both parties to such a kiss accept it for just what it is and don't try to make anything more out of it, I can't see that it does any particular harm. But even at that, I wouldn't make a practice of it. And where a girl is ready to kiss any boy any time anywhere, or considers that a certain amount of intensive petting is the proper way to say good night, that's another matter. That's the sort of thing that does get a girl an undesirable reputation some times.

My own feeling is that it's a good idea to save your kisses for the person who is going to mean something to you. And don't take that to mean any person who happens to seem particularly attractive to you at the moment, either. You know very well the sort of person I mean.

As for the girl who's worrying about how to give a party, I suggest that she write to one of the women's magazines who make a specialty of providing such ideas. There are all sorts of group games that are much more fun and infinitely more wholesome than the business of "kissing and pairing off."

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Important Occasions Honored by Individual Invitations.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. My husband and I are going on a short trip, and a day or two after our return we are to celebrate our twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. Our daughter is to have Open House at her home, and we will have this invitation put in the newspaper. Is this proper? And if so, is it also proper to telephone to our friends informing them about this?

2. Are the friends who call asked to take off their wraps? If so, would it be advisable to have one person answer the bell and to take charge of the wraps? And do the arriving guests come to us or do we go from one to the other of the guests to greet them?

3. Would it be best to have the refreshments served buffet style, or should the refreshments be served to the groups of guests as they arrive?

4. There will undoubtedly be some gifts brought, and would you advise having these on display? And am I right in thinking that later a thank-you note should be written for each gift?

5. We have several friends who sing particularly well. Would it be proper to ask a few of them to sing during the At Home, by way of entertainmant?

H. S.

1. Since this will be such an important occasion, why not honor it by featuring charming invitations to bid your friends to come to the celebration? For example, you (or your daughter) may buy a supply of large, white cards, and in silver ink, write the invitations like this:

1922 1947
Mr. and Mrs. Robert Smith
at home
Saturday, the tenth of May from four to seven at the residence of
Mr. and Mrs. Henry War
Five York Road

2. Yes, assign someone to open the door and to direct the guests to where they are to leave their wraps. Then the guests come to where you and your husband and your daughter are standing to receive the guests.

3. Have the refreshments served buffet style. The anniversary cake (iced with the dates, 1922-1947, and perhaps with your and your husband's initials) may be the centerpiece of the table.

4. It would be natural to show the gifts as you open them, but since some guests who didn't thing to bring gifts might be made very self-conscious by seeing that you had planned to "display" the gifts, I suggest you don't plan to make the gift-showing too obvious. And yes, you should, a day or two after the party, write a thank-you note to each donor.

5. I'm never completely enthusiastic about such a plan . . . for it changes the nature of the occasion from a casual give-and-take of conversation and "re-union" to an occasion where one must politely listen to "entertainment." However, you are the one to decide whether you wish to dramatize the singing of solos, or the receiving and congratulations of your guests, and giving them all a fine opportunity for chatting together to their hearts' content.

Fashion Flashes

VERY SIMPLE - LOOKING little frocks are often very expensive. Pure silk, in beige, is used for a long, very full-skirted dinner dress, utterly plain, with soft shirtwaist top that has a little round collar. It looks like a print design, but the fabric is embroidered all over with tiny white sequins.

A CONTENDER for evening honors is the long evening wrap of white woolen. A handsome model, belted in back, has long, tapering revers and fastens with a large gilt button at mid-waist. Small replicas of the big button are used for the belt.

TRANSITION HATS, for those that don't like a Spring hat until it really is Spring, are just beautiful. One designer uses mauve ribbon woven into a snug, head-fitting, off-the-face cap, misted with mauve-pink veiling.

WHAT TO WEAR with a dinner suit or a separate skirt often is a problem. One solution is a hand-knit sweater of mink-brown wool threaded with gold to form long panels over the shoulders.

LITTLE EVENINGS in the Spring sometimes call for some pretty fancy dressing, even if the occasion is not a strictly formal one. A peplum bolero of snowy white ermine, to be worn with a black frock — either ankle-length or street-length — is a grand idea. One girl has had such a bolero made from her ermine evening wrap, together with a little melon muff.

ALL THE WAY, it's pleats this Spring. Beige silk crepe is used for a nice little afternoon frock. The shirtwaist bodice has pleated shoulder yokes. The skirt is pleated in front, with hip stitching for extra effect.

WEDDINGS

HUTT—MILES

At eleven o'clock on the morning of Friday, April 25, the marriage was solemnized in Holloway Street United Church, of Margaret M. Miles, Reg.N., youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Miles, Belleville, and Harold A. Hutt, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Hutt, Montreal, with Rev. C. A. Perkins as the officiating clergyman.

The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Miles of Belleville.

The bride wore a grey gabardine suit, with orchid flower hat and blouse, black shoes and bag, her corsage being of orchid sweetpeas and pink carnations. Mrs. J. C. Miles wore a suit of brown gabardine, with yellow hat and blouse and her corsage was of Talisman roses.

Following the ceremony a reception and dinner for the immediate family and guests was held at the New Queen's Hotel. Receiving with the bridal party was the bride's mother, wearing a suit of navy blue with white accessories, and a corsage of sweetpeas and carnations. The groom's mother assisted, wearing a suit of turquoise blue wool with black accessories and a corsage of roses and sweetpeas.

The dinner table was centred with a wedding cake, and was made doubly attractive with Spring flowers.

Following the reception and dinner, the bride and groom left for a motor trip to Woodstock, Buffalo, N.Y., and other western cities. They will later reside in Montreal, Que.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. Hutt, Miss Shirley Hutt and Mr. J. Shovelan, all of Montreal.

Prior to her marriage Mrs. Hutt was entertained by the nurses of the Belleville General Hospital with a tea and miscellaneous shower at the residence; Mrs. R. F. Bowden and Mrs. J. C. Miles were joint hostesses for another tea at the residence of Mrs. Miles, April 18th., in honor of the then bride-elect.

RICE—FAUL

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Faul, 5th Concession Sidney, at one o'clock, on Saturday, April 26, when Rev. H. H. Hillis united their youngest daughter, Keitha Evelyn, in marriage with Gordon Henry, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Rice, of Delhi, Ont.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a brown suit with matching accessories and wore a corsage of American Beauty roses. Her only attendant, Miss Shiela Power, wore a black ensemble and a corsage of pink roses. Harry Faul, brother of the bride acted as groomsman.

After a wedding dinner, amid showers of confetti and good wishes, the happy couple left by motor for Delhi, where they will spend the week with the groom's parents. On their return they will reside in Belleville.

Make-up is an art itself requir-ing a carefully selected ensemble of beauty aids

By HELEN FOLLETT

IF a woman must be a complexion counterfeiter placing over her sacred map a synthetic peaches-and-cream coating, let her cultivate the keen eye, good judgment and a steady hand, so that what she achieves will pass for real beauty coin.

If she has good sense in her head she will realize that poster-like blushes, crayoned eyebrows and too heavy a bleeding-heart lip smear are not enhancing. Make-up technique must not be crude. It must be slick and subtle.

There's nothing like a little experimental research to find the right items, the most flattering colors. One can trot-trot to a cosmetic bar—nearly all large department stores have them—and play with the contents of open containers. What the girls behind the counter don't know about beauty aids simply isn't worth finding out.

Constant Changes

Ideas of pulchritude are constantly undergoing changes. At the present time, the high priestesses of the cult are suggesting practical hairdos that still have style and make-up that follows the laws of nature when nature is kind and lavish.

On young women a certain amount of make-up gives chic, an appearance of sophistication, being the mode. On older women, when skillfully applied, it lends a marvelous air of rejuvenation for which all the sisters beyond the age of forty are striving. Just as one is not guilty of an artistic offence, is all to the good.

Stimulant to Spirits

Make-up does not embrace the complexion and end there; it acts as a stimulant to the spirits. When a woman feels that she looks her best, she is at her best. She has more poise and confidence, is in command of all of her forces of charm.

She who is too lavish with cosmetic paint and calcimine, defeats her own ambitions, because an overload of the contents of the make-up box will produce an appearance of fatigue and brittleness. Often when trying to make herself look too young she will make herself older than she is. Make-up is an art in itself.

Women's Activities

BAPTIST WOMEN'S MISSION CIRCLE

The Women's Mission Circle of Victoria Ave., Baptist Church met at the home of Mrs. H. P. Wellbanks, James Street, Tuesday evening, with twenty-five ladies in attendance.

The president Mrs. C. A. Campbell conducted the opening exercises, and Miss Violet Hanley read the Scripture lesson, Psalm 91.

Following the business period, Miss Nurse presented Miss Hanley with a Life Membership certificate in the Mission Circle of the Baptist Church. The Topic was presented by Mrs. Harry Thompson dealing with the educational work in Bolivia, South America, sponsored by the women of the Baptist Church, and the development of schools in that area.

Mrs. Campbell delighted her listeners with a short story on "prayer", entitled "The Whispering of the Trees", an allegory on the life of Christ from His birth in Bethlehem to the cross of Calvary.

Mrs. Fred Gordon dismissed the meeting with prayer.

U. S. LIQUOR BILL $8,700,000,000

Washington, April 30 — (AP)—Americans spent the unprecedented sum of $8,700,000,000 on whisky, beer and wine in 1946, the Commerce Department reported today. That was an average of $89 for each person over 18 and the total was $920,000,000 more than the previous record, set in 1945.

Young Women's Guild Studies Education Work

The Young Women's Guild of Tabernacle United Church met at the home of Mrs. R. G. Coulter, on Monday evening.

There was a good attendance and an interesting discussion on some phases in present day education.

Mrs. W. J. Harrison, the president, took charge of the business of the meeting.

The committee in charge announced that two parcels had been sent to the French child, who is the protege of the Guild. Mrs. Coulter led the devotional period and took for her theme "The Bible and Education", showing the attitude of the children of Israel to education as shown in Deuteronomy, Proverbs and down to the boyhood of Jesus.

Mrs. Archibald led the discussion period on the work of the royal commission on education. She showed how these commissions date back to 1839 when Lord Durham made his report to the British Government. A more recent report the "Rowell-Sirois" was studied in the Guild a few months ago.

These commissions gather material from all available sources. They are very expensive but they do create interest and stir public opinion.

The commission on education started in 1945.

List of Members Given

Mrs. Cole gave a list of the members and a short biography of each. This showed a very wise selection of a cross section of our citizens. Already they have had many meetings and received many briefs from interested organizations.

Mrs. Coulter spoke of briefs sent in by the Ontario Educational Association and the United Steel Workers of America.

Mrs. Archibald also gave a short report of meetings at O.E.A. which were addressed by Sir Fred Clark, of England, who spoke on the new English Education Act. He said that education leads to liberty and security while laissez-faire leads to totalitarianism. Only educated people can survive. Effective education is a long process of learning to live in a complicated world.

The meeting closed with a social half hour.

Friends Honor Newlyweds With Surprise Party

Rawdon (Special) — On Saturday evening the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. John Bateman was the scene of a large gathering in honor of their daughter, Margaret, and her husband, "Bill" Taylor, recently married.

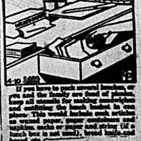
Rev. C. C. Brazill was Master of Ceremonies, and spoke briefly in appreciation of the bride and her family. A fine program was presented when Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Broadworth and Mr. Gordon Green led in community singing. Four piano solos were contributed by Mrs. John Sheridan, Misses Ruth Mumby, Barbara Brazill and Catharine Wright, and were all much appreciated. Mrs. Gordon Green read a humorous selection; Messrs. John Scott, Ewart Bailey and Reeve John Morrison spoke briefly; Mrs. Percy MacMullen entertained with a recitation, while Misses Barbara Ryan, Bernice Ryan and Frances Morrison sang "When the Blue Moon Turns to Gold."

An address of appreciation, signed by Misses Laura Shortt, Lelia Donnan, Helen Bailey and Jerrise Sutherland, was read by Mrs. George Sutherland and Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were presented with a large array of miscellaneous gifts, for which they graciously thanked their friends. Wedding gifts were also on display.

Dainty refreshments were served and all present enjoyed a social hour.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor will reside in Cornwall, Ont. Margaret will be greatly missed by her many church and community associates.

Wife Preservers



If you have to pack several lunches, or you and the family are fond of picnics, keep all utensils for making sandwiches and outfitting the lunch basket in one place. This would include such articles as waxed paper, paper containers and napkins, sacks or paper and string (if a lunch box is not used), bread knife and board, etc.

Home and School Association Holds Euchre, Dance

Friday, April 25th, a euchre and dance, sponsored by the Cannifton-Corbyville Home and School Association was held in the Cannifton Orange Hall. The committee responsible for this very successful affair was Mr. Norman Curlette, chairman, Messrs. Alden Boyd, Lee Bradshaw and Geo. MacDonald.

The hall was very tastefully decorated with the school colors of green, black and yellow, by a committee of the women under the convener, Mrs. George Jones. The guests were welcomed by the president, Mrs. Ralph Plumpton. Twenty tables of euchre were in play the winners being ladies' 1st, Mrs. Geo. Sharpe; 2nd, Mrs. Irene Sheffield, consolation, Mrs. Wilma Bradshaw; Men's 1st, Mr. Geo. Duesberry, 2nd, Mr. Gardner Poste, consolation, B. Latchford. Lone hand prize, Mr. Geo. Duesberry. All prizes were donated by the members of the executive. An orchestra comprised of Mrs. Earle Gilbert, Mr. Ward Hall, Mrs. Ward Hall and Mr. Keith Roblin, very capably provided music for round and square dancing and their services too were donated, which was much appreciated. The winners of the spot dance prize were Miss Hilda Treverton and Mr. G. Denyes. The door prize donated by the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Co., was won by Mrs. Carl Sheffield.

During intermission the "Donovans" entertained with several dance numbers which were very well received.

A bountiful lunch was served by the social committee under the chairmanship of the Mrs. Jordon Latchford.

This was the first social event of the Cannifton-Corbyville Home and School Association and the response was very gratifying to all concerned.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Jones and Miss Noreen Jones of Belleville, were supper hour guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Jones on Sunday.

Mr. Douglas Alyea had the misfortune to lose a three-year-old heifer on Saturday. The animal climbed on a hay stack and fell between the stack and the barn and was smothered before being found.

Fashion Flashes

COOL AND COMFORTABLE cottons are ready for summer playdays. Deep pine green gingham, cross-barred in pink and white, makes a nice resort or country club dress. The midriff blouse has a high, round neckline, dorpped shoulders and big, puffed sleeves. The skirt is gathered and is rather longer than the usual daytime length.

Extreme elegance marks many beautiful costumes now coming into the shops. Navy wool crepe makes an afternoon dress which has a low waistline, a pleated skirt, long sleeves and an off-shoulder neckline. For outdoor wear the neckline is concealed by an abbreviated jacket of chartreuse wool.

CONVICTED OF SECOND DEGREE MURDER

Kalamazoo, Mich., April 30 — (AP) — Lester Carpenter, 2C, married and a father, was convicted of second degree murder yesterday in the death of four-year-old David Pierman, who was a county ward in the Carpenter home. The state charged that David died from the effects of a beating by Carpenter after the lad had soiled his clothes. Sentence was deferred.

Britain to Test Supersonic Plane Model

London, April 29 (AP)—British scientists revealed today some of the secrets of a model airplane enthusiast's dream —an 11-foot, rocket-propelled flying model that may solve aviation's $64 question:

What happens to an airplane when it reaches and passed the speed of sound?

Sir Ben Lockspeiser, chief scientist to the ministry of Supply and co-ordinator of Aeronautical Research, told a press conference that the 887-pound model would be tested over the Scilly Islands, southwest of England, in about five weeks.

"From these and later tests," he said, "we hope to learn enough to build a full-sized, radio-controlled aircraft that will fly at speeds faster than sound."

Sir Ben said the torpedo-shaped, stub-winged model would be launched from the belly of a Mosquito bomber flying 400 miles an hour at 36,000 feet. An auto-pilot will guide it and radar will trace its path.

After its rocket motor takes over, the little plane is expected to reach a speed of 1,000 miles an hour or more.

Montreal Gunman Still at Liberty

Montreal, April 29 —(CP)—Charles Henry Hackman, 24, was still at liberty today, 24 hours after he held up his employers, Lunham and Moore (Canada) Limited, and escaped with $14,036 in cash.

Detectives reported last night that Hackman, employed by the shipping firm for six weeks, visited his 22-year-old girl friend after staging the armed robbery and both disappeared.

Horace G. Collins, chief accountant for the firm, related that he had returned from the bank with the payroll, destined for crew members of the S.S. Angus Dale docked here, and Hackman picked up the briefcase from where it lay on a desk.

Mr. Collins asked "Where are you going," and Hackman, revolver in hand, replied "Stay where you are," grimly adding, "if anyone moves he's a dead duck."

Hackman fled along a corridor, passed an elevator and dashed out the front door.

Safe After Twenty Days in Wilderness — Missing for twenty days after their airplane had been forced down in the Northern Alberta Wilderness, L. J. Blakesley, business man of Bismarck, North Dakota, and Pilot Spencer Addeman (right, with beard) are now back in Edmonton and resting in hospital. They had been given up for lost until Addeman flashed a call to the outside world by radio after stumbling exhausted into a Hudson's Bay trading post at Little Red River.

Drew Says Ontario Will Not Enter Into Separate Negotiations

Toronto, April 29 — (CP)—Regardless of whether new proposals are contained in Finance Minister Abbott's budget address today, the Ontario government will not enter into separate negotiations for a Dominion-Provincial agreement, Premier Drew said today in a statement.

Fundamental differences could be settled only by a general conference, he said. He commented on a decision of the Nova Scotia Legislature to recess until after presentation of the Federal budget and added that no satisfactory agreement could be reached by "separate, secret haggling."

"Since this government took office in 1943 we have constantly sought to impress the vital necessity of a general over-all conference which would establish a basis of general agreement among all governments for the collective use of their full constitutional legislative powers in all

HEAVY GUARD ON RUBBER ESTATE

Penang, April 29 — (CP)—Police maintained a heavy guard today over a North Malayan rubber estate owned by the Malayan-American Plantations — affiliate of the United States Rubber Company where police clashed yesterday with 300 India-Chinese laborers. One laborer was killed, 5 injured and two police hurt in the skirmish.

The disorder resulted when police tried to arrest Chinese laborers who refused to disband a mass meeting.

Old Bomb Injures Three Persons

Westfield, N. S., April 29—(CP)—A five-year-old aerial practice bomb, believed to have been jettisoned from a plane which crashed near here in 1942, caused serious injuries to three persons yesterday when it exploded in the home of Delbert Fancy. The bomb had been found Sunday by Fancy's two small sons and was being examined by a friend of Fancy when it went off.

Mr. and Mrs. Fancy suffered severe cuts about the head, chest and arms and Nathan Scott, 35, was injured in the left side. Scott and Fancy were both blown through the door of the badly damaged house.

Dr. H. S. Smith, who treated the injured persons, said it was "a miracle" that all three had not been killed.

House Levelled By Terrific Blast

Pittsburgh, April 29. (AP)—A heavy blast destroyed a home and shook the whole of nearby Mt. Pleasant township at 5 a.m. E.D.T. today, shattering windows and bringing hundreds of persons to the scene. No one was reported injured, however.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wunderlich was levelled by the explosion which apparently was caused by gas.

The Wunderlich couple was believed to have detected the odor of gas and fled the house just before the explosion.

Hurls Self Through 3 Plate Glass Doors

Orillia, April 29 — (CP)—The daring and inconvenience of hurling himself through three plate glass doors didn't help 33-year-old Kenneth Simpson of Toronto escape police and today he was charged with shopbreaking and theft.

Police said Simpson was disturbed while leaving Madden's jewelry store on Orillia's main street early today and in an effort to evade apprehension, he jumped through an office window, then crashed three plate glass doors in succession.

Constable Mervin Wright arrested Simpson as he crashed through the third door leading to the street. Police said they found in a bag on the store roof and in Simpson's pockets, 28 watches, fountain pens, pencils and more than 100 rings. Total value of the loot was estimated at $1,000.

Lack of Coal Miners, Equipment Is Basic Ill of U.K. Life

Britain, sapped by two wars and a great depression, is fighting for her national existence in an unprecedented economic crisis. This is one of a series of stories giving Canadians a detailed picture of the crisis, its causes, effects and the battle being fought to overcome it.

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, (CP)—Sending coal to Newcastle isn't absurd in post-war Britain—it could come true.

"If we can't get coal abroad to relieve our necessities, by all means we will do it," Prime Minister Atlee told the House of Commons.

To cut down on consumption of coal-produced electricity and gas, government spokesmen said, domestic savings—perhaps even rationing—and allocation to industry according to their importance to the nation will have to be continued for two or three years.

Planned distribution of coal under government direction probably will have to continue even longer.

And this year passenger transport services are being cut 10 per cent from 1946 to save coal and provide extra locomotives for fuel trains.

That is the measure of today's fuel shortage in a country which became a great industrial nation because it had great quantities of coal, which still gets 95 per cent of its power from coal, and which used to export enough coal to pay for all its imports of wheat.

Despite the promise of atomic energy, there is no substitute for coal, now or in the near future. Getting enough coal is the United Kingdom's fundamental problem.

Economically, it holds the key to future prosperity. Politically Attlee's Socialist government would be in danger if next year saw a repetition of February's calamitous industrial shutdowns.

Plenty of Coal

There are plenty of coal resources in the United Kingdom. Arthur Horner, secretary of the National Union of Mineworkers, said South Wales alone has 5,000,000,000 tons of known workable depth—enough for more than 100 years. There is coal in Kent, Durham, Yorkshire, Cumberland, the Midlands and all the North.

The trouble is to get it mined. For that there are not enough miners, not enough machinery, not even enough pits.

For decades, and particularly the mining industry has declined, its history punctuated by labor bitterness and unrest. From 1,230,000 in 1925, employment has slumped to 700,000 now. Production has dropped from 243,000,000 tons to about 185,000,000.

And in the same period, demand at home has increased.

For three years, with exports almost eliminated, the United Kingdom has been living on a coal over-draft. It drew on deep-mined stocks by more than 1,000,000 tons in 1943, 1,500,000 tons in 1944, 3,600,000 tons in 1945 and 4,000,000 tons in 1946; and it also used 2,250,000 tons of opencast and coal stocks.

Last autumn distributed stocks were less than 11,000,000 tons, at least 4,000,000 below the safety level. When the worst winter in 50 years arrived breakdown of fuel supplies was inevitable.

This year's production target is 200,000,000 tons—enough for bare essentials. The N.U.M. and Lord Hyndley's National Coal Board, which since January 1 has run Britain's 1,500 mines, have given a "pretty firm guarantee" that the goal can be reached.

No Overnight Answer

Nationalization is the Attlee government's solution for the labor unrest and lack of co-ordinated development, but it is no overnight answer. In addition, extra unrationed foods and consumer goods are being sent to mining areas as an added incentive for miners to earn more money and reduce absenteeism, almost 20 per cent in some areas. New homes for miners are getting priority. A five day week has been promised.

It is too early yet to estimate the success of these measures but two signs are encouraging: the drain of manpower has been stopped and production has been rising slowly since last July when the N.C.U. was first established.

By the end of this year, manpower will be up to 730,000, including some Polish ex-servicemen. Some mechanical equipment will be imported and more will be manufactured at home.

But mechanization takes time and the N.C.B. estimates 15 to 20 years will be required to bring the industry to peak efficiency. Some British pits are operated today as they were half a century ago, with out-dated hand tools and without the aid of mechanical haulage.

Much reorganization will be needed. Through the war some mines were closed to concentrate effort on the most productive seams. Lack of room at the coal-face is a serious difficulty. New pits will have to be opened and already drills are probing deep underground in search of new, rich veins.

Rescued on Raft 25 Miles Off French Coast

Paris, April 29 — (Reuters) — William L. Devane, a Canadian rescued from a raft on which he had been drifting in the English Channel without food or water for three days, told police when he was brought ashore that he left a United States vessel on which he was a member of the crew to make a desperate attempt to rejoin his fiancee in Britain.

Devane, a former member of the R.C.A.F., said he was from Montmorency, Que. He was rescued about 25 miles west of Brest late yesterday, Paris newspapers said.

He had left the 7,198-ton United States ship Benjamin H. Hill soon after she sailed from Le Havre Saturday. He had made a raft out of three life preservers and a ladder and lowered himself into the water with it.

Streets Littered In 'City' After Demonstration

London, April 30 — (Reuters)—Streets in the main business quarter of London known as "the city" usually clean and trim in the early morning, Tuesday were unswept and strewn with litter following Monday's decision by some 1,000 City of London Corporation members of the National Union of General and Municipal Workers to "strike forthwith."

The strikers include crematorium attendants, grave diggers, lavatory attendants, garbage men, roadsweepers and jettymen. The stoppage was called after a deputation had discussed with a special labor committee of the City of London demands of the National Union of general and municipal workers following the recent strike of 10 market constables and 32 other workers at Billingsgate fish market. The strike had been in protest against the promotion to sergeant of George Turner, a market policeman.

C. Curtis, chairman of the City of London branch of the Union, said in an interview Tuesday that the special labor committee Monday had conceded most of the strikers' claims, but they had not agreed to demote Turner.

Meanwhile, some 76 ships, many laden with food, were held up by the strike of an estimated 12,000 London dockers, stevedores and lightermen, who came out on Sunday in sympathy with the 3,800 Glasgow dockers, on strike for the fifth week over a dispute concerning 500 "redundant," or surplus men.

Discover Plot For Mass Escape Jewish Prisoners

Jerusalem, April 30—(AP) — Authorities of Jerusalem prison announced Tuesday discovery of a plot for a mass escape of Jewish prisoners.

They said preparations "must have covered a long period of time," and included plans for breaching interior walls of the prison and "partial penetration of exterior walls of the prison."

Unofficial estimates indicated there are about 100 Jewish prisoners — both political and non-political in the prison, which is located in the centre of Jerusalem. Early last week two condemned members of the Jewish underground — Mayer Feinstein and Moshe Barazani — committed suicide in a death cell of the prison by blowing themselves up a short time before they were to be hanged.

Two months ago the prison was the scene of rioting between Arab and Jewish prisoners.

Fire Originates Under Street, Loss is $200,000

Berkeley, Calif., April 30—(AP)—Fire of a mysterious origin which apparently started beneath the street caused damage estimated at $200,000 in mid-town Berkeley Monday night. Fire Chief William Meinheit, who provided the estimate of loss, said the 4-alarm blaze completely burned out the Santa Fe Railway ticket office, quarters of a fur company, florist, and barber shop, and the Berkeley office of the Oakland Tribune.

Kingston, April 30 — (CP) — A stone mason, Alexander McClung, 63, of Hamilton, was found dead in his hotel room here Monday night. He was working here on a hospital construction job.

London Letter

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 30. (CP)—London's middle-class homeless have been looking hungrily at the old Nash terraces around Regent's Park. They are being made livable again at quite a rate.

But the homeless aren't going to get them. The 120-year-old houses, much as they were planned at the end of England's war against Napoleon, are being restored for the ever-growing overflow from Whitehall.

For £500,000 the Ministry of Works expects to get 500,000 square feet of office space, "or enough for 10,000 civil servants." Most of the work is concentrated so far on Cumberland Terrace where five big buildings—considered to be among the best ever designed by Architect John Nash are being made ready for the Ministry of Transport.

This is the only part of London which remains complete as it was planned more than a century ago; complete, that is, except for a few cruel gaps where German bombs fell during the bombing. It was an area designed as a unit to serve as a link between the city to the south and the open country to the north.

Social History

The Nash terraces are certainly part of England's social history—but the architecture has been both praised and criticized. One authority wrote that they exhibit all the worst follies of the Grecian architectural mania which disgraced the beginning of the (19th) century." Others have put Nash on the level of Sir Christopher Wren.

All agree that he did discover the possibilities of stucco in building and gave it the widest possible play.

Now at least some of the terraces are being saved. However a government-appointed committee under Lord Gorell has just reported after a year's study that the planned expenditure is not nearly enough.

Almost all the 374 houses are affected by dry rot, some to the point of being riddled with it, says the committee. Restoring them may cost more than £4,000,000 if they are to be modernized and converted at the same time; and a technical expert estimates that even then their life will be not more than fifty years.

MASS PICKETING PROHIBITED

Denver, April 29 — (AP) — Mass picketing by striking telephone workers in Colorado was prohibited today under an order issued by the State Industrial Commission. The orders followed two mass demonstrations yesterday in front of headquarters of the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Surely you are not one who counts gains without deducting costs. If you do, you must be getting it out of a pump. So, consider that the doubling of a slam these days abuses sound principles.

Look at the relative profit and loss in the doubling of slams. Even if the doubler has a couple of aces and a bunch. Even if he has a seeming trump trick and an ace with other good-looking stuff.

Nowanights and many afternoons will players make most of the slams they bid. Even if no more than half succeeded, doubling them is dumb. Doubler risks taking more of a loss than he expects to gain.

If slam is defeated, what does doubler stand to win. Usually no more than 50 or 100 extra points. In some cases, it may be 200 or 300, rarely more than that. So what?

If the slam makes, declarer stands to gain much more from the doubler. And good players redouble. One made redoubled slam pays more than is lost in several defeated doubled slams.

Furthermore, doubler shows where the danger lies; maybe just enough to help a doubtful slammer. Makes a difference of more than 1000 points. A big forfeit on mere hope of a measly 50 or 100.

You heard me raving about this a few days ago. But it is worth repeating. Maybe if you got sick of listening to it, the danger will flash across your mind when you need it most. I need it, too.

Such thoughts are prompted by deals like this:

NORTH
♥Q J 7 5 3
♦K 9 7
♣K J 10 6

WEST	EAST
♠8 6 4	♠Q J 10 7 3 2
♥A K 9 8	♥10 6 4 2
♦J 2	♦10 8 4
♣Q 9 8 3	♣None

SOUTH
♠K 9 5
♥None
♦A Q 6 5 3
♣A 7 5 4 2

Recall that south reached six clubs. Well, west doubled and the north hand redoubled. West led the heart king and you can see how south took all 13 tricks. The gruesome details will be told.

Every time you open your slam mouth, somebody would like to stick their double in it.

The Movie Column

By RON GADSBY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 30 (CP)—This makes the whole thing jell. At least in our eyes it does. But perhaps we'd better explain.

Currently showing at the better theatres in the country is a bill of goods served up in Hollywood fashion as "The authentic story of the men in the O.S.S.—the United States Secret Service—in the Second World War. A blast like that is enough to make you smell an eager press agent and you wonder about its authenticity. The film, of course, "13 Rue Madeleine."

There is Jimmy Cagney and Annabella and they are enmeshed in what begins as a more or less documentary piece and then they scuttle off up the sideroad of romance, drama, et al. So you wonder just how authentic the piece really is. You wonder, that is. I don't have to wonder any more.

There is a man of our acquaintance who was a member of the group that actually trained the O.S.S. boys. He saw the film.

In "13 Rue Madeleine" there are scenes that stemmed from a training given to American, British, Canadian, Yugoslav, Belgian and Italian volunteers received at a school close to Toronto.

Our informant tells us that the British Lieutenant-Colonel whom you see pictured in the film is a Hollywood likeness of a one-time man-about-Toronto and other cities in Canada. He is the officer who was borrowed at the request of the White House to lay down the syllabus of training for Americans who dropped into France to organize the Maquis and to coordinate their efforts with these of the invading forces.

A lot of those lads didn't come back; a lot of them did. "13 Rue Madeleine" is a tribute to them and a nice one. It must be when one of their numbers says so.

That's good enough for me.

Square, Gardens Good Attraction At Sydney Show

Sydney, Australia (CP)— A big attraction at the Sydney Royal show this year, the homes and gardens exhibition represented a "model suburb of tomorrow," set amid a square of formal gardens and rockeries. Twenty women, working steadily for a month, built the square and gardens, planned to scale, around the model homes, some of which are six feet high.

The women made six different types of gardens. A central fountain bore a giant figure of Spring, the work of the Sydney sculptor, Mrs. Annis Laeubli. The gardens include an ornamental, formal and English garden, a rose garden, a "milady's garden", and a cascade. English type hedges were made to separate the gardens, and to accentuate the design.

Workers built with wood and wire mesh the basic shapes of formal ornamental trees, shrubs and clipped hedges, and women covered the frames with a thick coating of young ti-trees. When this was done, a topiarist clipped the ragged ti-tree into the shapes of animals of birds.

For the same gardens, six women averaging 500 flowers a day, made 30,000 artificial flowers, including delphiniums, poinsettia, iris and wistaria. Scattered about the exhibit were 6000 potted plants and about 300 miniature trees and shrubs planted in tubs below the ground level. The thousands of plants for this exhibit, plus the labor used to display them, cost about $1,750.

Fascinating Houses

The model houses in the exhibit were as fascinating as the garden. Made entirely of plaster cast and timber, they were complete to such details as modern circular clothes-lines and curtained windows. Two of the model homes were designs which won first and second prize in a recent home-planning competition.

India's contribution in dress materials, handbags, evening bags, exquisite silver filigree dressing table sets, toilet preparations and scents, caused much interest among women visitors to the empire section of the exhibition. Mrs. N. Rahman, whose husband directed this section, effectively draped models sari-fashion and western fashion, to illustrate how Australian women can use India's rich brocades, colorful georgettes, embroideries and jewelry.

Another section of special interest to women was the occupational therapy exhibit, arranged by the New South Wales State handicrafts committee of the Country Women's Association. It included the making of handcraft materials from the raw state. It showed, for example, how wool is dyed with vegetable colors, spun to the desired thickness, and finally woven on a hand loom.

BABY SITTERS' DIRECTIVE

Chicago, April 30 — (AP) — The Fairteen Club, an organization of high school girls, has issued this "directive" for the benefit of all present and future baby sitters among its members:

Do—homework, read a book, check the baby every half hour, knit or sew.

Don't—Dress sloppy, turn radio on loud, invite boyfriend in to jitterbug, raid ice box or make a lot of 'phone calls, hold the baby over the gas stove to dry its diapers.

OPPOSE AMALGAMATION

Toronto, April 30 — (CP)—The ladies don't think much of a proposal to amalgamate Toronto's now independent departments of health and welfare. The Women Electors' Association voted to oppose such a merger, demanding the two departments co-ordinate without curtailing their services.

AT THE McCARTHY — Three great stars meet again in their all-time, good-time hit! Wallace Beery, George Raft and Jackie Cooper return in "The Bowery," 20th. Century-Fox's encore triumph which opens today at the McCarthy Theatre, along with "Sun Valley Serenade," featuring Sonja Henie, John Payne and Glen Miller and his orchestra.

NationsNowKnow How Soviet Policy Works

New York, April 30—(AP)—Soviet leaders, says John Foster Dulles, are using political penetration "to get the kind of Germany they want."

The chief Republican adviser for the United States at the recent Moscow conference, Dulles said in a radio broadcast last night that the American delegation, while disappointed at conference results, "did not come home empty-handed," adding that an "asset we bring back is better understanding of how Soviet foreign policy works."

"It depends little on getting results by diplomatic negotiation. It depends much on getting results by penetrating into the political parties and labor organizations of other countries . . . Soviet leaders have such confidence in these methods that they are willing to let Germany again become a great industrial power. They are using those methods now to get the kind of Germany they want."

AT THE BELLE — George Raft turns detective, and has a new leading lady, Virginia Huston in the unusual mystery melodrama, "Nocturne," featuring Lynn Bari. Belleville's favorite comedian, Leon Errol, in his newest and funniest comedy "Follow That Blonde," is a special added attraction.

Night Fighters Try to Intercept Mystery Craft

London April 30 (AP)—Recurring reports of a midnight "ghost plane" swooping out of the east at tremendous speed gave newspapers a sensational aviation mystery today but R.A.F while admitting the whole thing was "slightly mysterious," refused to get excited.

Eyewitness accounts said mystery craft, first plotted by radar early in January, zooms over the East Anglia coast—as though it came from the continent—and disappears inland at a speed of 400 miles an hour or more.

What is even more odd is that the plane has never been seen making the return journey from England to the continent. R. A. F. night fighters have tried regularly to intercept the "ghost plane" but so far have been unsuccessful.

This particular unknown craft is down in the official records as X362, "X" being the RAF symbol for a plane that hasn't been identified but may be at any time.

TREATMENT TO COMBAT etc

Chicago, April 30 — (AP) — Treatment of dairy cattle with female sex hormones to combat milk fever was reported today in the current issue of the North American Veterinarian. The magazine said the hormone stilbestrol and similar hormone products, when administered 24 hours or more before a cow calved, "largely prevented the occurrence of milk fever" and, if given after the onset of fever, prevented relapses in most cases when used in conjunction with injections of calcium gluconate solution.

Doctor Outlines New Treatment Stomach Ulcers

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

Chicago, April 30 — (AP) — A new treatment for stomach ulcers, which in effect dusts a soothing powder over a distressed stomach, was described to the American College of Physicians today by Doctors Leo L. Hardt and Leonard P. Brody, of Loyola School of Medicine, Chicago.

The medicine, in the form of tablets, are compounded of powdered aluminum, powdered magnesium (the two lightweight metals) and mucin, which is one of the stomach's natural secretions.

All are common medical preparations, but the technique of applying them is new. The two metals are in use as antacids, meaning chemicals that counteract acidity. The mucin is mixed with them because when the powder gets into the stomach the metals cause the mucin to form a sort of paste that spreads over the stomach membranes. It does not coat completely, but it concentrates somewhat on the face of ulcers.

There is no direct medical effect. Instead the paste neutralizes stomach acids to some extent, and slows down the digestive action of the natural pepsin in digestion. Given in tablet form, the paste remains in position for several hours. If given in liquid it does not work, but leaves the stomach promptly.

Dr. Hardt said that 34 ulcer patients have been treated. The tablet remedy was given for four to 12 weeks to each person. He said that relief from pain and discomfort was almost immediate. Since completing their treatments, the longest three months ago, these people have been free from discomfort. In two cases large ulcers disappeared.

Lessons May Be Well Worth Cost Says Engineer

Cambridge, Mass., April 30—(AP)— An engineer who studied Japan's panicky attempt to hide its aircraft industry underground says the United States should start now building test plants below the surface—and then should bomb them to destruction.

The lessons to be learned defensively and offensively may be well worth the cost in the long run, says S. Paul Johnston, wartime chief of the aircraft division of the United States strategic bombing survey, in an article published today in the May issue to the Technology Review, edited at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"To build and destroy on such a scale may be a shocking bit of business to the average citizen, and it is," Johnston says. "But it may well be the only means, short of the hazards of actual war, to provide answers that we may some day need—desperately."

Dispersal underground by the Japanese "came too late to be affective Johnston says. They "made the mistake of waiting too long to begin operations."

"There is no need at the moment to put our industries underground," Johnston concludes. "But we must lay adequate plans for that eventuality and should develop, with the least possible delay, a certain amount of experience so that we will know how and where to proceed when emergency comes upon us."

Used Her Own Hair To Repair Heirloom

Harrismith, South Africa (CP)—An heirloom veil repaired with human hair was used by a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Pattinson when she was married recently.

The veil had been used by several of her ancestors. It had, however, developed a few small holes and "invisible menders" could do nothing with the veil. The threads were so fine that they had nothing to match it.

Mrs. Pattinson eventually removed several long hairs from her head, and repaired the veil so beautifully that not a mark is visible. This has also enhanced the sentimental value of the veil.

DROP IN CHICAGO ACCIDENTS

Chicago, April 30 — (AP) — Traffic accidents killed 2,410 persons in the United States during March, a drop of 14 per cent from the same month last year, the National Safety Council reported yesterday. The March toll brought traffic deaths for the first three months of 1947 to 6,920, compared with 8,240 for the first quarter of 1946, a drop of 16 per cent.

TRAPPED IN FLAMING MAIL PLANE

Bellefonte, Pa., April 30—(AP)—Trapped in the flaming wreckage of an airmail plane which crashed near Bellefonte airport, two men were burned to death yesterday before rescuers could drag them to safety. A spokesman for All-American Aviation, Inc., operating the mail line, identified the dead as Gearhart Porter, 35, pilot, and Robert Schneider, 23, mechanic, both of Pittsburgh.

PULL TOGETHER SPIRIT ASKED OF U.K. LABOR

By JOHN DAUPHINEE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 29. (CP)— A Socialist government that can't impose direct control on labor must persuade 7,000,000-odd trade unionists to sacrifice voluntarily the job-protecting pratices for which they fought for years.

What the United Kingdom must have is greater individual output from its working force. There is no hope of getting enough extra manpower to meet the nation's production goals without it.

"There now is no place for industrial arrangements which restrict production, prices or employment," said Prime Minister Atlee's economic White Paper last month. Accordingly:

1. Labor is being asked to work with foreigners brought in from Europe, an "import" it has always opposed on grounds that only Britons should get British jobs.

2. It is being asked to work on new pay systems including "incentive bonuses" for high-speed work, a scheme banned in most industries to protect labor from so-called exploitation and work shortages.

3. It is being asked to limit demands for higher pay and shorter hours to cases where they will bring increased output.

4. It is being asked to move from non-essential to more necessary jobs, even though the work may be harder and conditions worse.

Avoid Conflict

But Attlee and his cabinet must rely on cooperation from organized labor, avoiding any direct conflict with the Trades Union Congress which provides the biggest bloc of Socialist voting strength.

Critics of the government's policy claim this is the weak link in the whole post-war production plan.

During the Second World War, labor was directed to essential work under emergency orders that still are in effect but are not—and cannot—be used. The Attlee government must do by roundabout means what Winston Churchill's coalition government could do by force, with the obvious justification of German bombs.

Control over employers instead of workers is a large part of the Socialist answer. Allocation of coal, electricity and raw materials can be manipulated to limit employment in luxury and semi-luxury trades. Government licences for new factories and machinery can have the same effect.

Government help will be given to the less pleasant and heavier industries to improve their working conditions. Special concessions may be made for certain labor groups; already extra non-rationed foods and consumer goods have been sent to mining areas.

Today manpower is badly distributed—so far out of line that, even with direct control of placements, ideal distribution would be impossible immediately because of housing shortages.

Seek More Labor

While key industries are handicapped for want of labor, distribution, catering, entertainment and other consumer services are attracting more than their share. The country-wide football pools employ thousands of women in the Midlands alone—women who otherwise would be available for the cotton mills and other factories.

More men for the coal mines is priority No. 1. The target is 730,000 by the year-end, an increase of 30,000 which is far from enough but as much as the government thinks can be done in 12 months.

Next come agriculture, seriously undermanned and facing the loss soon of 65,000 German prisoners-of-war; and the textile industries, one of the biggest export groups which has only 1,450,000 workers compared with 1,803,000 in 1939.

Britain's working population, at 18,122,000, is more than 1,000,000 higher than before the war; but requirements also are higher. The armed forces for instance, take 1,000,000 compared with less than half that number. The public service employs 2,130,000 compared with 1,465,000. Raising the school-leaving age this year will keep 160,000 juveniles out of industry.

As demobilization continues this year, the labor force will rise to 18,300,000. Polish ex-servicemen, displaced persons from Europe and part-time employment of women is expected to add another 100,000.

But it will not be enough.

"This need to increase the working population is not temporary," Attlee said. "It is a permanent feature of our national life."

RONALD MAYOR OF LONDON FINES SELF

London, Ont., April 30 (CP)—Mayor Wenige's auto was tagged in a no-parking area near the municipal building yesterday. Shortly after, the Mayor sat as Chief Magistrate with a parking ticket in his hand and fined himself one dollar.

State Attorney Worried About Published Notes

Los Angeles, April 30. (AP)—State Attorney-General Fred N. Howser, admittedly "bewildered", sought today to determine how copies of impassioned love notes exchanged in Orange County jail at Santa Ana by Louise Overell, 19, and George Gollum, 21, had been obtained by a Los Angeles newspaper which published them.

"I don't know what happened," said Howser, in charge of prosecuting Miss Overell and Gollum who await trial May 26 on charges that they murdered her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Overell, aboard their yacht in Newport harbor.

Calling the incident "regrettable," Howser said he planned to "call some of my men on the carpet."

The letters were published by the Los Angeles Examiner yesterday morning, but officials of the newspaper declined to say how they had been obtained or to discuss the matter otherwise.

The fervent love notes had been photographed by jail authorities before they were delivered to the young defendants. Howser told reporters he kept the copies in his office safe.

He declared that last Wednesday he found the safe unlocked but with the copies in it. Today he added, he again found the safe unlocked and the copies missing.

Howser said he relocked the strongbox and went to lunch, and when he returned found the photographic copies had been restored.

The notes were filled with impassioned protestations of love. The Examiner quoted one of Gollum's notes as saying:

"Do you realize that if we are found guilty, I get killed. I don't want to die. I have to live for you, honey, and I am going to live for you and with you."

White's District

White's District—It was with regret that friends of Mrs. W.E. Mercer heard of her sudden death in Perth last week. Mr. Mercer passed away about two weeks ago. Both were well-known in this district, as Mr. Mercer was Pastor on the Bayside Circuit for four years.

Sunbeam Mission Band met at Quinte View school on Friday afternoon with Mrs. C. Rush, the leader, conducting the meeting. The Easter program of the "World Friends" was followed and a very worthwhile hour was spent by the members who in their small way are doing good work as young missionaries.

Y.P.U. MEETING

Miss Jean Dudley and Messrs. Bill and Donald Dudley entertained the Y.P.U. on Friday evening. The president Donald Sandercock opened the meeting followed by prayer by the Rev. A.C. McCallum. Mr. Arnold Ketcheson, as leader, chose as his topic "The Good Samaritan." Mr. F. Meyers gave a reading in this connection and appropriate hymns were sung. Bill Dudley conducted a quiz which was enjoyed by all. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Meyers on the evening of May 9th. Plans were discussed to organize a boys' baseball team for the summer months There was an attendance of twenty members. The hostess served refreshments and a social time was enjoyed by all.

Percival's Fight Inflation

All Merchandise Reduced 15% or More

To fight inflation the Percival Store in Belleville are cutting the prices of their entire stock by 15% with the exception of nationally advertised radios, washing machines and refrigerators, which are price-maintained by the manufacturer. Our opinion is that by stabilizing prices, and, if possible, lowering prices, workingmen will not be on strike continually for higher prices and as a consequence manufacturers' costs will not subsequently have to rise. It is a vicious circle and must be stopped. Many lines are being more drastically cut with reductions as high as 50%. On these pages are some of the more spectacular values. But remember the price of everything is reduced by at least 15%.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30, 1947

TWENTY KILLED, FIFTY INJURED IN U.S. TORNADO

Only Half Dozen Buildings Left Standing in Village of Worth, Missouri

Worth, Mo., April 30—(AP) — Tornado winds whipped through small towns in Arkansas, Missouri and Iowa leaving at least 20 dead today, injuring more than 50 and causing thousands of dollars in property damage.

Hardest hit was this Northwest Missouri town with a population of 233. Thirteen persons were killed and approximately 45 injured. Only half a dozen buildings in the town were left standing.

At least seven persons were killed in Arkansas where vicious winds last night lashed the small community of Bright Water and swept close to Garfield, not far from the Missouri line.

A tornado also struck Clio, a town of about 200 population in southwestern Iowa, causing extensive property damage. No loss of life was reported, however.

The tornado that hit Worth swept through the centre of the town wiping out the entire business district. Two of the town's three churches and its brick schoolhouse were among the buildings demolished. Practically every tree in town was clipped off.

Community in Darkness

The community was in darkness until late last night when a mobile generator arrived. Both the Salvation Army and the Red Cross set up stations and homeless were being cared for in the few remaining residences still standing and in nearby towns.

Mrs. N. A. Combs, 59, a nurse, said she first saw the tornado high in the air.

"It had a long tail," she said. "When it hit the ground there was a swirling dark cloud. The point seemed to broaden and sweep everything before it. There was a terrifying roar."

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Pickering arrived just shortly after the tornado hit and found their two children, Irene and Melvin, and Mrs. Pickering's mother dead in the ruins of their home.

"Everything we had is gone — the children, the home, the livestock, everything," said Pickering.

Fred Jennings died in a queer twist of the tornado.

Sucked Out of Room

Survivors reported he had joined six other persons in a cellar and was standing near the door when a gust of wind sucked him out and tossed him into a telephone line. His body was found 75 feet from the cellar with the wire wrapped tightly around his legs.

Aid was rushed to the stricken areas from surrounding towns and the Rogers, Ark., unit of the National Guard was sent to Bright Water to help search the ruins and guard against possible looting. Bright Water has a population of 100.

Pleasing Budget Plops in Middle Of General Clamor for Reduced Prices

(By The Canadian Press)

Announcement of income tax cuts in the Dominion budget today plopped into the middle of a rising clamor over high prices and reports of scattered efforts by individual Canadian merchants to do something about by voluntarily lowering prices.

Amid sporadic talk of buyers' strikes, especially in western Canada, where some Saskatchewan housewives decided to abstain from buying high-priced commodities, a Canadian Press survey showed one Charlottetown dealer lowering prices as much as 20 per cent. Included in centres where stores reduced prices 10 per cent were: St. Catharines, Kitchener, Ottawa, Guelph, Woodstock and Vancouver.

Some centres reported efforts to still the outcry against the eight-cent chocolate bar, —which until recently sold for six cents, by reducing its price to seven, to six, or even to the pre-war five cents.

Most Merchants Not Happy

But most merchants were not happy about the situation. In Toronto their attitude was summed up my dealers who said they could not sell nationally-advertised goods at reduced prices for fear of being cut off from supply by the manufacturers.

"We pledged to sell nationally-advertised goods at regular prices," one merchant said.

Action swelled the anti-inflationary chorus at Regina, where late last night Regina and Moose Jaw branches of the Saskatchewan Housewives. Consumers League announced they would stage a buyers' strike through the month of May on articles which included chocolate bars, clothing, butter "luxury" fruit, jams and syrups.

At least three Ottawa merchants announced 10 to 20 per cent cuts, two in Woodstock and two in St. Catharines did the same and individual dealers dropped prices in other cities.

Surveys among merchants were underway in some municipalities to determine attitudes to the price decreases, notably North Bay. A resolution requesting Toronto city council to urge issuing of a proclamation calling for a 10 per cent price cut was outvoted. A similar motion was passed by Windsor City council.

Feel New Optimism In Telephone Strike

Washington, April 30 — (AP)— Settlement of telephone strikes in Pennsylvania and New York City led to new optimism today for a quick agreement in the United States-wide phone tieup.

An agreement settling the 24-day strike of 37,000 employees of the New York Bell Telephone Company was announced by J. R. Mandelbaum of the United States conciliation service. Terms of the settlement were not immediately disclosed.

SIR A.E. WRIGHT, BACTERIOLOGIST, DIES AGED 85

Was Credited With Saving More Than 100,000 Lives in First World War

London, April 30 (AP)—Sir Almroth Edward Wright, the introducer of anti-typhoid inoculation, died here today. He was 85 years old.

The famous bacteriologist has been credited with saving more than 100,000 lives of British soldiers in the First World War through his use of typhoid inoculations.

He also did much valuable work in the preparation of other vaccines, such as those for tuberculosis and pneumonia.

Sir Almroth was born in Yorkshire Aug. 10, 1861. He was educated at Dublin University and completed his early scientific and medical studies at the Universities of Leipzig, Strasburg and Marburg.

He was head of the institute of pathology at St. Mary's Hospital in London from 1902 until his retirement last June. His assistant and colleague for many years was Sir Alexander Fleming, the discoverer of penicillin.

Winston Churchill's physician, Lord Moran, described the team of Wright and Fleming in 1940 as "two doctors who have saved more lives in the armies in the field than anyone else in the world." Sir Almroth was consulting physician to the British army in France from 1914 to 1919.

Sir Almroth, son of an Irish father and a Swedish mother, was a man of firm opinions on many subjects. He disapproved of two of Britain's most popular institutions—soccer football and motion pictures. He also was opposed to women in public life. His paper, "the unexpurgated case against woman suffrage," created a furore in 1913.

For 40 years he drew a teaspoonful of blood from his own body every day for experimental purposes.

Teacher Herded Pupils in Cave Against Tornado

By AL DOPKING

Worth, Mo., April 30. (AP)— A 37-year-old schol teacher was the heroine today of this tornado-battered and sorrowing town where almost one quarter of the population was killed or injured by yesterday's devastating winds.

Mrs. Anne Trump was credited with saving the lives of her pupils by herding them into a cave just before the tornado struck ,demolishing the schoolhouse.

Warned that a strong wind was approaching, Mrs. Trump rushed outside with Max Lee Murdock, one of the pupils. They saw a cloud resembling a funnel. Mrs. Trump said it looked "just like pictures we had studied in Science classes".

"I knew we had to find a cave and I tried to recall one nearby.

"I finally thought of one about hal fa block away and I tsarted the children into the cave.

"As soon as I got the children in, I started toward my mother's house. My mother is an invalid and I knew she would need help. I got about a block and I was walking right into the storm."

As Mrs. Trump walked into the storm, she related, she took one quick look back over her shoulder to see if all her pupils were under cover.

Then School Disappears

"When I looked back I saw the school already gone," she related. "I walked a few more yards and took one more look and saw the town disappear. I felt sure my children were safe for I had seen no sign of them a few moments before.

"The terrifying black cloud seemed to engulf me. It loomed like a huge black monster at first, then it seemed to turn yellow and I felt a great suction. . . I at first sought shelter in a house but then a gust of wind began to shake the place like a back-lashing rope. I dashed around the house to the back and was trying to reach the cave when the back porch collapsed. It knocked me down and I crawled farther beneath it for protection, shielding my head with my hands.

"As soon as I felt the gust of wind past, I rushed on home to see what had happened to mother. When I found she was all right I started back to the cave to see about my children. They had climbed out of the cellar and were on the way to my mother's place to see what had happened to me. When I saw them, I knew some power greater than me had saved them."

U.S. Body Asks For Tax Cuts Debt Reduction

By STERLING F. GREEN

Washington, April 30 (AP)— Demands for tax cuts, debt reduction and a more efficient government were voiced today at the 35th annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Three speakers—a banker, an industrialist and a university professor—sounded the theme that continued high taxes will block peacetime prosperity by discouraging business expansion.

The 1948 Federal budget of $37,500,000,000 proposed by President Truman was termed "clearly a budget out of control," asserted W. Randolph Burgess, Vice-Chairman of the Board of the National City Bank of New York.

"The present tax system penalizes extra effort—removes the incentive for going the extra mile," Burgess told the 2,000 Chamber delegation in a prepared address.

A budget of $25,000,000,000 could be achieved for fiscal 1948 if fullest economy were practised, said Fred R. Fairchild, political economist of Harvard University.

King Christian Laid to Rest In Cathedral

Copenhagen, April 30 (AP)— Half a million Danes stood in silent mourning today watching the cortege of beloved King Christian X pass through black-decked streets to his burial place in Roskilde Cathedral.

Two kings, a president and 16 princes followed the royal hearse as the spectacular funeral procession proceeded through the main business streets of Copenhagen along a mile route to the central station.

Black and white banners flew. Crepe decked store fronts. Candelabra burned in ship windows. Thousands of flags flew at half staff.

The King died April 20.

Preceding the hearse were six military detachments, including 100 Royal Marines with a band from the British cruiser, H.M.S. Dido, 26 United States Marines and an escort to the colors representing the French Alpine Chasseurs, of which Christian was an honorary officer.

The King's coffin was covered with the Danish flag. Six black horses drew it. A huge wreath from dowager Queen Alexandrine was on the coffin.

Immediately behind the hearse King Frederik and his brother, Prince Knud, walked side by side.

King Haakon VII of Norway and Prince George of Greece were next. They were followed by about 100 representatives of foreign countries and members of the Danish cabinet.

The King's bier was placed aboard a railway car at the Central Station to be carried to his crypt among his ancestors in historic Roskilde Cathedral.

Last-Minute Taxpayers Storm Revenue Offices

Ottawa, April 30 — (CP)—Long queues of last-minute taxpayers clogged Department of National Revenue offices across Canada today as the deadline for 1946 income tax returns — midnight tonight—neared. They were the last of thousands of citizens who have stormed the offices for weeks seeking forms and information.

It was too late to do anything about it this year, but harried officials at the department's national headquarters here pointed out that the last-minute rush is unnecessary and expensive to the taxpayer himself.

Time and money could be saved, they said, if people attacked their tax forms calmly and in good time and then wrote for any information they needed well before the deadline.

"It's amazing what you can do with these forms if you regard them calmly," they said. "And if you don't wait until the last minute, they're easy."

While championing the right of the taxpayers to talk things over if he insists, they pointed out that a little thought, time and effort would eliminate queues and reduce taxes.

They said the taxpayer overlooks the fact that queues cost money — in staffs to handle them and the building space necessary to accommodate them.

The moral is, the officials say: "If you want to keep taxes down stop doing the things which put taxes up."

JEWELRY, LUXURY TAX REMAINS

Ottawa, April 30 (CP)—The 25-per-cent tax applying to jewelry and other luxury items remains unchanged.

There had been expectations that Finance Minister Abbott in his budget speech last night would announce either reduction or elimination of this year war-induced tax. However, the Finance Minister made no mention of the levy.

$352,144,000 SURPLUS ANNOUNCED IN BUDGET

Amount Greater Than Total Of All Previous Surpluses Since Confederation Year

Money Will be Applied Against Debt of $13 Billions

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Apr. 30 (CP).—Canadian Finance Minister D. C. Abbott announced last night in his budget speech to the House of Commons that the 1946-47 fiscal year ended with an estimated surplus of $352,144,000, an amount greater than the total of all previous surpluses since Confederation.

The surplus—the first since 1930—compared with a deficit of $2,123,043,000 in the 1945-46 fiscal year and will be applied against the country's $13,000,000,000 net debt.

Revenues for 1946-47 were estimated at $2,984,271 and expenditures at $2,632,127,000. The 1945-46 revenues were $3,013,185,000 against expenditures of $5,136,228,000.

Mr. Abbott, stating that all previous surpluses in Canada's history together totalled only $319,000,000, said the new surplus was gratifying but that it should not lead people into false optimism.

He recalled how, when the last budget was brought down last June 27 by his predecessor, Rt. Hon. J. L. Ilsley, now Justice Minister, a deficit of between $260,000,000 and $300,000,000 had been forecast. Revenues had surpassed all expectations and expenditures had been lower than forecast.

Tribute to Economy

"We can take legitimate pride in the fact that in the first fiscal year beginning after VJ-Day we have been able to better than balance our public accounts by a wide margin," said Mr. Abbott. "This large surplus is a tribute primarily to the health and strength of Canada's economy but the government of the day and particularly my predecessor. . . are, I believe, entitled to take credit for the prudent management of the country's financial affairs to which this result bears witness.

"We should not, however, be led into false optimism, nor should we jump to the conclusion that our present tax structure is much more than adequate to meet all our future requirements. There are abnormal aspects of both the revenue and expenditure sides of our accounts which need to be considered before we can obtain anything like a true picture of probable future budgets."

On the revenue side, for instance, there were special receipts of $372,000,000, representing the proceeds of sale of surplus war assets, refunds of previous year's expenditures and other credits of a temporary character. On the expenditures side there were substantial sums of a temporary, abnormal or non-recurring character.

Turning to the outlook for 1947, Mr. Abbott said:

Demand For Production

"The demands for our production this year are so strong that I think we may legitimately make our budget plans in the expectation that our gross national product for this year, 1947, will exceed the estimated total of $11,100,000,000 for 1946 and may amount to something close to $12,000,000,000, calculated at prices somewhat above those prevailing last year.

"Any such forecast in these uncertain and abnormal times is subject to a wide margin of possible error and to many qualifications. In particular, we must expect that the figure will be less than that I have mentioned, if a substantial recession should occur in the United States later this year.

"In terms of basic economic fundamentals Canada's international position is stronger today than at any previous time in our history. We emerged from the war with our productive apparatus not only completely unimpaired but enormously enlarged and strengthened.

"Our working force is larger, more highly skilled, and more fully employed than ever before. Our competitive position in world trade had been greatly improved as a result of our increased efficiency and the degree of control we have been able to exercise over inflationary rises in prices.

Reduce Net Indebtedness

"Since the beginning of the war we have reduced our net international indebtedness by about 35 per cent, and this in spite of supplying huge quantities of goods to our Allies on a gift or mutual aid basis. In 1946 we have a favorable balance in our current transactions with the world as a whole greater than that achieved in any previous year."

Mr. Abbott reviewed the effects of the government trade policies on employment, mentioned that inflationary forces were less powerful than in the past, and made a statement on the negotiations for new taxation agreements with the provinces.

He said the government looked forward to the day when agreement with all or substantially all of the provinces would make possible the achievement of the proposals outlined to the Dominion-Provincial conference in August, 1945.

"These include not only the elimination all across Canada of the evils of duplication and conflict in the fields of direct progressive taxation which have such important economic effects, but also the development of an efficient and flexbile tax system designed to promote the expansion of employment and incomes, as well as a comprehensive program for the co-operation of Dominion and Provincial governments in the field of public investment and social security," he said.

Not Asked To Accept

"Nevertheless, we do not ask any province to accept a tax agreement unless it believes such agreement to be in its own interest as well as that of the country as a whole."

Mr. Abbott said "it is encouraging to find that our present prosperity is largely based upon consumer and business expenditure as well as a high level of exports and can be expected to continue without any special expenditure made by the government for the purpose of sustaining it, whether by incurring deficits or otherwise."

One of the main supports of the current high level of production and income was the policy of extending loans to the United Kingdom and European countries dislocated by the war. It was in Canada's interest to make such loans, but this policy could not be continued indefinitely.

"We in Canada must count on the returns from our exports to pay for our imports and to pay our other bills abroad, including the service of our external debt," said Mr. Abbott.

He mentioned that Canada had a favorable international trade balance of $458,000,000 in 1946 despite an adverse balance of $603,000,000 with the United States.

Because the year ended up with a surplus, it had been possible to meet all requirements for cash, apart from debt redemption, without net new borrowing during the year.

Finance Minister Abbott,
Who presented his first budget to the House of Commons last night.

Expect Surplus Of $190,000,000 In Coming Year

Ottawa, April 30 (CP)—Finance Minister Abbott, telling the Comons that the 1946-47 fiscal year had been concluded with a $352,000,000 surplus, said he expected to complete the current year with a surplus of $190,000,000 if taxation agreements are not reached with Ontario, Quebec and Nova Scotia.

Mr. Abbott, who said the government hoped that agreement with all provinces would be found possible, estimated that his surplus for 1947-48 would be reduced to $80,000,000 if all nine provincial governments entered into taxation agreements.

Revenues for 1947-48 were estimated at $2,290,000,000 and expenditures at $2,100,000,000. These expenditures would provide for payments to only the six provinces which already have negotiated taxation agreements. The 1946-47 revenues were estimated at $2,984,000,000 and expenditures at $2,632,000,000.

Mr. Abbott said the surplus for last year would be applied against the net debt which was $13,069,000,000 at March 31, 1947.

"From some points of view it can be strongly argued that under the prevailing economic conditions we should concentrate upon the maximum reduction of the national debt which of necessity had to be built up to such high proportions during the war," said Mr. Abbott.

Abbott Defends Govt. Action In Adjusting the Dollar To Parity With U.S. Funds

Ottawa, April 30. (CP)—Finance Minister Abbott in his budget speech to the Commons last night, defended the government's action last Summer in adjusting the Canadian dollar to parity with United States funds and thus put at rest recurrent rumors that this step soon was to be reversed.

Mr. Abbott ascribed the current drain on Canada's U.S. dollar reserve to the fact that "in any period in which we are enjoying high levels of production and high consumer incomes Canada imports a great deal from the United States."

He continued:

"This point has a real bearing on the validity of the suggestion which is made in some quarters that it would have been better not to have restored the Canadian dollar to parity last July, and that the way to stop the drain on our U.S. dollar reserves is to reverse that action.

"This argument is based largely on pre-war conditions of unused capacity and limited demand that do not exist today.

"It seems to assume that exchange depreciation would restrict the flow of imports or increase the flow of exports.

Some Not Affected

"A large proportion of our imports from the United States, including, for instance, such necessary products as coal, petroleum and raw cotton, would clearly not be affected at all, and under present conditions of shortages on the supply side and urgent and unsatisfied demands on the other, the effect of our volume of imports of, say, a 10-per-cent change in the cost of most other import items would be very slight indeed.

"After all, the rise in prices in the United States which has occurred since last—July has had no apparent effect on discouraging imports to this country.

"On the export side, too, the change in the exchange rate has had relatively little, if any, effect in reducing the amount of our exports, except possibly to some extent in the case of gold, and, indeed, the change may have actually increased our receipts of foreign exchange in some cases as a result of adjustments in the prices obtained by our exporters.

"Our judgment on this matter has, I think, been confirmed by the action of many other governments.

"The exchange rates which they have selected and maintained indicate fairly clearly their view that under prevailing conditions of widespread shortages, limited supplies and urgent needs, the possibility of a country improving its exchange position by currency depreciation is extremely limited."

FINANCIAL CRITIC OF OPPOSITION VOICES VIEWS

Ottawa, April 30 — (CP) — J. M. Macdonnell, Progressive Conservative financial critic, charged last night in the Commons that Dominion-Provincial relations were "becoming a scandal" and called upon the government to try to get together with all the provinces and to "reconfederate Canada."

It was scandalous, the member for the Ontario constituency of Muskoka-Ontario said, that responsible statesmen with the same background and heritage were not able to sit around a table and thrash out a fiscal solution for Canada.

There was an inclination by the government to place the blame elsewhere but what had actually been happening in the last year was a "topsy-turvy auction with the Federal government as the auctioneer, paying money at the highest rate reached by anybody."

Even then nobody knew what had been decided.

He wondered why the three absentees — Premiers Drew of Ontario, Duplessis of Quebec and Macdonald of Nova Scotia—would not be present if any new conference were convened here. Looking at Prime Minister Mackenzie King, he asked "Could it be the maxim of divide and conquer?"

Urged to Change

He urged the Prime Minister, in all "deference and earnestness," to change his methods, to try to get together with the provinces and reconfederate Canada and to reintroduce the spirit which had moved Canada in the past.

Mr. Macdonnell noted a 'strange habit' in public finance to proclaim as a surplus amounts which really weren't surplus. Mr. Abbott had announced a surplus of $352,000,000 but this actually was exceeded by the $372,000,000 in revenues which came not from regular sources but from special receipts such as war assets profits.

The minister should "not ask us to be too grateful because he takes several hundreds of thousands of dollars more than he needs to run the country. We have drifted into a state of affairs where the government thinks a surplus is a gift it takes from its own pockets."

He regretted that there was no hint of a beginning in dealing with the problems of the gold industry. As for the excess profits tax, due to end at the end of 1947, it was "a pity that it is to be continued in its unintelligible form."

CHANGE ON JULY 1ST

Ottawa, April 30 — (CP) — Finance Minister Abbott announced last night new graduated rates of personal income tax and said on and after July 1 employers will have to make payroll deductions from employees' cheques conform with the new rates.

The payroll deductions are aimed at taking 95 per cent of what a taxpayer should pay in a year.

Fiscal Highlights

Ottawa, April 30. (CP)—Highlights of the fiscal portion of Finance Minister Abbott's budget speech follow:

An estimated surplus of $352,144,000—the first since 1930—reported for the 1946-47 fiscal year, compared with a deficit of $2,123,043,000 in the 1945-46 fiscal year.

Total revenue for year—$2,984,271,000, a decrease of $28,914,000.

Total expenditures for year—$2,632,127,000, a decrease of $2,504,101,000

Estimated net-debt at March 31, 1947—$13,069,000,000.

Probably gross national income this year — "something close" to $12,000,000,000." War peak was $11,750,000,000

Canada looks forward to year of "high production and incomes."

Demand continues to outrun supply in many lines of business, with consumer purchasing continuing to expand.

Inflationary pressures still at work but on reduced scale.

Since beginning of war Dominion's net international indebtedness reduced by about 35 per cent.

Overtime Pay Dealt With in Budget Address

Ottawa, April 30 — (CP) — A labor taxation headache — the snowballing of income tax on overtime pay — may be alleviated through last night's Federal budget.

As nearly as can be estimated, Finance Minister Abbott said in his budget speech, the tax on "marginal" earnings—that is the amount that pushes a worker from one bracket to another — should not exceed 20 per cent on each additional dollar above his regular income. This would apply to about 95 per cent of all taxpayers.

Since the start of high taxation, it has been a complaint of labor that much of its overtime pay has been swallowed up in income tax.

TWO IRAQ NEWSPAPERS SUSPENDED

Baghdad, April 29 — (Reuters) —Two Iraq newspapers — the weekly Alwadi and the daily Saut Alistiqlal — were suspended by the government Sunday for a year. They were said to have published articles "endangering public security and the safety of the state."

Excerpts From Fiscal PortionBudgetSpeech

Ottawa, April 30. (CP)—Following are excerpts from the fiscal portion of Finance Minister Abbott's budget speech:

"Today we have just ended a year in which our accounts show a surplus—a surplus larger than the accumulated total of all the previous surpluses in our history. Today we see a Canada enjoying a degree of prosperity never exceeded in living memory."

"We look forward to a year of high production and incomes. . Our available manpower is almost fully employed, with some surpluses in special areas and trades and equally real shortages in others. Demand continues to outrun supply in many lines of business. Our exports remain at high levels, limited in most cases only by our own ability to supply."

"Consumer purchasing continues to expand and there is as yet little sign in Canada of any widespread unwillingness or inability on the part of consumers to buy what is being offered to them."

"The demand for housing remains so great that the most strenuous efforts to meet it still leave a gap that can be filled only over a period of several years."

"Provincial governments and municipal authorities are making substantial expenditures to meet deferred maintenance and new public projects that were postponed during the war."

"There was a slight reduction in income from the peak level attained in 1945, but an increase in wages and salaries and in the income of individual businesses, reflecting chiefly a substantial increase in the net income of farmers which reached last year levels higher than even those of the war years."

"While there are still some inflationary forces to contend with, they are less powerful than in the past and not such as to interfere with the orderly decontrol of prices and supplies."

"It is encouraging to find that our present prosperity is largely based upon consumer and business expenditure as well as a high level of exports and can be expected to continue without any special expenditure made by the government for the purpose of sustaining it."

"(The) Export Credit program and the loan to Britain are, of course, essentially transitional measures. None of us contemplates a continuing, large-scale program of government lending to finance our exports . . . Creditor countries must be prepared ultimately to accept repayment in goods and services."

"We now have reached the time when Canada may expect to benefit from the new international machinery which has been established during recent years to aid in international monetary and financial affairs."

"In terms of basic economic fundamentals, Canada's international position is stronger today than at any previous time in our history . . . Since the beginning of the war we have reduced our net international indebtedness by about 35 per cent . . ."

Liberal Members Jubilant Over Budget Presented

By R. K. CARNEGIE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 30 (CP)—Liberal members of Parliament last night here were jubilant over the budget brought down by Finance Minister Abbott and some went so far as to agree it would be a good budget on which to call an election, but they prophesied better ones for an appeal to the people next year or in 1949.

"This is just a start," said a member close to the cabinet." "The minister's announcement that a bill would be introduced later this session re-writing the basic income tax law will be popular with business men. However, it will not be passed until next session.

"The government's plans for social security legislation on a broad scale also have to come. I think the government will wait for these before going to the country unless something unexpected happens."

Mr. Abbott was asked if he regarded it as an election budget and with a laugh he declined to take the question seriously.

Critics of the budget, on the other hand, took the view that it was a carefully dressed up document that made people think they were getting more than they really are. They instanced that while the average reduction in income taxes was 29 per cent, it means 14 1-2 per cent on this calendar year's taxes since it does not take effect until July.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King joined in the enthusiastic reception of the budget and a close friend of his in the administration expressed the view that despite his recent illness he would continue his leadership for another year at least.

Imposition At Discretion Of Revenue Dept.

Ottawa, April 30 — (CP)—Non-profit organizations become liable to excise tax, under last night's budget, when they stage events that include professional performers, horse races or motion pictures.

Previously, these organizations were exempt from the tax automatically. Now, its imposition will be at the discretion of revenue department authorities.

Unofficially, it was explained the change is aimed at ensuring that profit-making organizations do not get by under the guise of non-profit bodies, and that in genuine cases the exemption would be granted.

LEGION CHOOSES WINDSOR FOR MEETING

Windsor, Ont., April 30 — (CP) —The 15th Biennial Convention of the Ontario Command of the Canadian Legion will be held here Sept. 21-24, it was announced Tuesday.

It will be the first post-war gathering of the Ontario command and some 1,350 representatives of 450 Legion branches throughout the province will attend.

Finance Minister Makes No New Offers on Tax Agreements In Budget Speech to House

Ottawa, April 30. (CP)—Finance Minister Abbott in his budget speech to the Commons last night referred to tax agreement negotiations with the provinces, but he made no new offers and gave no new details on the progress of the negotiations.

The government, he said, still looked forward to the day when the agreement of all or substantially all provinces would make possible the achievement of the proposals put forward to the Dominion-Provincial Conference which opened in August, 1945, and ended in failure in May, 1946.

When that conference failed the Dominion in its last budget offered new proposals for an agreement under which the provinces would give up the income, corporation and inheritance tax fields in return for fixed annual payments of $200,000,000. This figure was boosted by $25,000,000 last January.

Since then agreements have been negotiated with Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. Agreement still is lacking with Ontario Quebec and Nova Scotia.

Don't Want Duplication

Mr. Abbott said the proposals to the original conference which the government still hoped to carry out when substantial agreement was reached included the elimination of the evils of duplicate taxation.

They also included the "development of an efficient and flexible tax system designed to promote the expansion of employment and incomes, as well as a comprehensive program for the co-operation of Dominion and Provincial governments in the fields of public investment and social security."

"Nevertheless," said Mr. Abbott, "we do not ask any province to accept a tax agreement unless it believes such agreement to be in its own interest as well as that of the country as a whole. We did our best to shape the offer of last June in such a way as to make it possible and satisfactory for any province to remain out of the agreement if it wished to do so, and we would far prefer to have a province remain out indefinitely than to endeavor to persuade it to come in against its own judgment of where its true interests lie.

Inflationary Pressures Still At Work in Canada's Economic Structure Says Mr. Abbott

Ottawa, April 30. (CP)—Inflationary pressures still are at work in Canada's economic structure in this period of post-war prosperity but on a reduced scale, Finance Minister Abbott reported last night in his budget speech to the Commons.

He said the country no longer had the huge war requirements "of our own and other governments exerting a constant and almost irresistible force" on prices and supplies while the upward pressure of costs also was "less strong" and in many cases adjustments already had been made to higher cost levels during the last year.

The first rush of returned servicemen and other consumers to buy whatever was available now was "subsiding" and it could be expected that buyers would become "more selective".

On the other hand, said Mr. Abbott, it must be recognized that export demands for many products remained strong despite exchange difficulties of some of Canada's customers.

The huge expenditures of business on new plant, equipment, buildings and stock in trade now constituted in themselves a "very potent inflationary pressure".

Price levels of other countries, particularly the United States and the United Kingdom, were "substantially higher" than those in Canada and through both exports and imports they exerted a "strong upward thrust" on Canadian prices.

Mr. Abbott summed up:

"On balance, while there are still some inflationary forces to contend with, they are less powerful than in the past and not such as to interfere with the orderly decontrol of prices and supplies."

Nine-Year Boy Sent to Trial On Murder Count

Port Talbot, Wales, April 30 —(AP) — A nine-year-old boy Tuesday was committed for trial on a murder charge in the drowning of a four-year-old playmate, Glyndwr Parfitt.

The name of the accused boy was not made public. Under British law children above the age of eight may be held accountable for crimes, although severe sentences have been imposed rarely on children in the last 100 years.

Crown prosecutor George Robey said the nine-year-old admitted trussing his young companion with shoelaces and throwing him into a mining valley river.

Defence counsel Arthur Davis said the boy's statement to police —"I won't do it again"—was proof that he did not realize what he had done.

out the consent of the affected provinces would be construed as a "direct challenge to the rights of Quebec in the nation," Ivan Sabourin, K.C., leader of the Progressive Conservative Party in Quebec said today.

Speaking to the Toronto Conservative Business Men's Club, Mr. Sabourin said that Confederation was the rampart which Quebec "has been and is constantly defending to offset the centralization methods" of the present Dominion Government.

BOAT ENGINE OUT OF COMMISSION

Redistribution Committee Holds Fiery Meeting

Ottawa, April 30. (CP)— A fiery meeting of the Commons Redistribution Committee Tuesday voted 13 to 5 against giving further consideration to the re-aligning of boundaries of federal electoral seats in Eastern Ontario where Prime Minister Mackenzie King's seat is located.

And another heated session appeared to be shaping up on a plan that might eliminate the Manitoba seat now held by John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader.

With heated tempers paying no heed to party lines, some committee members indicated that they plan to fight against a preliminary Manitoba report which called for uniting Mr. Bracken's Neepawa seat with Portage la Prairies, now held by Col. Miller, a Progressive Conservative.

Manitoba members said after the meeting that adoption of the plan would mean that Mr. Bracken and Mr. Miller would have to decide between them who would run in the newly-created seat.

Members heard Walter Harris (L—Grey Bruce), vice-chairman of the Committee, oppose a suggestion of Hon. C. G. Power (L—Quebec South), that the Ontario sub-committee reconsider the redistribution in Eastern Ontario because of criticism over the fact that Mr. King's seat—Glengarry— was left untouched.

Smallest Riding

Glengarry, about 30 miles south of Ottawa, has a population of 18,000 and is the smallest federal constituency in Ontario from the point of view of population.

Mr. MacNicol, joined Mr. Harris, in opposing the suggestion that the sub-committee reconsider and see if changes could be made in Eastern Ontario. Mr. MacNicol said Glengarry should not be touched, not because it was represented by the Prime Minister, but because it could not be logically united with another constituency.

Glengarry was bounded on the east by Quebec, on the south by the United States. In Glengarry the population was 47 to 49 per cent French-speaking and about 51 per cent were Scotsmen. To the north of the riding was the constituency of Prescott which has practically a solid French-speaking population.

Great Admiration

He had great admiration for French-speaking Canadians and had many friends among them, but felt that until they exceeded the English speaking population in Glengarry the constituency should remain as it is.

Before the committee adjourned it agreed to all changes in Ontario except the one which would eliminate the existing seat of Muskoka-Ontario and attach it to the present riding of Parry Sound. The committee will meet tomorrow to hear a report from the sub-committee which is to review the plan drafted to give two new seats to Northern Ontario.

Under the Redistribution Bill, Ontario's representation will be increased by one to 83, and that of the Commons as a whole from 245 to 255.

Dr. H. Crawford Given Diamond Ring by Friends

Marmora, (Special.)— Representatives of the clergy, business men and villagers paid a surprise visit to the home of Dr. Hamilton Crawford on Monday evening and presented him with a diamond ring on the eve of his departure for Colborne, where with Mrs. Crawford, he will live a retired life. The doctor was also given a piece of statuary, a gift from the villagers to Mrs. Crawford, who left for Colborne about a week ago. A few impromptu remarks were made by Rev. Father H. J. Farrell and Rev. J. M. Brownlie, testifying to the appreciation felt over the doctor's long period of service in the community. The presentation having been made by Thomas R. Warren, one of the older residents of Marmora. Dr. Crawford replied briefly saying that he greatly appreciated the honor accorded him and that he hoped to revisit Marmora frequently. Dr. Crawford came to Marmora about thirty-five years ago as successor to the late Dr. W. G. MacKechnie. He is being succeeded by Dr. W. J. Donevan.

200 Employees Of Oshawa Plant Walk off Job

Oshawa, April 30. (CP)—A joint meeting of the executive of Local 222 of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) and the Union Bargaining Committee at the Oshawa plant of General Motors Corporation tonight decided to communicate to the company today "suggestions" for returning to work the 200 employees of the plant's passenger body section, who walked off the job earlier yesterday in what the union called protest against a company speed-up plan.

The union said the company attempted to introduce a speed-up plan with a suggested reduction in time allowed for the job. "The company refused to give employees any assurance of steady employment before any new men are hired," said a statement issued after the union meeting.

"It was decided to communicate to the company our suggestions for returning these men to work pending negotiations and we feel that if the company co-operates there should be no serious problem in resuming production," said the union statement.

Company officials called the walk-out a violation of contract terms.

Working Wives Get No Relief

Ottawa, April 30 — (CP)—Hundreds of working wives still take it in the neck, so far as income taxes are concerned.

It had been expected — and hoped — that Finance Minister Abbott, in his budget speech to the Commons, would announce a change in next year's provision that taxpayers whose wives earn separate incomes would be taxed as single rates if their spouses earned more than $250 a year. However, Mr. Abbott made no mention of the provision.

The expectation that change would be made was based on widespread criticism of the arrangement and charges that it had led to many wives, including badly-needed nurses, leaving their work.

THREE HOURS AHEAD OF TIME

London, Ont., April 29 —(CP)—A rural family arrived at church here Sunday morning at eight o'clock standard time and found the service scheduled for 11 a.m. standard. They wanted to be in good time—and besides, they'd put their only clock one hour ahead, at midnight.

PERCIVAL'S FIGHT INFLATION!

President Truman Right! Prices Must Come Down!

PERCIVAL'S REDUCE MERCHANDISE 15%

New York, April 21 (AP) — President Truman, cautioning that the economic situation in the United States is "acute," appealed today for a united effort to bring prices down and prevent a depression.

Addressing the annual luncheon of members of the Associated Press, the chief executive said there must be:

1. "Moderation on the part of business."
2. "Forebearance on the part of labor," plus greater productivity.
3. "All-out effort on the part of the farmer."
4. "Wise guidance and action on the part of the government." Here he reiterated his plea against cutting taxes now and called for extension of rent, export and credit controls.

The address was the highlight of Newspaper Convention Week here.

The president praised the services of the American press in wartime. Then he said in his prepared address:

"We are now at a stage in our national economic life when the American press can render similar service."

Truman tied in his proposals for bolstering the economy at home with his program of helping free peoples abroad maintain their freedom.

Although he did not refer by name either to unis or to his plan for aiding Greece and Turkey resist Communism, the president declared, Decision Forced on Them.

"Many of these (Free)) people are confronted with the choice between totalitarianism and democracy. The decision has been forced upon them by the devastation of war which has so impoverished them that they are easy targets for external pressures and alien ideologies."

Comparing conditions now with those of 1929, the peak pre-war year of economic activity, he listed—

A 71 per cent rise in physical volume, distinct from dollar value, of industrial output; a 32 per cent increase in agricultural production;

10,000,000 more employed;

The national income at a rate of $178,000,000,000 as against $83,000,000,000;

Buying Power Rises

And average income, after taxes, up from $654 to $1,000. Converting the 1929 income average into terms of the 1947 dollar, Mr. Truman said the gain in actual buying power still shows a rise from $825 to $1,000.

"But," the president went on, "I must say in all frankness that the economic skies are not entirely clear. One cloud is shadowing our economic future.

To fight inflation, the Percival Store in Belleville are cutting the prices of their entire stock by 15% with the exception of nationally advertised Radios, Washing Machines and Refrigerators, which are price-maintained by the manufacturer. Our opinion is that by stabilizing prices and if possible, lowering price, workingmen will not be on strike continually for higher prices and as a consequence manufacturers' costs will not subsequently have to rise. It is a vicious circle and must be stopped. Many lines are being more drastically cut with reductions as high as 50 per cent. On these pages are some of the more spectacular values. But remember, the price of everything is reduced by at least 15%.

STAMPEDERS EVEN SERIES BEATING ROYALS BY 2-1

By VIC MORRIS Jr.
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, April 30 — (CP) — Coach Jack Arbour's western gentlemen from Calgary turned the tables on Montreal Royals last night by defeating the Eastern Canada hockey champs 2-1 in the second game of the best-of-seven Allan Cup final. Royals won the first 7-3 Saturday night in Toronto.

More than 12,000 Montrealers watched the Royals outskate and outshoot the visitors, but fail to put the puck where it belonged. The red-sweatered Stampeders played cautious hockey, sitting back and letting the Montrealers bring the play to them.

Doug Grant came through with the winning tally at the 14:30 mark of the third period after both teams had counted once in the middle session for a 1-1 stalemate going in to the stretch drive.

Cliff Malone scored the Montreal tally while Bunny Dame sniped the first goal for the Stampeders.

Game Was Rough

The game was rough although only three penalties were handed out. Denny Casavant of Royals was given a misconduct banishment for using profane language for the only Montreal trip to the cooler while Calgary sat out the other two minor infractions.

The Calgarians, content to sit back and rely on their defence strategy, were kept busy halting dangerous Montreal forays but the strong defence duo of Art Michaluk and Art Shoquist prove effective.

Royals yanked Gerry McNeil in the dying minutes of the game, allowing Calgary an empty net to shoot out. But the visitors didn't get a chance to shoot at the goal as the Montrealers swarmed the Calgary net custodian and had the capacity house standing on their feet yelling wildly for the Royals to score.

Third game of the series will be played here tomorrow night.

Lineups:

Calgary—goal, Dertell; defence, Michaluk, Shoquist; centre, Hunter; wings, Brownridge, Grant; subs, Craddock, Dame, Fisher, Cairns, Wilder, Desmarais, French

Montreal—goal, McNeil; defence, Galbraith, Harvey; centre, Barlow; Wings, Riopelle, Curry; subs, Laforce, Campeau, Plamondon, Malone, Casavant, Morin, Logas, Leclerc.

Officials — Ken Holmeshaw, Toronto, and Lorne Linden, Winnipeg.

First period—
No scoring.
No penalties.
Second period—
1. Calgary—Dame (Fisher) 10:01
2. Montreal, Malone (Campeau, Harvey) ... 14:24
Penalties—Casavant (10 minute misconduct)
Third period—
3. Calgary—Grant (Hunter) 14:30
Penalties: Dertell, Michaluk.

Here he is, the Golden Boy of Wrestledom, Mike Sharpe, referred to by most as "The Body", who will tangle with villainous Sandy O'Donnell in the main bout at Memorial Arena on Friday. Both are well over six feet in height and this Battle of the Giants will be one of the mat classics of the season.

London, April 30. (CP)—The date hasn't been set yet, but there's likely to be another March 17 in New York this year. The All-Ireland senior football final has been provisionally fixed for the Big Town.

Decision was reached at a meeting of the Gaelic Athletic Association at Dublin with only five dissenting votes from the 193 delegates.

Very Rev. M. Hamilton of County Clare, moving the motion, said a gate of 80,000 had been promised by the Gaelic Association for a New York final. He added it would be "a great gesture" to send the All—Ireland finalists in this "centenary of the famine which had caused so much large-scale emigration to America from this country."

If the game is arranged in New York one problem might be: who's going to handle those club-swinging Manhattan Irish cops?

Pigeon racing, it seems, has been given the "bird".

Restrictions on railway pigeon traffic in England have caused a rush for air transport for races from France but fanciers were faced with another obstacle in the cross-channel races by the French government which issued regulations affecting liberation of pigeons in that country.

English and French race organizers who have booked planes now aren't certain whether they will be allowed to release the birds at the selected airfields.

Sydney Wooderson, Britain's great miler, hasn't made up his mind yet about the 1948 Olympics to be held in London.

The bespectacled runner, now a London lawyer, says he finds his training time curtailed and it is almost a certainty he will watch the games from the sidelines. He plans to take part only in London Blackheath Harriers club games this year.

Birmingham City players well up with the English football league first division leaders, were "amazed" at official criticism aimed at them by club directors who criticized them publicly in a club program.

Officials weren't pleased with the team's away-from-home games and asked; "Can it be determination that's lacking when we leave Birmingham. . . ? After all, it would be well to remember amidst all the clamor for higher wages, which we don't object to, that one is paid to play 21 away matches as well as 21 at home (during the season) and not just get through them with as little endeavor as possible.

PHALANX STILL HEAD MAN FOR KENTUCKY DERBY

By SID FEDER

Louisville, Ky., April 30 (AP)—All the icing is on the Kentucky Derby cake now, ready to be sliced up Saturday, and it's still Phalanx against Faultless. But most of the gossip today was about one of the Derby's oldest jinxes, and whether Star Reward was the one to laugh off.

As a matter of fact, when Faultless and Star Reward zipped under the wire only heads apart in the Derby trial mile yesterday—after "The Reward" was practically left at the post and came whooping up to second—two of the more firmly established Derby jinxes came bouncing in with them.

These were (A) The one that automobile-body builder Charlie Fisher from Detroit keeps right on trying but can't seem to make that necklace of roses and (B) the one about the winner of the trial never getting around to picking up the marbles in the Derby four days later.

This time it could be different, what with Star Reward running at the first of those hard-luck pieces, and Faultless having a go at the second.

Of course, besides the old jinxes, there's something a lot tougher to handle on a race track, and that's the starch-sizzling Phalanx. He is the head man in this parade. He didn't run yesterday.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

According to the Oshawa scrivener, that city will boast two junior baseball teams this summer. The B'nai B'rith team which went down before our Kiwanis younkers last summer will again be in the swim while the Oshawa Hunt Club will also field a junior entry. The latter will play in the Lakeshore League and Hizzoner Mayor Frank McCallum of Oshawa, a past-prexy of that loop, has generously donated a trophy for annual competition.

• • •

Dashing "Whipper" Billy Watson has lost the world's heavyweight championship wrestling crown, albeit temporarily, according to Phil "The Voice" Lawson, amiable but loquacious manager-trainer of the "Whip." It happened down in St. Lee the other night when a home-town boy, so it is claimed, one by the name of Louis Thesz, you sneeze it to pronounce it correctly, snatched the bauble from the handsome cranium of the Pride of East York.

• • •

But, the man did not do it in the proper manner, according to reports from the home of the Cardinals. It appears that the villain took advantage of the Whip and when the young Canadian champ had his feet all tangled up in the ropes, the old meany from the birthplace of the Blues, neatly if not gaudily pinned the Watsonian scapulas to the home-town mat.

• • •

Now, that may be all right in St. Louis, but then they haven't got an impresario of Pachydermis like our Philip. "The Voice" loudly but firmly protested about the nasty manner in which his boy was dethroned, and, so we are informed, has taken the protest to the master-minds of the National Wrestling Association.

• • •

With softball in the offing and the boys getting the cricks out of their joints preparatory to the opening of the season, the following amendments adopted by the Ontario Amateur Softball Association at its recent convention in St. Catharines may not come amiss. In fact potential aspirants to the unenviable job of umpiring may do well to keep them in mind.

• • •

Here they are in brief:—

"The catcher may move outside of catchers' lines for an intentional walk."

"A pitcher must wear solid black, dark blue or navy blue trousers while in the pitching position and the pitcher's shirt or sweater must be tucked into trousers."

"A professional player may not be reinstated immediately he returns to amateur ranks."

"Teams are restricted to 15 players at one time. A coach and a manager may sign a special certificate and these certificates will be in addition to those of the fifteen players." Note: a manager or coach who is assigned to a special coaching certificate may coach from the baselines. Managers or coaches who do not sign special certificates are still restricted to the bench.

• • •

From now on, the fans will be barred from the players' benches, for a new amendment to the rules states that "No smoking shall be allowed either on the players' benches or on the playing field."

And any minor team which is successful in reaching the semi-finals or finals and which must travel 100 miles one way or more shall be allowed expenses of $50.00.

• • •

And for scoring purposes, outfield flyouts can be added to "Runs Batted In." The present rule that a runner on base, hit by a fair ball is out, was not changed. There is no safety zone in baseball, according to the OASA.

• • •

The National Baseball Congress Baseball Annual is on the news stands, and those interested in the game are advised to get themselves a copy. It is a compact tome, information-packed colorfully illustrated, and carries plenty of informative as well as entertaining dope for the sandlot fan and player. It is equally interesting to either fan, player, or official and is worthy of a place in the library of any red-blooded baseball enthusiast. You can buy it at your favorite news-stand for 50 cents.

• • •

Sandy "Black-Jack O'Donnell, and Mike "The Body" Sharpe, who are slated to mingle torsos here next Friday night at Memorial Arena are well over six feet tall and the bout may well be tabbed the Battle of the Giants. Sandy is, or can be, a nasty roughie toughie, who delights to scatter pieces of the opposition's anatomy to the seven winds, regardless of where they may fall, and then grin about it. Mike "The Body" the gent with the golden bronze skin, and muscles which ripple like gentle waves of the ocean, has had plenty of experience with these self-appointed villians of the ring, so Friday night's encounter should be worth seeing.

• • •

Dick Bishop, who has not been in action here for some time will tangle with the valiant Toar Morgan in the semi-final while "Bulldog" Drummond is back again at his old tricks and will clash with Jim Bennett in the curtain raiser. It's Friday night this week, at 8:45 p.m.

• • •

He was a sad-faced individual and he wore a looke of near despair as he faced the family allowance official.

"I see you have 11 children," the official said.

"Yep," replied the S.F.I. "But no more. If we have any further increase in the family I'll go hang myself."

He got his allowance. The next year he was back again. This time he applied for allowances for 12 children.

The official looked at him. "Twelve, eh? I thought you said last year that if there were any more you would hang yourself?"

"I did," replied the S.F.I. "And I almost did. I tied a rope around my neck, flung the rope over a tree and jumped up on a box. Just as I was about to hurl myself into eternity, a thought came to me. 'Just a minute, Bub,' I said to myself. 'Don't do it.' You might be hanging an innocent man.'"

Sports Roundup

By AL COLLETTI

New York, April 30. (CP)—It is strange to see a manager of a big league baseball team walk out on the diamond in civilian attire especially in Brooklyn. . But quiet-spoken Burt Shotton, the new pilot of the Dodgers, does not believe in donning his ill-fitting uniform during a ball game. At 63 he feels he's too old for that sort of thing. . .Burt prefers to remain at ease in his well-worn sports jacket, bow tie, and wide-brimmed hat.

Although Shotton's dress is a radical departure from the baseball manager's garb he is not in a class by himself. . . The venerable Connie Mack has directed his team from the dugout of the Athletics for many years dressed in street clothes. . . Oldtimers tell scores of tales about Mr. McGillicuddy and one of them goes back to when he was a catcher in the Connecticut State League in the early 1880s. . . They say he appeared behind the plate in peg-leg trouser, high-buttoned shoes, a cutaway coat and wore a derby instead of a catcher's mask.

Baseball Bloomers

When Wilbert Robinson was managing the Dodgers in the '20s, he used to direct things from the coaching lines and in uniform he had the appearance described as an "oddly shaped sausage in baseball bloomers" . . For Robbie weighed all of 300 pounds. . . However, when he became president and manager of the Dodgers following Charley Ebbets' death, Robbie changed to civilian clothes which seemed to be in keeping with his position.

Other Mufti Men

Pictures of George Stallings and his miracle team—the 1914 Boston Braves—show him sporting a flat-topped straw skimmer and a neat fluttering bow tie. . . . Branch Rickey was a uniformed manager with the St. Louis Browns but when he transferred to the Cardinals he found changing his civilian clothes a waste of time. . .Rickey is a bow tie advocate and boasts a hat fashioned after the kind Kenesaw Mountain Landis used to wear—soaking it in coffee overnight and then walloping it with a rug beater.

Hank Greenberg, Pittsburgh — Homered in third inning with one on for only hit in four times at bat to lead Pittsburgh to a 6 - 2 victory over Philadelphia.

Stan Musial, Cardinals — Went hitless in four times at bat, but drew a walk in eighth inning and scored one of St. Louis' runs as Cards bowed to the Giants 7-2.

Jackie Robinson, Dodgers — Drew a walk, was hit by pitcher and went out in other three at bats, but scored twice as Brooklyn defeated Chicago 10-6.

Ted Williams, Red Sox—Reached base once on a walk in four times at bat as Detroit beat Boston 8-3.

PURPLE RAIDERS OF ASSUMPTION LOSE TITLE

Vancouver, April 30 —(CP)— The Montreal Sportsman's trophy and the Canadian Senior Basketball title will go east this year—but only from Victoria to Vancouver.

Vancouver Meralomas, the team that knocked the 1946 champion Victoria Dominoes out of the championship race, made it unanimous last night by disposing of Windsor Assumption College, last year's finalists, as they edged the Purple Raiders 59-51 in the deciding game of the best-of-five finals.

Returning to senior basketball after a 15-year-absence, the 'Lomas were full value for their title in the hard-fought series as they outlasted the visitors in the final tilt after gaining an even split in the first four.

The capacity crowd of 5,000 watched Assumption match the winners point for point until they wilted in the fourth quarter before a Vancouver drive that established their nine-point margin with the first three minutes.

Scoring honors went to Bill Coulthard of the visitors who sparked his teammates to a 69-60 win Friday night. His output for the final game was 22 points, eight better than running mate Freddy Thomas, but they were teh only Raiders to find the range regularly.

'Lomas put the accent on team play with Jack Pomfret their top scorer at 14. Pomfret, who missed the fourth game, was one of the best men on the floor and Coulthard paid rueful tribute to his leech-like checking after the game. Ronny Webber and Sandy Roberston were runners-up offensively for the winners with an even dozen points apiece. Centre Ole Bakken tallied nine to edge Coulthard for top-scoring honors in the series.

Efforts Made To Obtain Blue Bonnets Track

Montreal, April 30. (CP)—W. E. MacDonald, representing the Horsemen's Benevolent Protective Association, has held conferences with Lucien Chartrand, general manager of the Montreal Jockey Club, in an effort to obtain Blue Bonnets race track for a meeting for Ontario horsemen, it was learned here tonight.

A source in touch with the situation said that MacDonald had proposed mihimum purses of $1,200 for the meeting. Track management and horse owners in Toronto have been involved in a dispute over purses, with the result that there has been no decision yet as to whether there will be racing in Toronto this year.

There were no immediate indications whether MacDonald and Chartrand had reached any agreement.

Winnipeg, April 30. (CP)—It's only a 10-minute sport short in a local theatre but it's causing faithful Winnipeg hockey fans to run the gamut of the emotions from pleasure to anguish.

The reason? The hockey scenes are satisfactory to the harshest critic but the commentator makes the error—an unforgiveable one in Winnipeg—of saying Montreal is (a) the greatest hockey centre in the world and (b) the home of hockey.

Winnipeg reactions as recorded by Jack (Winnipeg Free Press) Knight run something like this: "Blank, blank, blank (which for family consumption may be translated as 'shucks') Winnipeg has more hockey players in the National League than any other city in Canada."

The remark moved Knight to do some research and he comes up with this:

Of 100 proven and tried puck-chasers who completed the entire N.H.L. season, 20 were born and raised in Winnipeg and six others first saw the light in other parts of Manitoba. Quebec province has produced 11 players with Montreal providing seven of the number.

Going farther afield, he finds that Saskatoon has six players in the League, Toronto four and the Lakehead District five. Provincially, Ontario follows Manitoba with 25, Saskatchewan has 22, Alberta six.

NORTHERN HALF INTERNATIONAL STAGES OPENERS

(By The Associated Press)

The northern half of the International League, with the exception of Montreal, will stage its 1947 home openers today and banner crowds are expected at Toronto, Buffalo and Rochester.

Montreal was also slated to play its initial game before a home audience but more than two inches of snow fell on the Canadian metropolis yesterday and the Royals postponed their game with Syracuse until Thursday.

The largest crowd of the day, between 15,000 and the 18,500 capacity, is expected to fill Maple Leaf Stadium where Toronto plays host to Baltimore Orioles.

Veteran Luke Hamlin will probably pitch for the Leafs and should he win, he will tie Jess Doyle for the most victories turned in by a Toronto hurler in the club's history, 73. George Hooks or Ray Flanigan may face Hamlin for the Orioles.

In the only game played yesterday Buffalo Bisons defeated the league-leading Syracuse Chiefs 6-3 to snap a five-game losing streak.

Hank Perry yielded 10 hits in winning but got fine support in the field.

GOLF DATES ANNOUNCED

Toronto, April 30. (CP)—The Ontario Golf Association last night announced dates for provincial tournaments this Summer with the Ontario amateur set for the Thornhill Club near Toronto from June 26 to June 28, and the Ontario Open for the St. George's Club, also on Toronto's outskirts, for July 11.

Other Ontario tournaments: Junior Best Ball, Toronto Summit, July 3; Junior Championship Oshawa, Aug. 29. Parent and Child, Toronto Golf Club, Sept. 3; Seniors, Toronto Mississauga, Sept. 19.

Castoffs Get Revenge Over Former Bosses as Cardinals, Red Sox and Chicago Cubs Lose

By JOE REICHLER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Castoffs Johnny Mize, Eddie Lake and Ed Stanky were licking their chops today following "vengeance victories" over their former bosses.

Next to hitting a grand slam home run or pitching a no-run, no-hit game, there is nothing a player enjoys more than to get the vital blow that spells defeat for the team that traded him away.

Mize, the major league's home run leader, who was traded by St. Louis Cardinals to New York Giants back in 1943, hammered a home run with two mates aboard in the third inning at the Polo Grounds yesterday to start the Giants on the road to a 7-2 victory over his former mates. The slugging first baseman has made only eight hits this season, but seven of them have been home runs.

The win snapped a five-game losing streak for the Giants and enabled them to vacate the National League cellar in favor of the world champion Redbirds.

Eddie Lake, the pint-sized Detroit shortstop who was obtained from Boston Red Sox following the '45 season, banged three hits including a triple and scored three runs to help the Tigers defeat his former mates 8-3 in Detroit.

Stanky, the firebrand Dodger second baseman who was shipped to Brooklyn by Chicago Cubs in 1944, highlighted a seven-run inning with a two-run double to aid the Dodgers in a 10-8 victory over the Bruins at Ebbets Field.

Outfielder Hal Peck of Cleveland did his best to beat his former Philadelphia mates by belting a homer and single scoring twice and driving in another run to account for all the Indians' tallies in Cleveland but the Athletics eked out a 4-3 win.

Big Hank Greenberg hammered his third home run for his new Pittsburgh Club, with one aboard to feature a four-run third inning which gave the Pirates a 6-2 victory over the Phillies in Philadelphia.

Bob Elliott helped himself to three hits and scored once as southpaw Warren Spahn blanked Cincinnati Reds 4-0 with four singles in the hub.

Luke Hamlin Likely Choice For the Opener

(By The Canadian Press)

If Ol' Luke (Hot Potato) Hamlin receives the mound chore when Toronto Maple Leafs usher in the International League baseball season at Toronto this afternoon he will have the opportunity to establish at least a couple of records.

The 42-year-old pitcher, rated most likely choice of Manager Elmer Yoter, to face the Baltimore Orioles, has a chance to join Jess Doyle as the winningest pitcher in the history of the Toronto team. Doyle recorded 73 triumphs wearing Leaf livery and Hamlin has only one triumph less.

Swedish tennis officials yesterday named Lennart Bergelin and Torsten Johannson to open Sweden's Davis Cup bid against Czechoslovakia in the first round of European zone play May 2-3.

Rochdale Hornets defeated Workington 2-0 yesterday in the only rugby league game played.

Freddie Mills, Empire light heavyweight champion, knocked out South African —titleholder Nick Wolmarans in the fifth round of a 10-round bout at Johannesburg last night.

England's summer cricket season opens today with the South African team playing Worcestershire at Worcester.

Windfields carried the silks of E. P. Taylor, Toronto industrialist, to a photo triumph in the mile and a furlong featured Distraction Handicap at Jamaica Park, New York yesterday.

Joe Medwick, veteran outfielder, was given his unconditional release yesterday by New York Yankees.

Seventeen-year-old C. A. Harrison made a gallant bid for his fifth win of the current harness meeting at Hollywood Park, Inglewood, Calif., yesterday but failed to overhaul Indian Land, six-year-old pacer and betting favorite.

Wooler

Wooler (Special) —Rev. F.A. and Mrs. Lawson have returned from Toronto where they spent the winter.

Mrs. W. Ashby left on Friday for Long Beach Calif., where she will attend a convention.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Fairman also Mr. and Mrs. E. Liddle, of Belleville, visited Mrs. Ada Boneham on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Vanhorn and children are spending a few days in Kingston with their parents.

Miss Annie Richards of Queensboro was a weekend guest of Mrs. Leland Bryant.

Mrs. S. L. Terrill has returned from Hastings and Napanee where she visited friends for ten days.

Mr. Bill McKee was a patient in the Belleville Hospital for a few days following an operation for appendicitis on Wednesday.

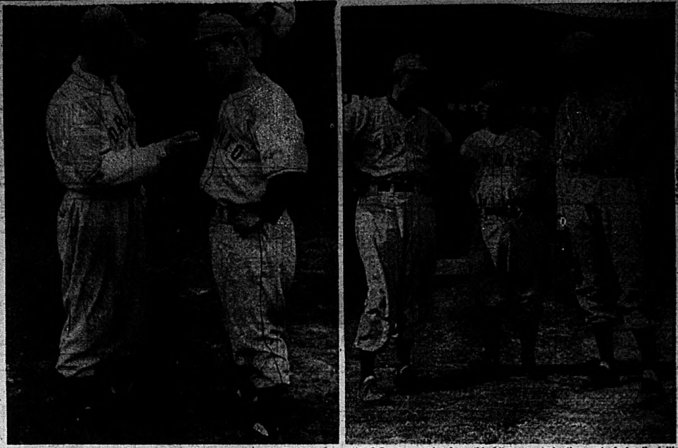
Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith and Mrs. Ada Boneham were guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. Moynes in Belleville on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Bryant and Mr. Milton Bryant were in Queensboro on Saturday.

Miss Pearl Sharpe, Reg. N., of Whitby, spent the weekend at her home here.

The Woman's Association served a banquet to the members of the Frankford Masonic Lodge in the Sunday School Hall of the United Church on Thursday evening.

The young people presented their play "A Ready Made Family" at Wellington on Wednesday evening and at Murvale near Harrowsmith on Friday evening.



BASEBALL TODAY! — Some of the 1947 Leafs, prepping for Toronto's International League opening here this afternoon, took time out during the initial practice session at Maple Leaf Stadium yesterday to have their pictures taken. Two making their debut in Leaf livery, are at left. Only Canadians on the team and both from Toronto, they are 20-year-old Pete Karpuk, right-handed hurler who showed plenty of promise in spring training, and Goody Rosen, 33-year-old veteran down from the big leagues. Karpuk probably won't get into the game today, because either Luke Hamlin or Herman Besse will be the starting heaver. Ole Longpants Luke is at the left of the second shot, with Elmer Yoter, new Leaf mentor, in the centre, and the elongated Besse at the right. Since Elmer is giving Luke the glance, could be he'll start.

Canadian Papers Publish More News of Canada Than Ever Before Says CP Manager

Toronto, April 30 (CP)—Public sentiment is moulded in a considerable degree by the quality of news, F. I. Ker, publisher of the Hamilton Spectator, said in his presidential address to the annual meeting of The Canadian Press here today.

He said: "The Press holds a mirror to the happenings of the day. Unless the mirror is as flawless as it is humanly possible to make it, its reflections will be distorted. When distortion occurs in one newspaper, The Canadian Press and all who print its news may suffer.

"Owing to the waywardness of human nature, there is in all things an inevitable difference between theory and practice. A fact all too commonly overlooked is that any plan or policy, however well conceived, must be put into effect by human beings with many shortcomings and in practice must fall short of perfection in about the same degree as the people by whom and for whom it is applied.

"The plan and basic policies of The Canadian Press leave little to be desired. This may also be said of the other great world news services. Nevertheless, if one may judge by the confusion of public opinion in this country and throughout the world, as reflected in the press, the moulders must, in varying degrees, have departed from the pattern."

Publishing More News

Canadian newspapers are publishing more news of Canada than ever before, Gillis Purcell, general manager, said in his annual report.

The sudden homeward-trend of reader interest at the war's end pressed on and the volume of Canadian news now was 35 per cent greater than in 1939, previous record year.

To provide broad world coverage in the face of increased volume of Canadian news, operation of CP's network of news wires was extended. Emphasis now would be on clarity in writing, interpretative stories and variety.

The report announced the return to Canada of two CP correspondents overseas since their assignment as war correspondents.

Ross Munro, European correspondent, who covered the recent Foreign Ministers' meeting in Moscow, will return to Canada in June to be assigned to Ottawa and Washington.

William Stewart, a war correspondent in Europe and the Far East and at present Australian correspondent, will also return during the year.

The report said CP's membership now stands at 93, four members having been admitted in the last year.

Dock Workers Remain Idle For Third Day

London, April 30, (AP)—London's striking dock workers remained idle for the third day today in the face of Labor Minister Isaacs' angry declaration that their walkout is without "justification."

The Labor ministry, meantime, intervened to try to end a strike of 1,000 City of London employees whose walkout halted garbage collections delayed funerals, snarled city produce markets and closed the Tower of London drawbridge over the Thames, disrupting traffic.

Some 10,000 London dockers were out in sympathy with 3,800 Glasgow dock workers, who quit March 24 because 500 fellow employees were declared "redundant" or surplus and released.

Isaacs, speaking in Commons yesterday, denounced the London strike and proposed a compromise settlement for Glasgow.

The Glasgow dockers' executive council called a meeting for today to consider Isaacs' plan, and London strike leaders said they were waiting for the Glasgow decision. Isaacs' proposed reinstatement of any Glasgow men hired before the war and temporary employment for others while management and labor jointly considered their cases.

Percival's Fight Inflation

All Merchandise Reduced 15% or More

To fight inflation the Percival Store in Belleville are cutting the prices of their entire stock by 15% with the exception of nationally advertised radios, washing machines and refrigerators, which are price-maintained by the manufacturer. Our opinion is that by stabilizing prices, and, if possible, lowering prices, workingmen will not be on strike continually for higher prices and as a consequence manufacturers' costs will not subsequently have to rise. It is a vicious circle and must be stopped. Many lines are being more drastically cut with reductions as high as 50%. On these pages are some of the more spectacular values. But remember the price of everything is reduced by at least 15%.

CHAPTER 4

The expression on Kent Hillyer's face when he saw his ex-wife in the lip stick red dress and emeralds with Curt De Witt at her elbow caused Dru to turn quickly and , look in April's direction.

April saw the surprise on Drusilla Bayne's face. She said under her breath to Curt De Witt:

"Small world! There's my husband—and the woman his engagement to was announced today."

Before Curt could reply Dru had not got her bearings and taken Hill's arm to pull him toward April. She shrieked merrily:

"How jolly! Hello April, darling. How wicked you look!"

Curt touched April's elbow fleetingly, sending a message to her to keep her chin up and see it through. April stiffened, and her chin raised a little higher.

"How do you do, Drusilla," she said forcing a smile with an effort. "Good evening, Hill."

Hill looked as though he wished the earth would open and swallow him and Drusilla clinging to his arm possessively, said noisily for the benefit of the friends who stood waiting developments across the lobby:

"Darling, how sweet meeting you! I did want to see you and know you understood. Of course you've heard we're going to be married!"

There was nothing for April to do but present Curt De Witt. She did so with complete self possession and when Dru realized suddenly that April's escort was millionaire steel company head her eyes widened with surprise. Then she bared her small white teeth in a knowing little smile and said meaningly:

"You sly little fox. How long has this been going on?"

Curt De Witt looked at the too slender heavily jeweled blonde with the chalk make up and scarlet slash of a mouth and said almost contemptuously:

"Mrs. Hillyer and I met through mutual friends coming back on the plane from the west yesterday."

"Drusilla laughed merrily: "How nice, for you both. But I don't believe a word of it." Then to April, "Darling you must join our engagement party! You will of course."

"Thank you," April said stiffly, "but we have made other plans."

"How too bad," Dru still clung possessively to Hill. "Well, you do wish us happiness, don't you darling? —I just couldn't bear feeling we weren't going to be friends. Just because Hill and I happen to love each other so terribly."

April said in a voice that sounded perfectly calm, in spite of the storm going on inside of her: "Of course I hope you'll be very happy."

April had never seen Hill with another woman. It seemed impossible suddenly that the tall handsome man standing beside the notorious Drusilla Bayne was no longer her husband. How proud she had always been of him in his evening clothes when they went to dinner and the theatre. To her Hill always outshone every male in sight.

Suddenly she was seized with an almost sickening jealousy. It was a feeling she had never experienced before. Hill had remained absolutely silent throughout the entire scene, staring out of veiled eyes at the new April with the lip stick red dress and emeralds, and the priceless orchids on her shoulder. Of course they were Curt De Witt's orchids, he told himself. The stuffed shirt!

It was Curt who ended the suspence by bowing to Hill and Drusilla and saying coolly to April:

"Shall we go back to our seats, my dear? It's curtain time."

Dru, who would have given a year's income to snare Curt De Witt into her social circle by getting him into her party said with a slight sniff:

"Well, that was a neat brush off. I guess they just can't wait to be alone."

Hill almost snapped at his new fiance: "I think they handled a delicate situation very nicely. It is time to get back to our seats."

Drusilla stopped, increasing her pressure on Hill's arm:

"Darling," she smiled up at him sweetly, "You'd almost think you were upset. Surely you don't care what April does now, do you? After all it's all over."

Hill said coldly: "I'm not in the least worried about her. April is a lady. She will always be a lady."

Dru's eyes narrowed slightly. "Dearest, you're not falling for that setup about her meeting Curt De Witt on the plane yesterday, are you?"

"I'm quite sure of it," Hill tossed his cigarette away.

Drusilla laughed and patted his arm: "You're sweet," she pursed her lips. "I could kiss you for being so gallant. But I know you don't really believe it. Of course she'd be smart enough not to risk dragging him out in the open until after her divorce."

Dru could feel Hill's resentment as he looked down at her. She realized she had gone too far and said hurriedly:

"Well come along, darling. Let's not quarrel about it. I'm sorry. I shouldn't be so frank, I guess. Come on, let's join the gang. I do love you terribly."

In the theatre Curt reached for April's hand and held it throughout the rest of the performance. His understanding was comforting, and April was very grateful to him for seeing her through a bad moment.

Afterward they had supper and danced on the Silver Moon Roof, and Curt De Witt told April of his boyhood in Pittsburgh and how he grew up and got a job in a steel mill after he finished Pitt University. His climb up the ladder of success to the presidency of Sherlock Steel read like an American fairy tale, and April was so interested she almost forgot for a little while that she had a broken heart.

"I'm afraid," Curt said to her at the door of the apartment in Douglaston, "I'm going to annoy you quite often, my dear. Do you mind?"

She smiled, shaking her head: "Not in the least. You've been a life saver. I'm terribly grateful to you for bothering with me. I'm afraid I'm not very good company right now."

"Let me be the judge of that," Curt said. Then he lifted hes hand and turning it over kissed her palm. "Good night," he said softly. "You're a very sweet child, little April. I'll call you this afternoon."

He hurried down the walk to his car, and April waited to wave to him from the doorway. When she opened the door, Gay sat in a chair in the living room. Gay put her hand to her lips:

"Cherry's asleep on the divan," she said softly. "I just wanted to warn you not to make too much noise."

April said, worried: "What's the matter, is she ill?"

"Just a few too many cocktails" Gay put her arm around April. "Come on, I'll help you peel off that dress. Did you have a good time?"

"Wonderful! The show will be a big hit," April predicted, "and we danced at the Silver Moon afterward. But the high spot of the evening was that during intermission we bumped into Dru and Hill in the lobby."

"Well, that was a coincidence!" Gay laughed. "Tell me more!"

April said with a worried frown:

"I'll tell you all about it later. What about Cherry? Was she terribly tight? —Where had she been?"

"Lola Hitchcock gave a party for her at her hotel. Lola is a successful model now, it seems. And Cherry met a man who has a million dollars and has a friend who backs a shop and will give her a job modeling. Tht's as far as Cherry got before she fell asleep."

April's eyes filled with worry.

"Oh, Gay, what are we going to do with her?" she asked desperately. "She's so stubborn. It won't do any good to try to talk her out of staying in New York."

"I think," Gay said sensibly, "we can do her a lot more good if we just let her stay and get a job—if she can get one. I've changed my mind about sending her back home. There's no sense in worrying about her friends in New York, because you know Cherry will pick out the fastest moving crowd, no matter where she is. You can't live her life for her, darling. Save your breath, and just keep your fingers crossed. She'll get over sewing her wild oats some of these days."

"I guess you're right," April kicked off her pumps. "But I did hope she really loved Pat Hastings and that she'd marry him and settle down."

Gay said thoughtfully: "Do you know, I don't think there is an ounce of real harm in Cherry? She just likes plenty of action. I think she's too smart to get into a situation she can't handle. I wouldn't worry."

"Oh, I never did think she was bad," April defended her sister. "But she's too darn beautiful and appealing to be away from mother, and on her own. I'm afraid she'll meet the wrong man.

April looked up to see Cherry standing, sleepy eyed and tousle headed in the doorway. Even with a hangover she looked beautiful and innocent as a lamb.

"You couldn't be talking about me, darling," Cherry bent and took April into her arms to give her a tight squeeze.

April kissed her flushed cheek and held her closely.

"Hello, Sissie," she said trying to sound gay. "Welcome to our city! I'm so glad you've come to stay with us."

"Thanks, pal," Cherry released her sister to sit on the floor. She said with a little laugh holding her head: "Wow, my —bonnet has bees in it!"

When April did not answer Cherry put her head on her sister's knees and smiled affectionately:

"You're swell April not to bawl me out. I'm a stinker. But I am glad to see you. Don't be afraid of my meeing the wrong man, my love. Iff I do—and he leaves me holding the bag, it'll have so many diamonds in it none of us will have to worry for the rest of our lives. I'm not a sap like you are, my sweet."

Dawn was streaking the sky before April fell asleep, after her session with Cherry. The loneliness not having Hill beside her, was almost unbearable. Often since their separation she had reached out half asleep to touch him, and sat up in bed stricken with terror when the place where he had lain was empty.

It was like a nightmare, and April wondered if she would ever get over the habit of waking bewildered and lonely, yearning so deeply for his strong arms about her, telling her everything was all right as he had done so often when she had a bad dream.

Gay kept the household quiet the next morning, taking Kenny to the kitchen where Hyacinthe dressed him and gave him his breakfast. Cherry left at ten o'clock to see about her job as a model. Except for faint blue circles under her pansy blue eyes, there was no sign of the effects of the cocktail party on her heart shaped little face. She was radiant in a buttercup yellow sheer dress with a large white hat and white accessories. Cherry was born to wear clothes Gay decided, as her tall willowy figure walked gracefully down to the gateway. She didn't doubt the problem child would come home with a job.

It was almost noon when April awakened.

"This is terrible," she looked at the clock with amazament, "I've never slept so late before."

"And you probably never will again," Gay smiled, reminding her that the Hillyer-Lorraine School of Music and Dancing reopened the next morning.

35 - Course Feast For Father Divine And His Bride

Pine Brook, N.J., April 30 — (AP) — Father Divine celebrated his first wedding anniversary with a seven-hour, 35-course feast for the followers of his movement last night.

The Negro religious leader and his richly-dressed 23-year-old white wife, the former Edna Ritchings of Montreal, sat at a huge table flanked by giant pink and white wedding cakes and bouquets of pink rosebuds as waitresses in white satin gowns passed out the food.

Above the couple shone a neon sign with the words, "God's Holy Communion Table of Palace Mission." Song tributes to "The Lamb and His Spotless Bride" came from a choir of 50 young girls, their red, white and blue uniforms showing a large white "V" which a secretary said stood for "virtue and victory over the pleasures of the flesh."

The bald, short evangelist told his followers his marriage was to promote universal love and peace.

"So glad, father," shouted the feasting faithful.

The waitresses and waiters distributed 100 meat dishes, 60 salads, 20 beverages — all non-alcoholic — and dozens of platters of relishes and pickles.
